SYSTEM OF TRANSLITERATION ADOPTED.

A.—For the Dēva-nāgarī alphabet, and others related to it—अ a, आ ā, इ i, ई ī, उ u, ऊ ū, ऋ ṛi, ए e, ऐ ai, ओ o, औ ō, औ au.

Visarga (:) is represented by h, thus क्रमशः kramaśah. Anuswāra (') is represented by m, thus सिंह simh, वंश vamś. In Bengali and some other languages it is pronounced ng, and is then written ng.; thus बंश bangśa. Anunāsika or Chandra-bindu is represented by the sign ~ over the letter nasalized, thus मेँ mē̃.

B.—For the Arabic alphabet, as adapted to Hindūstānī—

ا a , etc.	ج j	د d	ر r	س s	ع ' '
ب b	چ ch	ذ ḍ	ژ ṛ	ش sh	غ gh

ث s				ظ z	گ g
					ل l
					م m ن n when representing anunāsika in Dēva-nāgarī, by ~ over nasalised vowel.
					و w or v ه h
					ی y , etc.

Tanwīn is represented by n, thus فَاوْرَان fauran. Alif-i maqṣūra is represented by ā;—thus, دَاوْا da'wā.

In the Arabic character, a final silent h is not transliterated,—thus بَنْدَة banda. When pronounced, it is written,—thus, گُنَا gunāh.

Vowels when not pronounced at the end of a word, are not written in transliteration. Thus, बान ban, not bana. When not pronounced in the middle of a word or only slightly pronounced in the middle or at the end of a word, they are written in small characters above the line. Thus (Hindī) देखता dēkh'tā, pronounced dēkhtā; (Kāś-mirī) चूह ts'h; कर kar, pronounced kor; (Bihārī) देखथि dēkhath.

C.—Special letters peculiar to special languages will be dealt with under the head of the languages concerned. In the meantime the following more important instances may be noted :—

(a) The ts sound found in Marāṭhī (च), Puṣṭō (ڄ), Kāśmīrī (च्, च्), Tibetan (ཅ), and elsewhere, is represented by ts. So, the aspirate of that sound is represented by tsʰ.

(b) The dz sound found in Marāṭhī (ज), Puṣṭō (ڄ), and Tibetan (ཇ) is represented by dz, and its aspirate by dzʰ.

(c) Kāśmīrī (ञ) is represented by ñ.

(d) Sindhī (ڙ), Western Panjābī (and elsewhere on the N.-W. Frontier) ڙ, and Puṣṭō ڙ or ڙ are represented by ṛ.

(e) The following are letters peculiar to Puṣṭō :—

ڄ t; ڄ ts or dz, according to pronunciation; ڄ d; ڄ ʔ; ڄ zh or g, according to pronunciation; ڄ sh or kh, according to pronunciation; ڄ or ڄ n.

(f) The following are letters peculiar to Sindhī :—

ڄ bb; ڄ bh; ڄ th; ڄ t; ڄ th; ڄ ph; ڄ jj; ڄ jh; ڄ chh;
ڄ ñ; ڄ dh; ڄ d; ڄ dd; ڄ dh; ڄ k; ڄ kh; ڄ gg; ڄ gh;
ڄ n; ڄ n.

D.—Certain sounds, which are not provided for above, occur in transcribing languages which have no alphabet, or in writing phonetically (as distinct from transliterating) languages (such as Bengali) whose spelling does not represent the spoken sounds. The principal of these are the following :—

ā, represents the sound of the a in all.

ă, „ „ „ a in hat.

ě, „ „ „ e in met.

ō, „ „ „ o in hot.

e, „ „ „ é in the French était.

o, „ „ „ o in the first o in promote.

ö, „ „ „ ö in the German schön.

ü, „ „ „ ü in the „ mühe.

th, „ „ „ th in think.

dh, „ „ „ th in this.

The semi-consonants peculiar to the Mundā languages are indicated by an apostrophe. Thus k', t', p', and so on.

E.—When it is necessary to mark an accented syllable, the acute accent is used. Thus in (Khōwār) ássistai, he was, the acute accent shows that the accent falls on the first, and not, as might be expected, on the second syllable.

EASTERN GROUP.

INTRODUCTION.

As its name implies, the Eastern Group of Indo-Aryan vernaculars includes the four Aryan languages which are spoken in the east of India, viz., Assamese, Bengali, Oṛiyā, and Bihārī. The last-named has hitherto been considered as belonging to the Mediate Group, but there can be no doubt that such a classification is erroneous.

Area in which spoken. With a few isolated exceptions, the Aryan vernaculars of Assam, of the Lower Provinces of Bengal, of the Eastern Districts of the North-Western Provinces, and of the extreme east of the Central Provinces, all belong to the Eastern Group. Its western limit may be roughly fixed at the longitude of Tāṇḍā in the Fyzabad district of Oudh, say roughly 83°E., and it covers the rest of Aryan-speaking India as far as the eastern border of Assam, say, 97°E. Between these limits it is also spoken in the Nepal Tarai along the base of the Himalayas, which form its northern boundary, and it extends south to about Jaipur in the Madras district of Vizagapatam, say latitude 19°N., where the (Eastern) Oṛiyā meets, and shades off through the Hal'bi of Bastar (a mixed form of speech) into the (Southern) Marāṭhī spoken in the Central Provinces. On the other side of the Bay of Bengal it is spoken in the Chittagong district, and, southwards, into the district of Akyab where, at about N. lat. 20°, it meets Burmese. It will thus be seen that this group of languages covers, roughly speaking, about fourteen degrees of longitude from east to west, and about nine degrees of latitude from north to south. In this area it is spoken by more than eighty-eight millions of people.

Linguistic Boundaries. This group of languages is bounded on the west by the Mediate Group of Indo-Aryan dialects, which together form the Eastern Hindī language. In the extreme south-west, however, it is bounded by Hal'bi, which is spoken in the State of Bastar and the neighbourhood. Everywhere else it is bounded by non-Aryan dialects. Thus, on the south, it meets the Dravidian Telugu of the north-east of the Madras Presidency, while on the north and east it is bounded by a number of Tibeto-Burman languages spoken in the Himalayas and in the hill country of Assam and northern Burma.

Languages which constitute the group. The languages which constitute the Eastern Group have been enumerated above. Their habitats will be found described with some minuteness in the sections devoted to each. Putting the state of affairs roughly, we may say that Assamese is the language of the Assam valley, in which it is spoken by 1,435,950 people; that Bengali is the language of Bengal proper and of Sylhet and Cachar, in which area it is the vernacular of 41,696,343 people; that Oṛiyā is the language of Orissa and of the neighbouring portions of Madras and of the Central Provinces, the number of its speakers in this tract being 8,952,413; and that Bihārī is the Aryan vernacular of the Provinces of Bihar and Chota Nagpur, and of the Eastern portion of the North-Western Provinces, where Bengali.

it is the language of 36,239,967 people. In Assam, Chota Nagpur, and Orissa these languages are not by any means the only vernaculars of the country. They are rather the tongues of the more civilised settled tracts, the hills being mainly inhabited by aboriginal tribes who speak their own Tibeto-Burman, Dravidian or Muṇḍā dialects.

The total number of speakers of the Eastern Group of Indo-Aryan vernaculars in their own homes is therefore as follows :—

Assamese	1,435,950
Bengali	41,696,343
Oṛiyā	8,952,413
Bihārī	36,239,967
TOTAL										88,324,673

These figures only relate to those who speak the above languages in the areas in which each is a vernacular. As far as Assamese, Bengali, and Oṛiyā are concerned, the Census Report for 1891 gives us the figures for the number of speakers of each in other provinces of India. Unfortunately similar figures are not available for Bihārī, as that language was not separately counted in the Census. We have been able to roughly estimate the Bihārī figures for the Provinces of Bengal and Assam, but no materials are available for other provinces. With this exception, the following is the total number of speakers of languages of the Eastern Group in all parts of India, as shown by the pages of this survey :—

Assamese	1,447,552
Bengali	42,032,329
Oṛiyā	9,042,525
Bihārī	37,180,782
TOTAL										89,703,188

Allowing, therefore, for the speakers of Bihārī in provinces other than Bengal and Assam, we shall be well within the mark if we estimate the total number of speakers of the languages of the Eastern Group of the Indo-Aryan vernaculars as over ninety millions of people.

If we compare these figures with the populations of European countries, we may say that the number of people who speak Assamese is about a quarter of the population of Roumania,¹ that the number of those who speak Bengali is greater than the population of Austria-Hungary,² that the number of those who speak Oṛiyā is equal to more than half the population of Spain,³ while those who speak Bihārī nearly equal the population of France.⁴ As for the ninety millions who speak languages

³ 17,565,632.

of the Eastern Group, we may compare it with the total populations of France and Germany combined,¹ or of France, Italy, Spain, and Greece.²

In stating these areas and these figures, it should be remembered that any such account can only be approximate; for, though for convenience sake we may talk of a language having definite boundaries, such can seldom really be the case. Unless separated by some great natural obstacle, such as a range of mountains, a large river, or a tribe speaking a non-Aryan form of speech, the Aryan languages as a rule merge insensibly into each other. A well-known saying in this country is that the language changes every twenty miles, and such indeed is the fact. A native of India travelling that distance from his home would be sure to have his attention drawn to some expression, some name for a common article of everyday use, or some grammatical form, which was strange to his ears. It would be more correct but less convenient to say that, while the language spoken at Dibrugarh in North-East Assam is extremely different, on the one hand, from that spoken at Tanda in Fyzabad, and, on the other hand, from that spoken in Jaipur in Vizagapatam, each of these three shades off so continuously, yet so imperceptibly into the other two, that it is impossible to say where it begins or ends. At twenty miles from Dibrugarh, the change both to Bihārī and to Oṛiyā has, although imperceptible, already commenced. At three hundred miles, the change is perceptible, but the characteristic signs which distinguish Bihārī from Oṛiyā are not yet manifest. From this point, which roughly corresponds to the western end of the Assam valley, we may discern two lines of progress, one through Northern Bengali into Bihārī, and the other, through Eastern, Central, and South-Western Bengali into Oṛiyā. Oṛiyā itself merges into the Hal'bi dialect of Marāṭhī, this again into Nāgpurī Marāṭhī, that again into Berari Marāṭhī, that again into standard Marāṭhī, and that finally into the Konkani Marāṭhī spoken in the neighbourhood of Goa. To a man of Assam, Konkani would be utterly unintelligible, and yet he might travel from Dibrugarh to Goa without being able to point to a single Indo-Aryan boundary stone between these two widely different languages. An ideal map of the Aryan languages of India would therefore present to the eye a number of colours gradually shading off into each other. It would be possible, but not convenient, to represent the localities in which various languages are spoken by this method. After all, what is wanted is definite information regarding a state of affairs which is essentially indefinite, a want which it is manifestly impossible to supply. It is most nearly supplied by selecting fixed points, where, at each, we are certain that a well-defined language is spoken, and, taking these as the foundations of our hypothesis, by drawing arbitrary lines showing the imaginary boundaries which do not exist, but which give the needed definite impression of the approximate area in which each recognised form of speech is spoken. On this principle, the maps illustrating the relative position of the various languages which form the Eastern Group of Indo-Aryan vernaculars have been drawn up, and they should be accepted subject to the above explanation.

Aryan languages do not merge into non-Aryan languages in this way. A language of one family may occasionally borrow words of grammatical forms from a language of another, and this is all. Sometimes the necessity of intercourse has evolved a kind of 'pigeon' language, a jargon unworthy of the name of dialect, but even in this case its speakers talk their own language amongst their own people.

I have said that natural obstacles may prevent one Aryan language from merging into another. There are some interesting examples of this fact in the Eastern Group. The language of the Chota Nagpur plateau is Bihārī, while that of the district below the plateau, and immediately to its east, Manbhum, is Bengali. Here there is no merging, Bihārī and Bengali live side by side as independent languages. Nay, there are even immigrants from the plateau who have settled in Manbhum, and who still speak Bihārī in the midst of their Bengali-speaking neighbours. So, also, there are Bihārī-speaking immigrants in Singbhum, an Oṛiyā district, who retain their original language as strangers in a strange land. On the other hand, where Bengali and Bihārī meet north of the Ganges in a level plain, with little or no natural barrier between them, the languages so merge into each other that it would be impossible to draw a definite boundary line. A feeble barrier, it is true, does exist in the river Mahananda, and that has some slight influence in separating the two forms of speech.

We have seen that speakers of an Aryan language when living as strangers in a country in which another Aryan language, even a nearly related one, is spoken, retain the use of their ancestral tongue. This is, as might be expected, still more prominently the case where they have settled among an aboriginal population speaking non-Aryan languages, as is the case in Chota Nagpur. This is a peculiarity of Aryan speakers as distinct from the aboriginal tribes. It will be noted in future volumes of this Survey, how willingly an aboriginal tribe allows its own proper language to be corrupted by those of its more civilised Aryan neighbours, and how, in some cases, it has even abandoned its own language altogether, and has adopted in its stead one whose speakers claim, and are allowed, all the prestige that attaches in India to the caste-system. There are even instances in which an aboriginal tribe has abandoned its language for that of another non-Aryan family.¹

The earliest specimens of the Aryan vernaculars with which we are acquainted are the older hymns of the Ṛig-vēda. These hymns probably represent the condition of the language spoken in North-Western Hindōstān at the time that they were composed, yet even they show several signs of dialectic differences. As a literary language, the form of speech preserved by them gradually developed into what is known as classical Sanskrit. On the other hand, as a group of cognate vernaculars, it took a different course in the mouths of the people, and branched out into different streams of living tongues as the Aryans spread and gradually advanced down the Gangetic valley.

The next stage at which we find these speeches is in the time of the celebrated

Aśoka, king of the city now called Patna, whose proclamations in the vernacular of his time date from about 250 B.C., and were scattered over the north of India, and even as far south as Mysore. These proclamations still exist, and the language in which they are couched is readily divided, according to the localities in which the inscriptions have been found, into an eastern and a western dialect. This language is commonly called Pāli, and represents the same stage of development as that form of speech in which the Buddhist scriptures have been recorded.

Five centuries later we find the Aryan vernacular of India still further developed. It is now called the 'Prākṛit' or 'natural' language, as opposed to the artificial Sanskrit. We find specimens of it in the dramatic compositions of the time, in poetical works, in contemporary inscriptions, and in the literature of the Jains. It thus attracted the attention of native scholars and several contemporary grammars were written which dealt with its peculiarities. Taking the state of affairs thus reported as existing in about the eleventh century A.D., we find that the main division of the then Aryan vernaculars of India coincided with that which we have observed as existing in the time of Aśoka, but that the process of fission had proceeded much further. A large number of dialects existed covering the whole of Northern and Central India, which, if we exclude the languages of the extreme North-West, naturally grouped themselves into two main collections, an Eastern and a Western. If we confine ourselves to the valleys of the Jamna and of the Ganges, we find two principal languages spoken, one, Śaurasēnī, with its head-quarters in the Dōāb, which belonged to the Western, and another, called Māgadhi, with its head-quarters in the country round the modern Patna, which belonged to the Eastern Group. These two languages met and merged into each other in Oudh and the country across the Ganges to its south, and formed a dialect partaking partly of the nature of Śaurasēnī and partly of the nature of Māgadhi, which was known as Ardha-Māgadhi or 'Half-Māgadhi.' Of these three languages, Śaurasēnī became the parent of Braj Bhāshā and its connected dialects, including standard Hindī; Ardha-Māgadhi of the dialects which are now known as Awadhī, Baghēli, and Chhattīsgarhī, and which I have grouped together under the name of Eastern Hindī; and Māgadhi of all the languages of the Eastern Group of Indo-Aryan vernaculars. Just as the Eastern vernacular of Aśoka's time branched out into a number of dialects, of which Māgadhi was the principal one, so Māgadhi, in the course of centuries has, in its turn, developed into four separate languages, of which Bengali and Bihārī are the principal. Indeed this process of fission had already commenced during Prakrit times, for the latest indigenous grammarians of that language mention amongst the varieties of Māgadhi, a Gauḍī, a Dhakkī, and an Utkalī or Ōḍrī. Bihārī is the direct descendant of Māgadhi and is spoken in its original home. Gauḍī is the parent of the Bengali of Northern Bengal and of Assamese. Spreading to the south-east, Māgadhi developed into the Bengali of the Gangetic Delta, and still further towards the rising sun, Dhakkī (or the Māgadhi of Dacca) became the modern Eastern Bengali. Ōṛiyā is the representative of the ancient Utkalī.

It now remains to consider the characteristics of the Eastern Group of Indo-Aryan vernaculars, which differentiate them from languages of other groups, and in which they agree amongst themselves. In classifying languages, grammar rather than vocabulary must be taken as the test, and,

Distinguishing characteristics of the Eastern Group.

applying this test, it will be seen that these characteristic points are numerous and important. Attention will also be drawn to the fact that in many cases Marāṭhī, the Southern Indo-Aryan language, agrees with the Eastern languages as against those of the West.

Taking first the phonetic system of the group, we find that the pronunciation of the commonest vowel in all the languages, the letter a, is much broader than in the west. In Assamese it has even the sound of Phonetic system.

o in 'glory,' in Bengali and Oṛiyā it has commonly the sound of o in 'hot,' and sometimes the sound of o in 'hope,' and in Bihārī, the most western dialect of the group it is flatter, but has not yet achieved the western sound of u in 'nut.' Indeed, we may say that in this group the vowel has, generally speaking, two sounds, a short and a long one, the short being based on the sound of the o in 'hot,' and the second on the sound of the a in 'all.' It represents a true pair of short and long vowels strange to the western languages, of which the short sound is heard in its greatest purity in Bengali, and the long one in Bihārī.¹ In an exactly similar way the long ā has developed in the Eastern Group into a pair of short and long vowels, the first approaching the sound of the a in 'man,' and the second that of the a in 'father.' Of these only the latter occurs, so far as my observation extends, in the language of the west.² The vowels e and o have also each developed into a short and a long pair. This is also the case in Western dialects, but is far more common in, and is a most prominent feature of the Eastern group. The short e is pronounced like the e in 'met,' and the short o like the first o in 'promote.'³

As regards the consonants,—(1) the languages of the Eastern group show a marked preference for the letters r and rh over the cerebral ṛ and ṛh. Even when one of the latter pair of letters is written, it is often pronounced merely as a dental. So also, except in Oṛiyā, which is influenced by the Dravidian languages of Southern India, a cerebral ṇ is always pronounced in the Eastern Group as if it were a dental n. In Assamese and Eastern Bengali this dislike to cerebral sounds is carried to an extreme, and every letter of that class is commonly pronounced as if it were a dental. On the other hand, as we go west, the tendency to emphasise the character of the cerebral letters is more and more marked, and the burr of the cerebral ṇ of Panjābī is one of the most characteristic peculiarities of that language. (2) Bengali and Assamese show great uncertainty in the pronunciation of the palatal letters. The further east we go the greater is the tendency to pronounce a ch as if it were ts or s, a chh as if it were s, and a j as if it were z. The same peculiarity is observable in Marāṭhī. (3) The Eastern languages cannot tolerate an initial y or w, while one or other is often added euphonicly in the Western languages. Thus, while Bihārī has ī, this, ū, that, Hindī has yah and wah. (4) One of the most typical peculiarities of the Māgadhī Prakrit was that it pronounced an s something like the English sh. Exactly the same pronunciation prevails in Bengali at the present day. In Assamese the sound has been further weakened to almost the sound of the ch in 'loch.' On the other hand, Bihārī and Oṛiyā follow the western custom of pronouncing an sh as if it were s. This pronunciation of s as sh is almost the only circumstance in which the modern eastern languages do not all agree in following the custom of the ancient Māgadhī.

² Compare the Bihārī mār'lanh', he beat, in which the first ā is pronounced almost like the a in the English word 'Harry.'

Turning now to inflexion, it may be broadly stated that all the languages of the Eastern Group (and also Marāṭhī) show a greater tendency to inflexional synthesis than do those of the Western. Most of the inflexional procedure of the Western languages is carried out by the addition of separate words, which are still separate words even when added to the main base. For instance 'a house' is ghar. If, in Hindī, we wish to say 'of a house,' we must add the separate word kā, and, if we wish to say 'in a house,' we must add the separate word mē, thus, ghar-kā, ghar-mē. In other words, the language is, so far as this part of its grammar is concerned, in the analytic stage. On the other hand, these ideas in the Eastern Group are not conveyed by the addition of separate words but by true inflexion. Thus, Bengali gharēr, Assamese gharar, Oṛiyā gharara, Bihārī gharak, of a house; Bengali, Assamese, Oṛiyā, and Bihārī, (cf. the Marāṭhī gharē) gharē, in a house. In other words the language is, so far as this part of its grammar is concerned, in the synthetic stage. Again, in Hindī, 'I went' is mai chālā. It is necessary to state the pronoun, or we shall not know who has gone. On the other hand, for the same idea, Bengali has chalilām, Assamese salilō, Oṛiyā chalili, and Bihārī chal'lahū (cf. Marāṭhī tsāl'lō), in all of which the meaning of the first personal pronoun is as much included as in the Latin ivi. These words mean only 'I went.' They cannot mean 'you went' or 'he went.'

Descending to details, we shall commence with declension, or the inflexion of nouns and pronouns. As a broad rule we may say that every Indo-Aryan noun or pronoun has a direct and an oblique form in each number. The two forms are, it is true, often identical, but each exists, and each has all the same its separate origin. The identity of appearance, when it occurs, is only accidental. Thus, in Hindī, the word for 'horse' has its direct form ghōṛā, and its oblique form ghōṛē. Similarly the word for 'house' has its direct form ghar, and its oblique form also ghar, similar in appearance, but different in its origin. The former is derived from the Vedic word grihah, a house, and the second from the Vedic word grihasya, of a house. Words like ghōṛā, which thus end in ā in Hindī, and have an oblique form in ē, are called strong forms of a-bases, while words like ghar (properly ghara) which in Hindī are pronounced as if they ended in a consonant, are weak forms of a-bases. It may be stated, roughly speaking, that in languages of the Western Group strong forms of a-bases are the only nouns whose oblique forms differ from their direct forms. In the Eastern Group, many weak forms of a-bases have also oblique forms differing from the direct ones. Thus, in Bihārī, pahar, direct form, means 'a guard,' and its oblique form is pahārā. In the Eastern Group, the direct strong form of a-bases always ends in ā, but in the Western Group, it usually ends in au or ō. The only exception is Panjābī, in which it ends in ā, which form has been borrowed from that language by literary Hindī. Thus, the word for 'horse' in the Eastern Group is everywhere ghōṛā, but in the Western Group we have true Hindī ghōṛau, Gujarātī ghōṛō, and Panjābī, with its imitator literary Hindī, ghōṛā or ghōṛā. Here again Marāṭhī follows the Eastern Group. In the Eastern Group the oblique form of all strong a-bases, and of all weak a-bases whose oblique form differs from the direct, always ends in ā. But in the Western Group, except in Gujarātī and Rājasthānī, in the case of strong bases only it ends in ē. Thus, the oblique form of 'horse' is throughout the Eastern Group ghōṛā, but in Hindī it is ghōṛē. Only in Gujarātī and Rājasthānī is it ghōṛā. As for weak forms, both forms are the same throughout in the Western Group, but in the Eastern we have Bihārī pal^arā, already mentioned, and mār^abā-k, for striking, Bengali māribā-r, of striking, Oṛiyā māribā-ra, of striking, and Assamese māribā-r, of striking. In the last example, the final vowel of the base is the same, but has been shortened. The direct form of all these is either mārib or mārab. Similarly, the oblique form of the Marāṭhī bāp, a father, which is a weak a-base, is bāpā. Turning now to the formation of cases, we see many points characteristic of the Eastern Group. The sign for the Dative case in Bengali, Assamese, and Bihārī is kē. The only Western sign which at all approaches this is the Hindī kō. In the Eastern Group the typical letter of the Genitive case is r, as in the Assamese ghōṛār, the Bengali ghōṛār, the Oṛiyā ghōṛāra, and the Bihārī, ghōṛā-kēr. This is rare in the declension of substantives of the Western Group, though we meet it in some of the pronouns. I have already drawn attention to the synthetic manner in which some of the Eastern cases are formed.

Finally there is one important point that the case of the Agent, which in languages of the Western Group is used before the Past Tenses of Transitive Verb, is altogether wanting in the languages of the Eastern Group.

Turning now to pronouns, we note first that the singular possessive pronoun in the East has ō for its medial vowel, but that in the West it has ē or ā. Thus, in Assamese, Bengali, and Bihārī 'my' is mōr, and in Oṛiyā it is mōra, but in Hindī it is mērā, and in Gujarātī it is mārō. Again the relative and its connected pronouns end in ē in the East, but usually in ō in the West. Thus, Bihārī jē, Hindī jō, who. There are several other differences of the same character.

It is in the conjugation of verbs that the languages of the Eastern Group show the most salient characteristics.

They have several forms of the Verb Substantive, some of which are common to all Indian languages, some of which are rare in the Western Group, and one, the Bengali baṭē and Bihārī bāṭē, he is, which does not occur in it.

One peculiarity of the Eastern Group, which it shares with Marāṭhī, is what is known as the l-past. In all these languages, the characteristic letter of the past tense is l, which only appears, and then but rarely, in one language, Gujarātī, of the Western Group. As this tense is of very frequent occurrence, it gives a distinctive colour to the Eastern forms of speech, which is at once recognised by the most inattentive hearer. Thus, for 'he struck,' we have Assamese mārilē, Bengali māriḷa, Oṛiyā mārilā, Bihārī mār^alak, and Marāṭhī mārilē; but Hindī mārā, Rājasthānī and Gujarātī māryō, and Panjābī māriā.

Another very prominent characteristic of the Eastern Group is the b-future. This it does not share with Marāṭhī. Thus, for 'thou wilt strike'¹ we have Assamese and Bengali māribi, Oṛiyā māribu, Bihārī mār^abē; but Hindī mārēgā or mārihai, Rājasthānī mār^asī or mār^ahī, Gujarātī mār^aśē, Panjābī mārēgā.

These are the principal characteristics of the Eastern Verb. There are others less important, but the above are sufficient to show how entirely different its conjugation is from that of the west.

¹ The second person is used for the examples, as the third person presents some irregularities which might mislead.

In syntax there is one most important difference between the Eastern and the Western Groups. In the latter the Past Tenses of Transitive Verbs are construed passively. They do not say 'I struck him' but 'he was struck by me,' mai-nē wah mārā. In the former this is not the case. The active construction is used throughout, as in the Bengali ami tāhā-kē mārīlām, I struck him.

The alphabets used by the Eastern Group of languages follow geographical rather than linguistic lines. Thus, while the so-called Bengali alphabet is that usually adopted for writing Bengali and Assamese, a corrupt form of the Khmēr alphabet is used for writing Bengali on the borders of Burma and the Kaithī for writing the same language on the borders of Bihar. For Bihārī, the usual alphabets are the Dēva-nāgarī and the Kaithī, but the Oṛiyā alphabet is used for the forms of Bihārī spoken in Orissa. For Oṛiyā the usual alphabet is the Oṛiyā one, but in north Orissa, it is the Bengali, and on the borders of the Marāṭhī and Eastern-Hindī-speaking countries it is the Dēva-nāgarī. Full particulars of these alphabets will be found in the proper places. Suffice it to say here that they are all related to and based on the same system as the well-known Dēva-nāgarī form of script. The only prominent irregularity is shown in the Chākmā alphabet used for Bengali on the Burmese frontier, in which the inherent vowel in each consonant is not a but ā.

BENGALI OR BAṄGA-BHĀSHĀ.

This is the language of Lower Bengal, or the region of the Gangetic Delta and of the districts immediately above it and to its east.

It is called by those who speak it Bānlā or Baṅga-bhāshā,—the language of Baṅga or Vaṅga. The former is the colloquial title, while the latter is the name found in literature. In Sanskrit, the word 'Vaṅga' meant Eastern and Central Bengal, but in modern times it is applied to the whole country in which the Bengali language is spoken. The word 'Bengali' is an English one, framed on the English word 'Bengal,' which may have been learned in Southern India,¹ where the word Vaṅgālam occurs in an inscription of the great Tanjore temple, dating from the 11th century A.D. From this word arose the word Baṅālā of the Arabic Geographers.² From Arabic, it got into Persian, and we find Abū-l-faḥl saying in the Ain-i Akbarī, 'the real name of Baṅālā is Baṅ.'³ From Persian, the word Baṅālā was adopted into Hindūstānī, and was used by Muhammadan writers in that language. So far as my reading goes it was not used by any of the classical Hindū writers, who still adhered to the proper name of the country,—Baṅg. From Baṅālā, Hindūstānī writers formed the hybrid word bāṅgālī and also the contracted word bāṅglā, both meaning 'of or belonging to Bengal,' 'Bengali.' The latter word has entered into English in the word 'bungalow,' which means a house after the Bengal fashion. 'Bāṅgālī' has been borrowed by some English writers, under a mistaken idea of correct spelling, and has been used instead of the English word Bengali, which is much as if an Englishman were to borrow the French word 'Allemagne,' when he wanted to say 'Germany.'⁴ As this is a work in the English language, I shall throughout use the English word 'Bengali' when referring to the form of speech now under consideration. For the reasons above stated, I shall avoid the form 'Bāṅgālī,' or, as some write it, 'Bēṅgālī,' with a diacritical accent on the second syllable. The sole advantage of the latter form is that it prevents ignorant English people from pronouncing the word as if it was 'Bēṅgālee,' with the second syllable short, and accents on the first and last syllables. The class of people who use this pronunciation are not likely to trouble themselves with the results of this Survey. In titles and headings, I shall give, as an alternative name, the word 'Baṅga-bhāshā,' which, as stated above, is the name given in literary works to the language by the people who speak it.

² In Elliot's History of India as told by its own Historians, I, 72, the Arabic Historian Rashīda-d-dīn, quoting from Al Birunī (circ. 1000 A.D.), is shown as speaking of 'Baṅālā,' but the reading is very doubtful. There are, however, other examples.

The area in which Bengali is spoken may be roughly stated to coincide with the Province of Lower Bengal, as distinct from Chota Nagpur, Bihār, and Orissa. The language also extends on the West into Chota Nagpur, being spoken in the eastern portions of that Division, below the plateau of Hazaribagh and Lohardaga. On the East it extends into the Assam Valley, where it gradually merges into the cognate Assamese language. It also occupies the Assam Districts of Sylhet and Cachar, which formerly were counted as a portion of Lower Bengal, and which in ancient times formed part of the original kingdom of Baṅga or Vaṅga. Here its further progress is stopped in all three directions by the languages of the wild tribes of the Hill tracts of the Assam Province. It stretches down the East littoral of the Bay of Bengal into Northern Burmah, its way eastwards being similarly barred by the Hill tribes of Arakan. To the South, it meets the Burmese language in the District of Akyab. It reaches to the sea-coast along the North of the Bay of Bengal. From the mouth of the River Hooghly its southern boundary extends in a north-westerly direction across the centre of the District of Midnapore and then curves south again so as to include the Dhalbhum portion of the District of Singhbhum, running along the northern frontier of the hilly Native State of Mayūrbhanja (Mohurbhunj), till it meets its own western boundary. South of Singhbhum, in the north of the Native States of Keōnjhar and Mayūrbhanja there are large numbers of speakers of Bengali, principally of the Kuṛmī caste; but these are immigrants from the north and north-east, and the true language of these states is Oṛiyā. Its extreme south-western boundary cannot be defined exactly, as it here shades off gradually into the cognate language of Orissa, and in the boundary tract it is often difficult, or impossible, to say whether a man is speaking dialectic Bengali, or dialectic Oṛiyā.

Its western boundary runs through the District of Singhbhum, and includes the whole of the District of Manbhum. It then meets the hill country of the Santal Parganas in which languages belonging to the alien Muṇḍā family are spoken, and is forced in a north-easterly direction up to the River Ganges which it crosses near Rājmahāl. Thence it runs nearly due north, following closely the course of the Mahānandā (Mahanadi of the maps) River, through the Districts of Malda and Purnea, up to the Nepal frontier. Except where it meets the unrelated Muṇḍā tongues of the Santal Parganas (with which it shows no signs of mixing), the language merges gradually into the neighbouring Bihārī spoken in Bihār and Chota Nagpur, but its manner of doing so is different north and south of the River Ganges. North of the Ganges, in the Districts of Malda and Purnea, there is an intermediate dialect, partly Bengali and partly Bihārī, but with its grammatical construction mainly based on the stronger and more cultivated language of Bengal. On the other hand, on the borderland in Manbhum and Singhbhum, a large proportion of the uneducated classes (again principally Kuṛmīs) is bi-lingual, speaking by preference a corrupt form of the Bihārī of Chota Nagpur, but also able to use the western dialect of Bengali. Here, the country is a meeting place of nationalities. It is peopled partly from the east, Bengal, and partly from the west, Chota Nagpur, and the languages of each nationality mix but do not unite. A somewhat similar state of affairs, but to a less marked degree, exists north of the Ganges, in Malda, but, as a general statement, we may borrow a metaphor from another science, and say that, north of the Ganges, there is a chemical combination of the two languages, while, south of it, there is a mechanical mixture.

The lower ranges of the Himalayas form the northern boundary of Bengali. They are inhabited by wild tribes speaking various Tibeto-Burman languages. The line runs along the north of the Tarai in the Districts of Darjeeling and Jalpaiguri, till it meets the eastern boundary in the north of the District of Goalpara in Assam.

Both in regard to its measure of cultivation, and to the number of people who speak it, Bengali is the most important of the four languages, Place of the language in connexion with the other Indo-Aryan languages. Assamese, Bengali, Oṛiyā and Bibārī, which form the Eastern group of the Indo-Aryan family. Like other members of the group, and like Marāṭhī, it is more structurally developed than the languages of Hindūstān Proper. The latter decline their nouns with the aid of postpositions, much as in English we perform the same function with the aid of prepositions. They freely use participles in the conjugation of verbs, and use the passive construction in conjugating the past tenses of those which are transitive. They do not say, 'I killed him,' but 'he was killed by me.' In Bengali, all this is in process of disappearing. The postpositions have been worn away by centuries of attrition, and have become simple terminations. The use of the participles in the conjugation of verbs has been similarly disguised by the addition of personal suffixes, which, a comparatively few generations ago, were separate pronouns used with the participles as in English at the present day. Although philologists tell us that the passive construction of the past tenses of transitive verbs still exists in the language, all sense of this has been lost in the literary language taught in grammars, and the verb is conjugated, according to English ideas, as straightforwardly as any in Latin or Italian.¹ The details of Bengali grammar will be given subsequently. I shall only mention here one more important peculiarity which the language shares with the others of the Eastern group. Bengali grammar has a very feeble sense of the distinction of number. In the case of Nouns, the distinction is hardly observed at all, except in the case of those referring to human beings; at most a kind of plural being formed by the addition of some noun of multitude. Thus, if a Bengali wishes to say 'dogs,' he must say, 'dog-collection,' or some such phrase.² In Pronouns, the singular of the first and second persons is not used in the literary language, except in expressing familiarity or contempt. In the third person, the singular pronoun is only used when respect is not intended, or when referring to an inanimate object. In all, the plural form is commonly used instead of the singular when referring to human beings. In the third person, when respect is intended, it is intimated either by the use of a special word, or by simply nasalising the pronunciation of the pronoun. The plural being used for the singular, if it is necessary to emphasize the idea of multitude, the original plural is treated as if it was a singular noun, and a kind of plural of a plural is formed on this basis.¹ In the case of Verbs, all sense of number is lost. The original first and second persons singular, are now only used in the literary language in speaking in contempt. The plural is now used for both numbers, though the original third person singular is employed when the subject (singular or plural) is inanimate or spoken of without respect.

² The Nominative plural in rā used with nouns expressing human beings is the only exception to this statement and, philologically speaking, it is hardly an exception.

The above remarks apply fully only to the literary language. In the dialects used by the uneducated, the singular forms of the pronouns and verbs are still used, and will frequently be met in the following specimens.

Literary Bengali, as now known, is the product of the present century. Its direct cultivators were Calcutta Paṇḍits, who, however well-meaning, have ruined the language by their learning. In connexion with this point, I cannot do better than quote Mr. Baines, who admirably sums up the state of affairs in the General Report on the Census of India for 1891.² He says :—

‘ Bengali has no doubt been unfortunate in the circumstances that have attended its development. The latest of all the Prakrit offshoots to be recognised as a language at all, it dates in that capacity only from the decay of the Delhi Empire. Bengal, too, is the Province of all others in which there is the widest gap between the small literary castes and the masses of the people. One of the results is that the vernacular has been split into two sections : first, the tongue of the people at large, which, as remarked above, changes every few miles ; secondly, the literary dialect, known only through the press, and not intelligible to those who do not also know Sanskrit. The latter form is the product of what may be called the revival of learning in Eastern India, consequent upon the settlement of the British on the Hooghly. The vernacular was then found rude and meagre, owing to the absence of scholarship and the general neglect of the country during the Moghal rule. Instead of strengthening the existing web from the same material, every effort was made in Calcutta, then the only seat of instruction, to embroider upon the feeble old frame a grotesque and elaborate pattern in Sanskrit, and to pilfer from that tongue whatever in the way of vocabulary and construction, the learned considered necessary to satisfy the increasing demands of modern intercourse. He who trusts to the charity of others, says Swift, will always be poor ; so Bengali, as a vernacular, has been stunted in its growth by this process of cramming with a class of food it is unable to assimilate. The simile used by Mr. Beames is a good one. He likens Bengali to an overgrown child tied to its mother’s apron-string, and always looking to her for help, when it ought to be supporting itself.’

As regards the pronunciation of these imported Sanskrit words, an extraordinary state of affairs exists,—paralleled, I believe, in no other language in the world. This is not the place for an elaborate description of the origin of the Indo-Aryans, but, in order to understand what has occurred, it is necessary to follow the course of the Bengali language from its earliest stage. This was some dialect closely akin to Sanskrit (it never actually was Classical Sanskrit) which existed in North-Western India, when the language of the original Aryans of India resembled that which we find in the hymns of the R̥g-vēda. The speakers of this tongue gradually migrated eastwards, and we find them in Bihār and Orissa in the year 250 B.C. We have specimens of their language, for their then king, Aśōka, has left us inscriptions couched in his own words.

His capital was at what is now Patna, and his language has since been called Māgadhi from Magadha, the ancient name of South Bihār. As might be expected, the language had widely departed from standard Sanskrit. Inflexions had become worn down, and inconvenient compound consonants had become simplified. Like a sensible man, Aśoka, who wished what he had written to be understood, spelled his words as they were pronounced, and not in the old Sanskrit fashion, which no longer represented the actual sounds of the language. We next get a view of the vernacular spoken in Eastern India in the works of the Grammarians whose last and best representative for our present purpose was Hēma-chandra, who flourished in the middle of the twelfth century A.D. In the interval which had expired since Aśoka's time, the language had developed greatly. The very vocal organs of the people had undergone a change and they found it difficult to pronounce letters which had been easy to their forefathers. As they pronounced them differently, they spelled them differently, and owing to the record left by Hēma-chandra we know how they did pronounce them. When they wanted to talk of the Goddess of Wealth, whom their Sanskrit-speaking ancestors had called Lakshmī, they found the kshm too much trouble to say, and so they simplified matters by saying, and writing, Lakkhī. Again when they wanted to ask for cooked rice, which their ancestors called bhakta, they found the kt too hard to pronounce, and so said, and wrote, bhatta, just as the Italians find it too difficult to say factum, and say, and write, fatto. Again, they could not pronounce an s clearly, they had to say sh. When they wanted to talk of the sea, they could not say sāgara, but said and wrote, shāgara or shāyara.¹ As a last example, if they wanted to express the idea conveyed by the word 'external,' they could not say bāhya, and so they said and wrote, bājha.

Now, there is no doubt about the fact that it is from some eastern form of this Māgadhi language (or Prākṛit, as it is called) that Bengali is directly descended. The very same incapacities of the vocal organs exist with Bengalis now, that existed with their predecessors eight hundred years ago. A Bengali cannot pronounce kshm any more than they could. He cannot pronounce a clear s, but must make it sh. The compound letter hy beats him, and instead he has to say jy. These are only a few examples of facts which might be multiplied indefinitely. Nevertheless, a Bengali when he borrows his Sanskrit words writes them in the Sanskrit fashion, which is, say, at least two thousand years out of date, and then reads them as if they were Māgadhi words. He writes Lakshmi, and says Lakkhī. He writes sāgara, and says shāgar, or, if he is uneducated, shāyar. He writes bāhya, and says bājha.² In other words, he writes Sanskrit, and reads and talks another language. It is exactly as if an Italian were to write factum, while he says fatto, or as if a Frenchman were to write the Latin sicca, while he says sèche.³

The result of this state of affairs is that, to a foreigner, the great difficulty of Bengali is its pronunciation. Like English, but for a different reason, its pronunciation is not represented by its spelling. The vocabulary of the modern literary language is almost entirely¹ Sanskrit, and few of these words are pronounced as they are written. Bengalis themselves struggle vainly with a number of complex sounds, which the disuse of centuries has rendered their vocal organs unable, or too lazy, to produce. The result is a number of half-pronounced consonants, and broken vowels, not provided for by their alphabet, amid which the unfortunate foreigner wanders without a guide, and for which his own larynx is as unsuited as is a Bengali's for the sounds of Sanskrit.² All this has already been said, and in far greater detail, by Bābū Syāmacharan Gānguli in an excellent article in the Calcutta Review for the year 1877.³ He sums the matter up in the following words, which are of special value as coming from a well-known scholar, whose native language is Bengali :—

² The meaning of the ā will be explained subsequently. It represents the sound of the a in 'hat.'

'The grammar of written Bengali differs considerably from the grammar of current Bengali. For familiar words, understood by all, every one who learns to read has to learn Sanskrit substitutes, and in many cases old Bengali substitutes likewise, which, having dropped out of colloquial speech, still retain their place in the language of books. The Sanskrit words in use in Bengali books are for the most part Sanskrit only to the eye, but none to the ear; for though written just as they are in Sanskrit, they are pronounced in such a way as to make them almost unintelligible to those unfamiliar with the corrupt pronunciation of Sanskrit that prevails in Bengal.'

Bengali has a fairly voluminous literature dating from prehistoric times. According to the latest authority, its oldest literary record is the song of Mānik-chandra, which belongs to the days of the Buddhists, though it has no doubt been considerably altered in the course of centuries through transmission by word of mouth. Of the well-known authors, one of the oldest and most admired is Chaṇḍī-dās, who flourished about the 14th century, and wrote songs of considerable merit in praise of Krishna. Since his time to the commencement of the present century, there has been a succession of writers, many of whom are directly connected with the religious revival instituted by Chaitanya (early part of the 16th century). In the 15th century Kāśī-rām translated the Mahā-bhārata and Kṛitti-bās the Rāmāyaṇa into the vernacular. The principal literary figure of the 17th century was Mukunda-rām who has left us the two really admirable poems entitled Chaṇḍī and Śrīmanṭa Saudāgar. It is the greatest pity that these two fine works are not available to readers in an English dress. With Bhārat-chandra, whose much admired but rather artificial Bidyā-sundar appeared in the 18th century, the list of old Bengali authors may be brought to a conclusion. Their language offers a marked contrast to the Paṇḍit-ridden language of the present century. They wrote in genuine nervous Bengali, and the conspicuous success of many of them shows how baseless is the contention of some writers of the present day, that Bengali needs the help of its huge imported Sanskrit vocabulary to express anything except the simplest ideas. The modern literary Bengali arose early in the present century, and each decade it is becoming more a slave of Sanskrit than before. It has had some excellent writers, notably the late Bankim-chandra, whose admirable novels have received the honour of being translated into several languages, including English. Even he, however, sometimes laboured under the fetters imposed upon him by a strange vocabulary, and all competent European scholars are agreed that no work of first class originality has much chance of arising in Bengal, till some great genius arms himself for the work and purges the language of its pseudo-classical element. For further information regarding Bengali literature, the reader is referred to the list of authorities given below.

² I am aware that almost identical remarks might be made regarding the foreigner who has to learn English. But that fact does not diminish the difficulties of the pronunciation of literary Bengali. To an uneducated peasant of the delta the pronunciation of these words is as difficult as it is to an Englishman. I have several times seen a woman in the witness-box break into a series of hysterical giggles, when being sworn, and told to say the word pratiṇīz, affirmation. It is needless to say that that word is not pronounced by educated Bengalis as it is spelled. Defenders of the spelling and vocabulary of modern literary Bengali call them 'Conservative.' But this is mere playing with words. If that is the meaning of the term, then an English Conservative is a person who wishes to retain all the civilization, and all the complex national existence of this year of grace 1899, but to administer them by the laws of Ina of Wessex. To change the metaphor,—by all means let writers of Bengal write in Sanskrit if they like (and if they can); but they have no right to misuse their own vernacular by sending her out into the world masquerading in the clothes of her great-grandmother.

The subject of the dialects of Bengali has never been sufficiently studied. In fact, Bengali Dialects.

Bengalis themselves, as a rule, know little about any dialect except that of their own home, and that of Calcutta. We sometimes hear people talk of the Bengali of a certain locality, such as that of Burdwan or Rangpur or Chittagong, but few attempts have been made to systematically examine the main peculiarities of more than one or two of these dialects, and what little has been accomplished has been the work of Englishmen, whose foreign status naturally debars them from doing the work as thoroughly as it would be done by a native of the country, born with ears ready attuned to detect the slightest differences of pronunciation.

In dividing the language into dialects, the lines of cleavage may be either horizontal or perpendicular. Adopting the former method, we find two clearly marked varieties, that of the educated, and that of the uneducated. The former is practically the same over the whole of Bengal, but it is only used by its speakers for literary purposes, or when speaking formally. On other occasions they sink back into a more or less refined version of the second dialect. Between these two, there is not merely the same difference that exists between the language of the educated and uneducated in, say, England. The dissimilarity is much greater. The dialect of the educated is that known as Standard Bengali. It may be called the literary, as opposed to the colloquial dialect. It departs from the latter not only in its vocabulary, but also in its grammatical forms. Its vocabulary is highly sanskritised, abounding both in Sanskrit words, and in Sanskrit phrases. Its grammar is the full-formed dialect displayed in the standard grammars of the language, which is nowhere used in conversation. The dialect of the uneducated, or, to call it by another name, the colloquial dialect, on the contrary, is much more free from sanskritisms, while its grammar differs widely from that of the language which we meet in the books. It is much contracted, words which, in the literary language, pronounced ore rotundo, have four syllables, are in this reduced to two, so that a mere knowledge of the former is of little assistance towards understanding or speaking the latter. This dialect is not explained in the usual grammars,¹ and, at present, can only be learned by actual contact with the speakers.

The lines of perpendicular cleavage affect only the colloquial form of Bengali. As already stated, the literary language is much the same all over the country, but the colloquial dialect varies from place to place. Its change is gradual. Every few miles some new word for a common implement, or some new form of grammatical expression may be detected by an acute ear. As the natives say, the language changes every ten kōs.² It is only when we compare the forms of speech current at places some considerable distance apart that we can perceive sufficient variation to say 'this is a different language,' or a 'different dialect from that.' Our sole opportunity for discovering any sudden change of language or dialect is when populations are separated by some natural obstacle, such as a great river, or a range of mountains, or when one nationality is brought face to face with another. Otherwise, it is incorrect to draw dividing lines on a map which will show definitely that on one side of each, one dialect, and on the other, another dialect is spoken. All that we can do is to take central points, such as district head-quarters, pretty widely apart, as the place where we can definitely locate the existence of a specified dialect; and, taking these as centres, to mark boundary lines, which confessedly do not illustrate the actual state of affairs, as carefully as we can. With this proviso, we may give the following brief account of the areas covered by the various dialects of Bengali.

² A speaker of 'pure' Bengali would say krōs.

Bengali.

Bengali is divided, first, into two main branches, a Western and an Eastern. The boundary line between the two may be taken to be the Eastern boundary of the Districts of the Twenty-four Parganas and Nadia. It then follows the River Brahmaputra till it comes to the Rangpur District, up the western boundary of which it runs, and, thence, along the west of Jalpaiguri till it meets the lower ranges of the Himalayas. The points of difference between these two branches are marked, and will be found described under the head of Eastern Bengali.

The Western Branch includes the following Dialects :—the Central or Standard, the South-Western, the Western, and the Northern. These are all marked on the accompanying map, and the peculiarities of each will be found described in the proper place. Suffice it to say here, that the purest and most admired Bengali is spoken in the area marked as Central, and that, perhaps, that spoken in the District of Hooghly,¹ near the river of the same name, is the shade with which it is considered the most desirable to be familiar. The South-Western Bengali is infected by the neighbouring Oṛiyā, and that of the west and north have provincialisms due to their distance from the centre of enlightenment, Calcutta. Western Bengali has one sub-dialect called Khariā-ṭhār, spoken by the wild tribes, who inhabit the hills in the south of Manbhum, and another called Māl Pabāriā spoken in the centre of the Santal Parganas. Another variety of the dialect, called Sarākī, is spoken by the Jains of Lohardaga. The Northern dialect has two sub-dialects spoken on the Bihār border, called, respectively, Kōch and Siripuriā.

The centre of the Eastern Branch of the language may be taken to be the District of Dacca, where what may be called Standard Eastern Bengali is spoken. The true Eastern dialect is not spoken to the west of the Brahmaputra, though, when we cross that river, coming from Dacca, we meet a well-marked form of speech, spoken in Rangpur and the Districts to the east and north, called Rājbangsī, which, while undoubtedly belonging to the eastern variety of the language, has still points of difference, which entitle it to be classed as a separate dialect. It has one sub-dialect, called Bāhē, spoken in the Darjeeling-Tarai. Eastern Bengali Proper commences in the Districts of Khulna and Jessore, and covers the whole of the eastern half of the Gangetic Delta. It then extends in a north-easterly direction following the valleys of the Megna and its affluents over the Districts of Tippera, Dacca, Maimansingh, Sylhet, and Cachar. In every direction, its farther progress is stopped by the hills which bound these regions, and throughout the Surma Valley and in the Mymensingh District a kind of mixture of Bengali and Tibeto-Burman called Haijong is also spoken by low-caste tribes. In the centre of the delta, in the Districts of Khulna, Jessore, and Faridpur, the language is in a transition stage. We see the standard dialect of Central Bengal gradually merging into the dialect of Dacca, and, if it is desired, we can class the speech of these Districts as a sub-dialect of Eastern Bengali, called the East-Central. Along the eastern littoral of the Bay of Bengal we find another distinct dialect, also of the Eastern type, called South-Western Bengali, and inland there is one more curious dialect, called Chākmā (with an alphabet of its own) spoken by tribes of the Chittagong Hill Tracts.

Having now completed a rapid survey of the various dialects, we may take stock and see how many people speak Bengali in its proper home. This is shown in the following table. Details will be found in the sections dealing with each dialect separately :—

Bengalis belong to an intelligent and well-educated nationality, and have spread far and wide over India as clerks, or in the practice of the learned professions. It is, therefore, of interest to note how far the Bengali language has extended, this time as a foreign speech, over the rest of India. We have counted up the number of people who speak Bengali at home, let us now see how many people speak it abroad. As the returns of this Survey do not take cognizance of the languages spoken by small groups of people who are away from their homes, we shall not follow them, but shall take instead the figures of the Census of 1891. For obvious reasons it is impossible to classify these entries according to dialect, and we must content ourselves with noting that the latter is unspecified. I shall commence with those portions of the Lower Bengali as a foreign language.

¹ These are Census figures, and are not based on special local returns.

Provinces of Bengal which do not fall within the Bengali-speaking area, and shall quote the figures District by District. It will be observed that the only districts in which Bengali is spoken by any considerable number of people are Cuttack and Balasore. Here it is spoken by old settlers. At one time sales of Orissa estates for arrears of revenue were held in Calcutta. This led to numerous estates being bought up by Bengalis, who came and settled in the Province.¹ They are called kērā Bengalis, from their habit of interlarding their sentences with the word karē, a corruption of the Oṛiyā kari, which means 'having done.' Calcutta Bengalis consider their language to be very corrupt, as might be well expected.

Table showing the Number of Speakers of Bengali (Unspecified Dialects) within the Lower Provinces of Bengal, but outside the Area in which Bengali is the Vernacular Language.

Name of District.	Number of Speakers.	REMARKS.
Patna	3,359
Gaya	447
Shahabad	1,724
Saran	690
Champanan	195
Muzaffarpur	949
Darbhanga	777

Cuttack	15,196
Balasore	17,406
Angul and Khondmals	95
Puri	2,751
Hazaribagh	7,333 are entered in the Census as speaking Bengali in this District. But an examination of a specimen of this so-called Bengali shows that it is really a dialect of Bihāri. There are, no doubt, speakers of Bengali, but their number cannot at present be stated.
Lohardaga	6,733	These are the figures locally returned. The Census figures cannot be used, as they make no allowance for Sarāki.
Chota Nagpur Tributary States	4,554	These also are local figures. The Census figures are 27,481, which evidently include a number of people classed by me as speaking aboriginal languages. Of those here recorded, 4,115 live in Sarāi Kalā State, and speak Western Bengali.
TOTAL	60,638

We shall now see what the Census says about Bengali spoken in other Provinces.

Table showing the Number of Speakers of Bengali (Unspecified Dialects) in Provinces of India other than the Lower Provinces of Bengal.

Name of Province.	Number of Speakers.	REMARKS.
Assam	158,841	The total number of speakers of Bengali entered in the Census report is 2,741,947. From these have been deducted the Census figures for Bengali-speakers in Sylhet, Cachar, and Goalpārā.
Berar	14
Bombay and Feudatories	1,049
Burmah	65,029	From the Census total, 114,152 has been deducted to represent the speakers of South-Eastern Bengali in Akṛāb.
Central Provinces and Feudatories	1,648
Madras and Agencies	1,147
North-Western Provinces, Oudh, and Native States	23,180	Most of these are in Muttra (8,534), Allahabad (2,159), Benares (6,681), and Lucknow (1,201).
Punjab and Feudatories	2,263
Nizam's Dominions	38
Baroda	43	No Census was taken of the languages spoken in Rajputana. For want of better information, I have given the number of people of Bengal birth.
Mysore	61

AUTHORITIES—

A.—EARLY REFERENCES TO THE LANGUAGE.

The earliest known instance of the use in Europe of the word ‘Bengala’ (i.e., ‘Bengali’), not however in the sense of the language, but meaning ‘a man of Bengal’ occurs in the Decades of João de Barros, the first three of which were published in Lisbon, 1552 and 1563. The passage is quoted in Yule’s Hobson-Jobson, s.v. Bengalee, and is as follows:—

‘1552. “In the defence of the bridge died three of the king’s captains and Tuam Bandam, to whose charge it was committed, a Bengali (Bengala) by nation, and a man sagacious and crafty in stratagems rather than a soldier (cavalheiro),” —Barros, II., vi., iii.’

The earliest mention of the language with which I am acquainted is in a letter from David Wilkins to LaCroze of Berlin in November 1714.¹ He is describing a collection of translations of the Lord’s Prayer into various languages, which he was preparing with the aid of John Chamberlayne. He states that in publishing this Sylloge, he intends to give, for the first time, specimens of the Singhalese, Javan, and Bengali languages.²

Chamberlayne’s Sylloge duly appeared in the year 1715, and did contain a plate purporting to represent a translation of the Lord’s Prayer and headed ‘Bengalica.’ The plate is, however, quite unintelligible, and this is explained by Wilkins’ confession in the preface to the work that he had been unable to obtain a Bengali rendering, but that as the Bengali language was dying out, and was being superseded by Malay (!), he had written a Malay version in the Bengali character. The translation so written shows that Wilkins was ignorant of the rudiments of the Bengali alphabet.³ Imperfect as the specimen was, it attracted the notice of the famous Theophilus Bayer, who obtained further examples of the alphabet, and was misled into suggesting a possible connexion between it and Tangut.⁴ The first Bengali grammar and dictionary were in Portuguese. The title of the work is Vocabulario em Idioma Bengalla e Portuguez dividido em duas Partes dedicado ao Excellent. e Rever. Senhor D. F. Miguel de Tavora Arcebispo de Evora do Concelho de Sua Magestade Foy Delegencia do Padre Fr. Manoel da Assumpçam Religioso Eremita de Santo Agostinho da Congregação da India Oriental. Lisboa, 1743. Bengali grammar, pp. 1—40; Vocabulary Bengali-Portuguese, pp. 47—306; Portuguese-Bengali, pp. 307—577. The whole is in the Roman character, the words being spelt according to the rules of Portuguese pronunciation. In 1748 was published at Leipzig the Orientalisch-und-occidentalischer Sprachmeister, compiled by Johann Friedrich Fritz, and dedicated by him to the great Indian Missionary Schultz, the author of the first Hindōstānī grammar. The Sprachmeister contains accounts of over a hundred alphabets from all parts of the world, followed by some two hundred translations of the Lord’s Prayer. On page 84 the Bengali alphabet is given. It is correct enough, and is said to be taken from the Aurenck Szeb, apparently a life of Aurangzēb, of Georg Jacob Kehr, a work which I have been unable to trace. The table is headed ‘ALPHABETUM BENGALICUM s. JENTIVICUM.’ On a subsequent page, Fritz reprints Wilkins’ absurd Bengali-Malay version of the Lord’s Prayer. The Sprachmeister held the field as an authority on Oriental Languages till 1771, when there appeared from the Press of the Congregatio de propaganda Fide, a Latin pamphlet by Cassiano Beligatti entitled Alphabetum brammanicum seu indostanum Universitatis

Kasi. This is primarily devoted to the characters used in writing Hindōstānī, but the introduction by Jo. Christofero Amaduzzi (Amadutius) deals with Indian languages generally, and gives a list of them. The following extract may be cited: 'Gentilitium vero Alphabetum hoc in tot genera subdividitur, quot sunt Regna, ac Provinciae, in quibus usurpatur, et a quibus nomen derivat. Huiusmodi porro est lingua popularis Bengalensis, Tourutiana, Nepalensis.'..... 'Tourutiana' is the Maithili spoken in Tirhut.

Halhed's Bengali Grammar appeared in 1778, and from that date our knowledge of the language takes its rise.

¹ It would be a hopeless, and a useless, task to attempt to give a complete list of all the Bengali Dictionaries which issue in swarms from Calcutta presses. Most of these are based on that of Mendies. I have contented myself with cataloguing all those which are of bibliographical importance, and to these I have added such as have been deemed worthy of admission to the Catalogue of the Imperial Library at Calcutta, or to the pages of the Orientalische Bibliographie.

The following account of the Bengali alphabet is taken from Mr. Beames' excellent Bengali Grammar. It shows the system of transliteration used in this Survey for the dialects of the Western Branch only of the language. It has been found necessary to adopt a slightly different system for most of the dialects of the Eastern Branch, which will be explained in the proper place :—

'The order and number of the vowels and consonants are the same in Bengali as in the other Aryan languages of India—

VOWELS.

অ a	আ ā
ই i	ঐ ī	এ ē	ঐ ai

Bengali.

‘Although, for the sake of completeness, the vowel signs ঞ rī, ঞ lī, and ঞ lī are included in the list of characters, they are not used at all in ordinary Bengali. They are, however, required in transcribing Sanskrit grammatical works into the Bengali character, and in Sanskrit grammars written for the use of Bengali students.

‘The forms of the vowels given above are the initials, and are used only at the beginning of a word; when subjoined to a consonant they take the following forms:—

a (not expressed)		ā †
i ি	ī ি	ē ষ	ai ি
u ি	ū ি	ō ি	au ি
ri ি

Thus ক ka, খা khā, গি gi, ঘী ghī, চু chu, ছু chhū, জ় jī, ঞ jhē, টে ṭai, ঠে ṭhō, ডৌ ḍau.

‘In the following cases the combination of consonant and vowel gives rise to peculiar forms:—

র r with ি u is written রু	গ g with ি u is written গু
র r ” ি ū ” ” রু	গ g ” ি u ” ” গু
হ h ” ি ” ” হু	প p ” ি ” ” পু (occasionally).

‘When one consonant follows another with no vowel between, the two are, as in Dēva-nāgarī, combined into one compound letter. In most cases the elements of the compound are easily distinguishable, as in শ্ śva, ক্ kla, ম্ mna; but there are some in which the elements are so altered as to be with difficulty recognised. The most commonly met with are the following:—

1. Nasals preceding other consonants (called in Bengali Āṅka-phalā).

ঞ ñ with ক ka makes ঞ ñka .	ন্ n with থ tha makes হ্ nthā .
ঞ ñ ” গ ga ” ঙ ṅga .	ন্ n ” ধ dha ” ঙ্ ndha .
ঞ ñ ” চ cha ” ঞ্ ñcha .	ম্ m ” প pa ” ম্প mpa .
ণ্ ṇ ” ড ḍa ” ণ্ ṇḍa .	ম্ m ” য ma ” ম্ম mma .

2. Sibilants preceding other consonants (called Āṣka-phalā):—

স্ s with থ tha makes স্থ stha ষ্ ṣh ” ট ṭa ” ষ্ট ṣṭa
ষ্ ṣh ” ণ ṇa ” ষ্ণ ṣṇ

3. Miscellaneous —

ট্ ṭ with ট ṭa makes ট্ ṭṭa ত্ t ” ত ta ” ত্ tta
ত্ t ” থ tha ” থ্ ttha .
দ্ d ” ধ dha ” দ্ধ ddha .
ক্ k ” ত ta ” ক্ ktā .
জ্ j ” ঞ ñā ” জ্ jñā (pronounced gñā).
গ্ g ” ধ dha ” গ্ধ gdha .
ব্ b ” ধ dha ” ব্ধ bdha .
হ্ h ” ন na ” হ্ hna .
হ্ h ” ম ma ” হ্ম hma .
ক্ k ” ষ ṣhā ” ক্ kṣhā (khā).

‘The letter য ya when joined to a previous consonant takes the form য as ক্য kya.

‘The letter র ra when joined to a following consonant takes the form র as অর্ক arka, কর্ম karmma.

‘When joined to a preceding consonant it is written ্র, as স্র sra. The following forms are peculiar : ক্র kra, ত্র tra, ত্ত্র ttra, ন্ত্র ntra, ন্দ্র ndra, স্ত্র stra.

‘Some compound consonants followed by the vowels উ u and ঊ ū take slightly altered forms:—

ভ্র bhru, শ্র śru, দ্র dru, দ্রূ drū, ন্তু ntu, স্তু stu.

‘As in Sanskrit, the short vowel অ a when it follows a consonant is not expressed, but is held to be inherent in every consonant unless its absence is specially indicated; for instance ক is ka not k. When the absence of অ a has to be noted the mark ্ (called in Bengali hasanta) is used; thus ক্ k, as shown in the above list of compound consonants. ত t with hasanta is expressed by the character ৎ, as in তাবৎ tābat, চমৎকার chamatkār.

‘The sign ং, called chandra-bindu (i.e., moon and drop), indicates that a nasal sound is to be given to the vowel over which it stands, as চাঁদ chāḍ, পাঁচ pāḥ. It is represented in transliteration by the sign ~ over the nasalised vowel.

‘The characters for the numerals are these—

১	২	৩	৪	৫	৬	৭	৮	৯	০
1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	0

‘The leading feature in Indian arithmetic being the division by four, the signs for fractions are adapted thereto. The rupee is divided into $4 \times 4 = 16$ parts, called ānā which are thus designated (units of all kinds are also thus divided) :—

1 ānā or $\frac{1}{16}$	/o	5 ānās	1/o	9 ānās	11/o	13 ānās	14/o
2 ānās	2/o	6 ānās	12/o	10 ānās	10/o	14 ānās	14/o
3 ānās	3/o	7 ānās	13/o	11 ānās	11/o	15 ānās	15/o
4 ānās or $\frac{1}{4}$	1o	8 ānās or $\frac{1}{2}$	11/o	12 ānās or $\frac{3}{4}$	12/o

As already stated, it is difficult to give completely accurate rules regarding the pronunciation of the language. This is principally due to the fact that there are not a sufficient number of signs in the alphabet to represent the very complex vowel system. If we adopt a phonetic system of representing these sounds, we find that there are,—

Pronunciation.

Three a-sounds, viz., ā, ă and á.

Two e-sounds, viz., ē and ě.

Three o-sounds, viz., ō, o, and ǒ.

For representing these eight sounds, it has only four vowel signs, viz., the sign অ transliterated a; the sign আ transliterated ā; the sign এ transliterated ē; and the sign ও transliterated ō.

I shall now proceed to take these vowel sounds, and to show how Bengali attempts to record them in writing.

The sound which I call ā, is that which we hear in the word ‘father.’ It is represented in Bengali character by the letter আ ā.

The sound ă is the sound of the a in ‘had’ and ‘hat.’ In Bengali it is sometimes represented by the letter এ ē. Thus এক ēk, pronounced ăk, one; দেখ dēkha, see, pronounced dăkhō; গেল gēla, he went, pronounced gălō. More often when it is deliberately intended to represent this sound, the syllable ā is used. Thus দ্যাক d'ākha, গাল g'āla. So also in representing English words in the Bengali character, we have একাডিমী ēk'ādimī, academy, মাদ m'ād, mad. As for the word meaning 'one,' I have seen it spelt, য়াক y'āk and even অ্যাক ā'k. Sometimes the sound is represented by merely the letter আ ā, but this is only when the following consonant is pronounced as a double letter. Thus বাক্য bākya, a sentence, is pronounced bākk'ō.

The sound ā, need not trouble us much. It is the sound of aw in 'awl,' and is really the long sound of ō. In some Eastern Districts, e.g., Cachar, this ā is used instead of ō. Thus mānushar, of a man, is pronounced mānushār. As in the above example, the sound is represented by the letter অ a.

The sound ē, is that of the a in 'lane.' It is usually represented by the letter এ ē, thus দেশ dēśē, in a country. Sometimes it is represented in colloquial language, by আই āi. Thus খাইতে khāitē, pronounced colloquially khētē.

The sound ē has two closely related pronunciations. The sign ē represents both the sound of the é in the French word 'était,' and the sound of e in 'met.' It will be noticed that there is very little difference in these two sounds, but if we wish to be extra accurate, we may represent the first sound by the sign e, without any diacritical mark at all. The first sound is often pronounced as if it was ā, and there is a continual tendency for one sound to float into the other. Thus এক ēk, is as often pronounced ek or ēk as āk, and দেখ dēkha is as often pronounced dēkhō, or dēkhō as dākhō. This sound is also regularly heard in verbal terminations, as in করিলেন karilēn, pronounced kōrilēn or kōrilēn, he made. As will be seen from the above examples, this sound is represented in Bengali writing by the letter এ ē. The other sound ē, is met in words like ক্ষতি kshati (kh'ati), loss, pronounced khēti, and ব্যক্তি vyakti (b'akti), a person, pronounced bēkti. It is represented in writing by the letter অ a combined with the compound ক্ষ ksh, and by ya when following the letter ব v or b, or we may say that ksha and vyā are pronounced khē and bē, respectively. As the pronunciation of these two short sounds, e and ē, is nearly identical, I shall not in future attempt to distinguish between them, but, when writing phonetically, and not transliterating, shall represent both by ē.

The sound of ō is that of the o in 'home,' or in the French word 'vôtre,' meaning 'yours,' not 'your.' It is usually represented by the letter ও ō, but, at the end of a word in standard Bengali, it is represented by অ a. Thus খোসা khōsā, a husk, pronounced khōshā, and ছিল chhila, he was, pronounced chhilō.¹ In writing dialectic Bengali, this ō-sounding final a is written ও ō. Thus chhila is written ছিলো chhilō.

The sound which I call o is the short sound of the long ō in 'home,' 'vôtre.' It must be carefully distinguished from the short ō which we hear in 'hot.' We hear it in the French word 'votre,' 'your,' as compared with 'vôtre,' 'yours.' In English, it is the first o in the word promote, in which the second o would be represented by ō. It occurs in Bengali in the very common verb হইতে haîtē, to be, which is pronounced hoîtē, and also in other special words. Thus বন ban, a forest, is pronounced bon, and বলিতে balitē, to speak, bolitē. In these cases it is represented in writing by the letter অ a. On the other hand, in words like খোয়াইল khōyāila, he lost, pronounced khowāilō, it is represented by the letter ও ō.

¹ I believe that Mr. Nicholl, on p. 7 of his Bengali Grammar, was the first to point out this pronunciation of a final a. Previously, by the argument ex silentio, learners had been taught that it was sounded like the short o in 'hot.'

The sound which I call ō is the commonest sound in the language. It is the sound of the o in 'hod' and 'hot.' It is represented by the letter a, when not at the end of a word. Thus অনল anal, fire, is pronounced ōnōl. It has a long sound, like the aw in 'awl,' which I represent by ā, and which, as I have already said, is heard in the Eastern Districts.

With these preliminary remarks, I proceed to give a brief account of the method of pronouncing Bengali, as spelled in the Bengali character. I shall in each case give only the correct transliterated letters, and not the original Bengali ones.

The vowel a is usually pronounced as ō, in 'hot.' Final a is not pronounced, except after a double consonant, as in śabda, a sound, and in adjectives and Sanskrit Passive Participles. Thus, chhōṭa, small, kṛita, done. It is also pronounced at the end of verbal forms, as in karila, he did, but is not pronounced in such forms which end in s, as karis, thou doest, m, as karilām, I did, or n, as karilēn, he did. When thus pronounced at the end of a word, a is sounded like ō. Thus the above words are pronounced, chhōṭō, kṛitō, and kōrilō, respectively. In the syllables ksha (khʼa) and bʼa, a is pronounced ē, see above. In the Eastern Districts, a has often the sound of ā, see above. Medial a is sometimes pronounced o, as in haila, he was, pronounced hoilō. The sound of this o, not ō or ō, is explained above. So ban, a forest, pronounced bon; balitē, to speak, pronounced bolitē.

The vowel ā is usually pronounced like the a in 'father.' When the syllable ʼā appears in a word, it is pronounced ā, like the a in 'had' or 'hat.' Thus, dʼākha, see, pronounced dākhō. On the other hand, in the colloquial language, the two syllables āi, are often, but not always, pronounced like ē. Thus khāitē, to eat, is pronounced khētē, but not so gāitē, to sing. Before a double consonant, and before a single consonant which is pronounced as a double one, ā is pronounced more or less like the ā in 'had' or 'hat.' Thus pañchānna fifty-five, pronounced pōñchānnō; vākya, a sentence, pronounced bākkō.

The vowel ē is usually pronounced as the a in 'lane.' Thus, dēsē, in a country. It sometimes has the short sound of e or ē described above. Thus, karilēn, he did, pronounced kōrilēn. Sometimes, it has the sound of ā in 'had' or 'hat.' Thus dēkha, see, pronounced dākhō. For the future, whenever ē is pronounced e or ē, I shall transliterate it by ē.

The vowel ō is usually pronounced as the second o in 'promote.' Sometimes it has the sound of the first o in 'promote,' or of the o in 'votre.' Thus khōyāila, he lost, pronounced khowāilō.

As regards single consonants,—

The letter chh is pronounced as s in 'this,' by the vulgar, and in the Eastern Districts.

The letter য y is pronounced j, except when it has a dot under it, thus য় yē, who, pronounced jē, but করিয়া kariyā, having done, pronounced kōriyā. In future, when it is necessary, I shall transcribe a y which is pronounced as j, thus, j. The two syllables ঔয়া ōyā, are pronounced as wā. Thus, হওয়া hōyā, being, is pronounced howā.

The letter v is always, when not compounded with another consonant, pronounced b. Indeed, the same character is used for both Sanskrit b and Sanskrit v. Thus varṇa, colour, is pronounced bōrnō. The sound of v or w being thus lost from the alphabet, Bengali has to represent it by the letters ōyā, as just explained.

The letters n and ṇ are both pronounced like n. All sibilants standing alone are pronounced as sh, but the compound śr is pronounced as sr. Thus prasanna, pleased, is pronounced prōshōnnō, and the title Śrī, is pronounced Srī.

As regards compound consonants,—

The compound jñ is pronounced ggʷ, with shortening and nasalisation of the preceding vowel. Thus ājñā, a command, is pronounced āggʷā.

When the letter m or v forms the final member of a compound, it is not pronounced, but the preceding member of the compound is pronounced as if it was doubled, and the preceding vowel is shortened, if possible. The m or v is, in such cases, transliterated as a small m or v respectively, above the line. Thus s^maraṇ, memory, pronounced shshōrōn, and pad^ma, the name of a river, is pronounced pōddō. So, satt^va, nature, pronounced shōttō; d^vārā, by means of, pronounced ddārā. This rule does not apply to the words pūrva, east, pronounced pūrbō or even pubbō, and kimvā, pronounced kimbā.

When the letter y forms the final member of a compound it is very faintly pronounced, so as to be hardly, or not at all, audible. It is then transliterated as a small y above the line. In compensation, the preceding member of the compound is pronounced as if it were doubled, and the preceding vowel is, if possible, shortened in pronunciation. Thus vākya, a sentence, is pronounced bākk^yō; and yōgyatā, fitness, pronounced jogg^yōtā. As seen in the above examples, ā is shortened to ă, and ō to o.

The compound vya is pronounced bē, as in the word ‘bet,’ but shorter. Thus, vyakti, a person, is pronounced bēkti, and vyatīta, elapsed, as bētitō, with the accent on the first syllable, and a short penultimate.

The compound letter क्श ksh is pronounced kh^y at the beginning of a word, and kkh^y in the middle of a word. Thus kshiti, the earth, is pronounced kh^yiti; pakshī, a bird, is pronounced pōkkh^yī; and chakshu, the eye, is pronounced chōkkh^yu. As explained above, the y is hardly, or not at all, heard. The syllable ksha is pronounced khē. Thus kshati, loss, is pronounced khēti. The name of the Goddess Lakshmī is pronounced Lōkkhī.

For the future, I shall transliterate क्श not by ksha, but by kh^ya, or kkh^ya, as the occasion demands. The compound क्व is also transliterated kh^ya, but there is little danger of confusion arising from this fact. क्व kh^ya occurs rarely, and, in literary Bengali, only in words derived from the Sanskrit root क्व kh^yā, such as क्वति kh^yāti, fame; क्वत ākh^yāta, named; क्वत prakh^yāta, famous.

Other vowels and consonants are pronounced, as usual in Indian languages.

It is believed that the following grammatical sketch will enable the reader to understand the interlinear translations of the Bengali specimens which follow :—

Contracted forms—

The following are the usual contracted pronunciations of the various forms :—

karibā, pron. kōrbā; karitā, kōrtā; kariyā, kōrē; karilām, kōrlām; kariba, kōrbō; karitām, kōrtām, and so on.

The Present Definite, Imperfect, Perfect, and Pluperfect are pronounced as follows :—

Present Definite, kōrchchi, etc.; Imperfect, kōrchchilām, etc.; Perfect, kōrchchi, etc.; Pluperfect, kōrchchhlām.

Irregular Verbs—

The root jā, go, forms its 3rd verbal noun jāōn. Past Part. giyā (pron. giyē); Past, gēlām, etc.; Perf., giyāchhi (pron. gēchhi), etc.; Plup., giyāchhlām (pron. gēchhlām), etc. The rest is regular, e.g. Pres. Def., jāitēchhi (pron. jāchchē).

The root āis, come. Pres., (1) āsi, (2) āisa (pron. ēshō); (3) (Sing.) āisē (ēshē) or āsē, (Plur.) āisēn (ēshēn) or āsēn; Past, āilām (ēlām) or āsīlām; Perf. āsiyāchhi (ēshēchhi) or āiyāchhi (ēyēchhi). Pres. Part., āsītē (āshtē); Past Part., āsīyā (ēshē); Conj. Part., āilē (ēlē) or āsīlē.

The root ha, be. 3rd verbal noun, hāōn. Pres. (1) hai, (2) hāō, (3) (Sing.) hay, (Plur.) han; Pres. Def. hāitēchhi (pron. hōchchē); Past, hailām (holām); Perf. haiyāchhi (hōēchhi); Fut., haiba (hobō).

The roots dē, give, and nē, take. 3rd verbal noun, deōn. Pres. (1) dēi, dī, (2) dēō (dāō), (3) (Sing.) dēy, (Plur.) dēn; Pres. I.—CENTRAL OR STANDARD BENGALI.

The Central Dialect of Bengali, as spoken by the educated classes, is that usually taken as the standard of polite conversation. It is the one illustrated in the foregoing grammatical sketch, and further account of it is unnecessary.

It is the language of the town of Calcutta and of the Districts of the Twenty-four-Parganas, Nadia, Murshidabad, Hooghly, and Howrah. It is also spoken in the east of the District of Burdwan by about, in round numbers, 320,000 people, and in the eastern and northern portions of Midnapore, by another 1,506,100. These last two figures are only approximate. In Burdwan, especially, it is impossible to fix a dividing line, and to say definitely, or even approximately, that on one side of it Central, and on the other Western Bengali is spoken. All that can be said is that probably a million people in Burdwan speak Western Bengali, and, in that case, as the total number of Bengali speakers in the district is 1,319,586, the remainder should be shown as speaking the standard form of the language. Regarding the boundary between Central and South-Western Bengali, in the Midnapore District, vide the remarks on p. 96 post, together with the accompanying map. With these limitations, we may say that the Central or Standard dialect of Bengali is spoken by the following number of persons :—

Name of District.	Number of speakers.
Hooghly	1,013,477
Howrah	708,092
24-Parganas	1,768,960
Calcutta	375,528
Nadia	1,631,413
Murshidabad	1,120,841
Burdwan	319,586
Midnapore	1,506,099
TOTAL	8,443,996

The first specimen comes from Calcutta, and is a good example of the high-flown, Sanskritized, style used in modern literature. In order to illustrate Bengali handwriting, a facsimile is given of the manuscript, which may be compared with the printed copies in the Bengali and Roman characters.

Besides the strict letter for letter transliteration of the original, an attempt has been made to illustrate the sounds of the words in this and subsequent specimens by an interlinear phonetic transcription, which is printed in italic type.

As such high-flown language is rarely used in conversation, it must be understood that the phonetic transcription, which represents (in the present instance), so far as is possible, the colloquial pronunciation of an educated man speaking with some care, hardly represents the pronunciation which he would adopt in reading it. Such highly Sanskritized Bengali would probably be read ore rotundo, and would sound more nearly like the written words, than would be usual in the conversation of even the most educated.

[The second line of transcription is an attempt to represent the moderately contracted pronunciation, common in the educated colloquial style; but it must be remembered that some speakers contract more than others. As it is in the high-flown sanskritised style, a final a is represented by ō instead of o.

In this phonetic transcription, e is pronounced as in this, sin, not as sh in shell, which is represented by sh. The letter ' (above the line) is very faintly pronounced, and is, indeed, hardly audible.

Pronounce ā as the a in hat; ē as the e in met; ō as the o in hot; and oi as in oil. The letter o (without any diacritical mark) represents the short sound of the o in home. It is the first o in promote and is the o in the French word votre, as compared with vôtre. It should be carefully distinguished from the ō of hot.

Other consonants and vowels are pronounced as in the authorized Government system.]

The preceding specimen may be taken as representing the standard dialect of Bengali which is current in modern literature. Similar specimens, which need not be given here, have been received from the other districts of Central Bengal.

The following specimens are professedly written in the colloquial language itself. It will be seen that the contracted forms of the conjugation of the verb are freely used, and are written in their contracted shape in vernacular character. The first specimen also comes from Calcutta, and is in the colloquial dialect used by women. A transliteration is given in the Roman character. It has not been thought necessary to add a phonetic transcription, as all that is necessary, in order to obtain the sounds expressed by the letters, is to follow the rules of pronunciation given in the skeleton grammar. Here and there, in special instances, the phonetic transcription is given after certain words. As regards grammar, note that the 3rd sg. past of transitive verbs often ends in ē, instead of a. Thus dilē, for dila.

এক জনের দুই ছেলে ছেল। তাদের যে ছোট, সে তার বাপকে বল্লে, বাবা, আমার ভাগে যা পড়ে তা আমাকে দাও। বাপ্ তার বিষয় আশয় তাদের মধ্যে বেঁটে দিলে। দিন কতক পরে ছোট ছেলে তার সমস্ত জিনিস পত্তর নিয়ে দূর দেশে চলে গেল; সেখানে বদফেয়ালি করে সমস্ত উড়িয়ে দিলে। যখন তার সব গেল, তখন সে দেশে ভারি অকাল এল; সেও কষ্টে পড়ে গেল। তখন সে সেই দেশের একজন লোকের কাছে গিয়ে জুটলো; আর সে তাকে তার সোর চরাতে মাঠে পাঠালে। সোরের খাবার ভুসি দে নিজের পেট ভরাতে পার্লেও সে বেঁচে যেত, কিন্তু তাও কেউ তাকে দেয় নি। যখন তার হুঁস হল, তখন সে বলতে লাগল, আমার বাপের কত মাইনের চাকর ফেলে ছড়িয়ে ভাত খাচ্ছে, আর আমি কিনা না খেতে পেয়ে মারা যাচ্ছি। আমি বাবার কাছে যাই আর তাঁকে বলিগে, বাবা, আমি পর্মেস্বরের আর তোমার কাছে অপরাধ করিচি, তোমার ছেলে বলে পরিচয় দেবার যুগি নই; তুমি আমাকে তোমার একজন মাইনের চাকরের মত রাখ। এই বলে সে তার বাপের কাছে গেল। কিন্তু সে অনেক তফাতে থাকতেই তার বাপ্ তাকে দেখতে পেয়ে স্নেহে ছুটে গেল আর তার গলা জড়িয়ে চুমো খেলে। তখন ছেলে বল্লে, বাবা, আমি পর্মেস্বরের আর তোমার কাছে অপরাধ করিচি, আর তোমার ছেলে বলে পরিচয় দেবার যুগি নই। কিন্তু বাপ্ চাকরদের বল্লে, ভাল ভাল কাপড় নিয়ে আয় আর ওকে পরিচয় দে, ওর হাতে একটা আংটা দে, আর পায়ে জুতো দে, আমরা খাই দাই আর আমোদ করি। আমার এ ছেলে মরে আবার বেঁচেছে, একে হারিয়ে পেয়েছি। তারপর তারা আমোদ আহ্লাদ কর্তে লাগল ॥

এতক্ষণ বড় ভাই মাঠে ছেল। যখন সে বাড়ীর কাছে এল, তখন নাচ গাওনা শুনতে পেল। একজন চাকরকে ডেকে জিগ্গেস্ কর্লে ব্যাওরা খানা কি? সে বল্লে, তোমার ভাই এসেছে; তাকে ভালয় ভালয় ফিরে পেয়ে তোমার বাবা ভোজ দিয়েছে। সে রাগ করে ভিতরে গেল না। তার বাপ্ বেরিয়ে এসে তাকে পীড়াপীড়ি কর্তে লাগল। সে বাপকে উত্তর কর্লে, দেখ, এত বৎসর ধরে আমি তোমার স্যাঁবা কল্লুম, আর কখন তোমার কথা অমান্য করিনি, তবু তুমি আমাকে কখন একটা ছাগল ছানাও দেও নি যে, আমি বন্ধুবান্ধব নিয়ে একটু আমোদ করি। কিন্তু রাঁড়বাজি করে তোমার সর্বস্ব উড়িয়ে দিয়ে যেই তোমার এই ছেলে ফিরে এল, অমনি তুমি তার জন্তে এক ভোজ দিলে। সে তাকে বল্লে, তুমি বাবা আমার কাছে বরাবরই আছ, আমার যা সব তোমারই। আমরা যে আমোদ আহ্লাদ কর্ছি তাই ঠিক হচ্ছে; তোমার এ ভাই মরে আবার বেঁচেছে, একে হারিয়ে পেয়েছি ॥

The next specimen has been prepared by Mahāmahōpadhyāya Paṇḍit Mahēśa Chandra Nyāyaratna, C.I.E., and represents the colloquial dialect of the West of Howrah District, of which part of the country that gentleman is a native. It is accompanied by a transcription in the Roman character, and also by a phonetic transcription. The principle of phonetic transcription adopted by him, is not exactly the same as that used in preceding specimens, but this is an advantage rather than otherwise, as the sounds in Bengali are so difficult to express accurately, that one system can be used to control the other.

STANDARD COLLOQUIAL DIALECT.

কোন লোকের দুটি ছেলে ছিল। তাদের মধ্যে ছোটটি তার বাপকে বল্লে, বাবা, আমার ভাগে বিষয়ের যা পড়ে তা আমাকে দিন। তাতে সে তার বিষয় তাদিকে ভাগ করে দিলে। অল্প দিন পরে ছোট ছেলে তার অংশের সব বিষয় একত্রে জড় করে নিয়ে দূর দেশে চলে গেল, আর সেখানে বদ-খেয়ালি করে সর্বস্ব উড়িয়ে দিলে। যখন তার সব খরচ হয়ে গেল তখন সে দেশে ভয়ানক আকাল হল। তাতে তার অচল হয়ে পড়ল। তখন সে সেই দেশের এক জন লোকের কাছে গিয়ে জুটল। সে তাকে আপনার মাটে শোর চরাতে পাটালে। তখন সে শোরের খাবার খোসা দিয়েও পেট পোরাতে পাল্লে খুসী হত, কিন্তু তাও তাকে কেউ দিলে নেই। পরে যখন তার হুঁস হল তখন সে মনে মনে বল্লে, আমার বাপের কত মাইনে-করা চাকর দরকারের চেয়ে বেশী খোরাক পাচ্ছে, আর আমি পেটের জ্বালায় মারা যাচ্ছি! আমি উটি, বাবার কাছে যাই, আর তাঁকে বলি, বাবা, আমি আপনার সামনে ভগবানের কাছে পাপ করিচি; আমি আর আপনার ছেলে বল্বার যোগ্য নই; আমাকে আপনার এক জন মাইনে-করা চাকরের মত করে রাখুন। তার পর সে উটে তার বাপের কাছে চলে এল। দূর থেকে তার বাপ তাকে দেখতে পেলে, দেকে তার দয়া হল, আর সে দৌড়ে গিয়ে তার ছেলের গলা জড়িয়ে ধরে চুম খেলে। তখন ছেলে বল্লে, বাবা, আমি আপনার সামনে ভগবানের কাছে পাপ করিচি; আমি আর আপনার ছেলে বল্বার যোগ্য নই। কিন্তু তার বাপ চাকরদের বল্লে, সব চেয়ে ভাল পোষাক এনে একে পরিয়ে দে, এর হাতে একটি আঙুটি ও পায়ে জুত পরিয়ে দে, আর আয় আমরা খাওয়া-দাওয়া ও আমোদ-আল্লাদ করি; কারণ আমার এ ছেলে মরে গেছল, এখন আবার বেঁচেচে; একে হারিয়ে ছিলুম, এখন একে ফিরে পেয়িচি। তার পর তারা আমোদ-আল্লাদ কত্তে লাগল।

তখন তার বড় ছেলে মাটে ছিল। মাট থেকে যখন সে বাড়ীর কাছে এল বাড়ীতে নাচ ও গান-বাজনা হচ্ছে শুনতে পেল। তখন সে এক জন চাকরকে ডেকে জিঞ্জীসা কল্লে, এ সব হচ্ছে কেন? চাকর বল্লে, আপনার ভাই ফিরে এসেচেন; তাঁকে ভালয় ভালয় ফিরে পেয়েচেন বলে আপনার বাপ একটা ভোজ দিচ্ছেন। এই শুনে সে রেগে গেল, আর বাড়ীর ভেতর ঢুকতে চাইলে নেই। তাতে তার বাপ বেরিয়ে এল, ও তাকে সাধা-সাধি কল্লে। তখন সে বাপকে উত্তর কল্লে, দেখুন, আমি এত বছর ধরে আপনার কর্ম্ম-কাজ কচ্ছি, ও কখনই আপনার আঙের লজ্জন করি নেই; তবু আপনি কখন আমাকে একটি ছাগল-চেনাও দেন নেই যে আমার বন্ধুদের সঙ্গে আমোদ করি; কিন্তু আপনার যে ছেলে বেশে নিয়ে আপনার বিষয় উড়িয়ে দেচে, সে ফিরে আস্‌বামাত্র আপনি তার জন্যে ভোজ দিচ্ছেন। তখন তার বাপ বল্লে, বাছা, তুমি সর্বদাই আমার কাছে আচ, আর আমার যা কিছু আছে তা সবই তোমার; কিন্তু তোমার এই ভাই মরে গেছল, এখন আবার বেঁচেচে; একে হারিয়ে ছিলুম, এখন একে ফিরে পেয়িচি; এ জন্যে আমাদের খুসী হওয়া ও আমোদ-আল্লাদ করা উচিত।

Such is thy justice, my mother! Misfortune is the lot of him that repeats the name of Durgā (thy name) day and night. I have filed my plaint (in thy court, before thee), my mother, and here do I stand with joined palms (praying for justice). When wilt thou hear my case and relieve me from my misfortune? How can I argue my case? I have no intelligence in me; but my only hope is the word of Śiva—which also agrees with what the Vedas and the Āgamas say (i.e., that Durgā will listen to prayer and grant relief). Prasād says—From fear of the God of Death I wish that I could run away (from his reach). Mayst thou ordain that I shall die on the banks of the Jāhnavī (Ganges) uttering the name of Durgā in the last moment, (and so by attaining salvation be beyond the reach of the God of Death).

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

Say (oh say) my mother Tārā, where shall I take my stand ? I have none (to look up to) here, O Śaṅkari. It is commonly seen that where the father dotes on (the mother) he also loves (the mother's child). But it is fruitless to try to secure the love of a father who holds (one's) step-mother on his head. If thou dost not bestow thy kindness (on me), shall I go to my step-mother (Gaṅgā, whom Śiva holds on his head) ? If my step-mother takes me up in her lap (i.e., if I die on the banks of the Ganges) all the troubles of my mind will be gone (i.e., I shall attain salvation). Prasād says that the Vēdas and the Āgamas declare this, (viz., that whoever dies on the banks of the Ganges attains Salvation). But, O my mother, he who is thy worshipper, obtaineth the mendicant's wallet and old rags (i.e., he becomes a wandering mendicant and his salvation is uncertain).

The next specimen has also been furnished by Mahāmahōpadhyāya Mahēśa Chandra Nyāyaratna, C.I.E., and also comes from Howrah. But it is in the extreme colloquial style used by women of the better classes. It will be observed that contraction is carried to an extreme, and that the vowel a more often sounds as a short ō than as anything else. The transcription is phonetic.

It is usually stated that Standard Bengali is not spoken in the District of Midnapore. This, however, is not the fact. It is true that the dialect of Central Midnapore is the South-Western variety of Bengal, which is shading off into Oriyā, and which has as great a title to be called a dialect of that language as of Bengali; but in the east and north of the District, the dialect closely resembles the Standard Bengali spoken in the neighbouring District of Howrah. This will be manifest from the two following specimens. The first is from Ghatal, and the second from Tamluk. The first is in the north-east and the second in the south-east of the District. In the extreme north of the District, near Garhbeta, the dialect partakes somewhat of the Western Bengali of Bankura. For further particulars regarding the Bengali spoken in Midnapore, see the section on South-Western Bengali.

Standard Bengali is also spoken in the Districts of Nadia and Murshidabad. It is unnecessary to give translations of the Parable of the Prodigal Son, but, instead, for Nadia, is given the report of a conversation between two villagers regarding the earthquake of 1897, and, for Murshidabad, a popular religious song. Both are in the extremely contracted style.

O soul, meditate and see, no one belongs to anyone.

False are the illusions in this world. Hast thou not worshipped the Teacher's feet?
 Hast thou become entangled in the net of illusion?

O soul, meditate, etc.

She, for whose sake, O soul, thou diest meditating, will she go with thee? After thou art dead, thy life-darling will sprinkle the outer doors.

O soul, meditate, etc.

Thyself and thy family, they only are a struggle of illusion. Except the name of God, naught else will go with thee on that day.

O soul, meditate, etc.

For two or three days art thou the master of the house, and people call thee 'Master, Master.' But the Master of Time will take thee away to the presence of the Master of the World beyond.

O soul, meditate, etc.

In the District of Burdwan, we find the Standard Bengali gradually merging into the form which is generally recognised as the Western Dialect. In the east of the district, however, it still belongs to the standard type, though with some irregularities. The following example comes from the Katwa Sub-division, in the north-east of the district, and may be taken as a sample of the language spoken in the east of Burdwan. The style is contracted. Note that the third person singular of the past tense of transitive verbs often ends in ē instead of in a (ō), and that an initial ē is often represented by yā, pronounced yā. Thus ēk-tā is written yāk-tā, pronounced yākṭā. Note also that aspirated letters are often disaspirated, as in kāchē for kāchhē, uṭē for uṭhiyā, and many other instances.

II.—WESTERN BENGALI.

The Western dialect of Bengali is spoken in its extreme form in the east of the Chota Nagpur Division, in the District of Manbhum, and in the tract called Dhalbhum, in the east of the Singhbhum District. It is bordered on the west by the Muṇḍa dialects of Chota Nagpur, by the Bihārī spoken in the North and Centre of Chota Nagpur, and by the Oṛiyā of that Division spoken in the south of the Singhbhum District. Going east, we find it spoken in the Birbhum and Bankura Districts, and in the western portion of the Burdwan District, especially about Raniganj, but in these Districts it gradually merges into Central or Standard Bengali. As already stated when speaking of that dialect, it is impossible to fix any definite line as dividing the two Districts in Burdwan. All that we can do is to estimate that of the Bengali-speaking population of that district. We may say that a million speak the Western dialect. Western Bengali is also spoken, principally by immigrant Kuṛmīs, in the north of the Orissa Native States of Keonjhar and Mayūrbhanja, while the language of the mass of the people is Oṛiyā. Similarly, it is spoken in the Eastern and Southern portions of the Sonthal Parganas by immigrants from the plains, who have settled among the aboriginal inhabitants (see map facing this page). Here, however, it has no other Aryan language with which to compete, as is the case in the Orissa Native States, except in a small tract south and east of Deoghur (Dēogarh) where Bihārī and Bengali overlap, the former being spoken by natives of Bihār, and the latter by natives of Bengal.

On the western boundary of this dialect, there are various mixed dialects which are generally known as Khoṭṭā, or Impure, Bengali. It is often difficult to say whether these should be classed as dialects of Bengali, or of the neighbouring Bihārī. For instance, there is the curious dialect bearing many names, but which is usually known as Kuṛmālī, spoken in Manbhum, Singhbhum and the neighbouring Native States. This is sometimes written in the Bengali, sometimes in the Kaithī, and sometimes in the Oṛiyā, character. Closely connected with it are the so-called Bengali of Hazaribagh, and the Pāch-parganiā dialect spoken in East Ranchi. These, on the ground that their grammatical basis is distinctly that of Bihārī, I have classed as dialects of that language, although, in the case of Hazaribagh, it is called Bengali by the local authorities. On the other hand, there are two mixed dialects whose grammatical basis is that of Bengali, and these I have classed as sub-dialects of Western Bengali. One of these is the language spoken by the Jains in the south-east of the Ranchi District, a District, be it remembered, of which the language of the main bulk of the population is not Bengali. It is called indifferently by the surrounding people, whose language is a form of Bihārī, Khoṭṭā Baṅgalā, Sarāwakī or Sarākī. The last two names are derived from Śrāwak, one of the names of the Jain community. It is reported as spoken by 48,127 people in the Ranchi District. The other mixed sub-dialect is spoken by the aboriginal tribe of Khariās who inhabit the hills in the south of Manbhum. The Khariās of Manbhum have abandoned their own tribal language, which belongs to the Muṇḍa family, and speak a broken Bengali. A similar dialect is spoken by the Pahariās of the same neighbourhood, and the form of speech is known either as Khariā-ṭhār or as Pahariā-ṭhār, according to the speakers. It is reported as spoken by 2,760 people. Finally, the Māl Pahāriās of the centre of the Sonthal Parganas have, like the Khariās, abandoned their own Dravidian tongue, and speak a corrupt form of the language of their Bengali neighbours. They are 12,801 in number.

We thus find that Western Bengali is spoken by the following number of people :—

Name of District.	Number of speakers.
Bardwan	1,000,000
Bankura	965,527
Birbhum	575,500
Sonthal Parganas	284,682
Manbhum	904,930
Singhbhum	106,686
Mayūrbhanja and Keonjhar (Native States)	51,521
Lohardaga (Sarāki)	48,127
Manbhum (Khariā-ṭhār)	2,760
Sonthal Parganas (Māl Pahāriā)	12,801
TOTAL	3,952,534

The Western dialect differs principally from Standard Bengali, in having a broader pronunciation. Thus a long ō is often substituted for the a of Standard Bengali, e.g., bōllē (pronounced bollē), he said, for balila (pronounced bolilō); hōla (pr. hōlō) for haīla, he was. On the other hand a Standard Bengali o often becomes u. Thus chhuṭu, small, for chhōṭa (pr. chhōṭō); tumār, of you, for tōmār. The vowel ē is often written ā, and is then pronounced ā, like the short a in hat. Thus ēk, one, is pronounced āk, and gēla (pronounced gēlō), he went, is often written gāla, and pronounced gālō.

The letter l is frequently substituted for n. Thus, we have lai (pronounced lōy), I am not, for naī; lāch, a dance, for nāch; lā, a boat, for nā; ladī, a river, for nadī.

The dialect is fond of nasalizing the final vowel of a verb, thus khāyē, instead of khāyē (contracted for khāiyā), having eaten; karī for kari, let us make.

The old singular forms of the personal pronouns (mui, I; tui, thou) are frequently used instead of the standard ami and tumi.

In the conjugation of verbs, the old singular forms, which are obsolete in Standard Bengali, are frequently met with. Thus māgli, I asked for, instead of the standard māgilām; balli (pr. bolli) for balilām. So in the second person we find āchhis, for āchha, thou art, and so on.

In the third person of the past tense we find the three following terminations, ō, with intransitive, and ē and ēk with transitive verbs. Thus hōlō, 'he was,' ballē, or ballēk, 'he said,' instead of the standard balila (pr. bollō).

The tendency to contract verbal forms is very marked in the Conjunctive Participle of causal verbs. Thus, we have uriyē for urāiyā, having caused to fly, and buliyē for bolāiyā, having summoned.

The first two specimens come from Manbhum, a transliteration and interlinear translation are given. It has not been considered necessary to give a phonetic, as well as a literal, transliteration. In a few special instances, the pronunciation of a word is given in parenthesis, as for the rest, the general rules for the pronunciation of Standard Bengali apply.

The first specimen is a translation of the Parable of the Prodigal Son. The second is the statement of an accused person, recorded in Court in his own language. In the former, note the word his'ā, share. The s' is an attempt to represent a double s. As pointed out when explaining the pronunciation of Standard Bengali, the v is not pronounced, and the preceding s is pronounced as if it was doubled.

In the following specimen,—a statement of a person accused with theft, it is necessary to draw attention to the manner in which it is attempted to represent a double letter. This is done by adding a '. Thus bas'ē is pronounced bōshshē, for basiyā, having sat down. So sudh'āl'ēk is pronounced shuddhallēk, he (or they) enquired. Again dil'ēk, is pronounced dillēk.

The next two specimens come from Dhalbhum, the eastern portion of the Singhbhum District. It is slightly infected with the idiom of the neighbouring Oriyā language also spoken in the same district and in the North-West of Midnapore: thus, kari for kariyā, having done; jāi kari for jāiyā, having gone; and āni kari for āniyā, having brought; are Oriyā rather than Bengali.

The first specimen is a translation of the Parable of the Prodigal Son, and the second a villager's account of his adventures in the forest. Both are given in transliteration only with an interlinear translation. The ordinary rules for pronunciation should be followed. Note the attempt to represent a double 's,' in the word hīs'ā.

These specimens may also be taken as illustrating the dialect spoken by the Kurmis of the north-western portion of Mayūrbhanja and Keonjhar States.

The next two specimens come from the west of the Burdwan District. They are excellent examples of the language spoken in that tract, and in the Districts of Birbhum and Bankura and in the South and East of the Sonthal Parganas. Considerable care has evidently been taken in recording peculiarities of the local pronunciation.

The principal peculiarity is the tendency shown to disaspirate aspirated letters. Thus we have maddē for madh^hē, among; uṭē, for uṭhiyā, having arisen; kāchē for kāchhē, near; biruddē for biruddhē, in opposition; dēktē for dēkhitē, to see; sumukē for saṁmukhē; karichi, I have done; ṣiggir for ṣighra, quickly; katā for kathā, a word; bādu for bandhu, a friend. Note also forms like saggēr for s^hargēr, of heaven; which illustrates the common tendency amongst all Bengali speakers to drop an r at the commencement of a compound letter, and to double the other member of the compound in compensation. The word pēlē for pāilē is the frank adoption of the ordinary pronunciation. The forms of the negative auxiliary are instructive. They are nēi, I am not; nīi, thou art not. They are also used like the standard nāi, to represent a past negative with the present tense, āmi churi kari nēi, I did not commit theft; tumi dāo nīi, thou didst not give. This is quite different from Standard Bengali, in which naī or nahī is the negative auxiliary, while nāi gives a past negative sense to a present tense.

In the second specimen, we have the old first person singular of the past,—giyēchhinu for giyāchhīlām.

The first specimen is the Parable of the Prodigal Son. The second is a portion of the statement of a person accused of theft. Both are transcribed in the Roman character, and represent the pronunciation according to Standard Bengali principles of spelling. The rules for the pronunciation of Standard Bengali must, therefore, be applied when reading them.

A variety of this western dialect of Bengali is spoken by the Sarāwak Mānjhīs, a well-to-do cultivating and trading caste of Jains, who live in the Tamār and Khuntī Thanās, in the extreme South-East of the Rānchī District, where it is called Khottā Bāṅgalā, Sarāwakī, or Sarākī. The difference between it and Western Bengali is so slight that it is not worthy of the title of a separate dialect. The following translation of the Parable of the Prodigal Son is in this dialect.

Note the typical Western Bengali preference of ō for a in words like daulōtēr, of wealth; mōrchhū, I die; kōśbī, a harlot. As usual, there is a tendency to elide an unaccented i. Thus, khātēk, he used to eat; hatē, to be; jātē, to go; nijālēk, he went; pālēk, he got; and many others. As usual, also, a medial h is liable to elision. Thus, kāilēk, he said; rāilēk, he was; rāitē, remaining. There is a tendency for ī to become ē, as in the word pēchhu, after.

In the declension of nouns, the nominative plural termination rā is carried through the oblique cases, so that we have as accusatives plural chākar-rā-kē, servants; mītān-rā-kē, friends; and as a genitive plural, kōśbī-rā-dēr, of harlots.

In regard to pronouns note the singular mūi, I; and the form hāmarā, we, borrowed from the hamārā, we, of Bihārī which is the main language of Ranchi.

As regards verbs, there is a peculiar form hēkē, for 'is,' which is borrowed from the Bihārī hikāi, which we meet in Magahī. Similarly, we have the Bihārī form rahē, meaning, 'he was.' The word lāgũ is used to mean, 'I am.'

The first person singular ends in the old termination ũ. Thus, lāgũ, just mentioned; mōrchhũ, I am dying; karichhũ, I have done; and so on. The first person singular of the Future ends in mu. Thus, pāmu, I shall get; jāmu, I shall go; kaĩmu, I shall say. The third singular of the Past usually ends in ēk in all verbs, both transitive and intransitive. Thus, nijālēk, he went; pālēk, he got; and many others.

There is a peculiar form of the Conjunctive Participle in iyār, which should be noted. Thus jāiyār, having gone; kariyār, having done; uthiyār, having arisen; āniyār, having brought; āsiyār, having come; ḍākiyār, having called; and śuniyār, having heard.

The specimen is not a very satisfactory one, as the writer has shown a tendency to revert to the forms of standard Bengali. Nevertheless, a sufficient number of genuine forms have been left to give a good idea of the peculiarities of the dialect.

* Bengali.

Another but much more corrupt variety of Western Bengali is the patois spoken in the hills of the Dalmā range in Barābhūm in the south of Manbhum. It is spoken in slightly different forms by the Khariās and by the Pahariās. The Khariās are an aboriginal tribe of Chota Nagpur whose proper language belongs to the Mundā or Kolarian family. Those who have settled in Manbhum have abandoned their ancestral language, and speak this broken Bengali. The bulk of the tribe is to be found in the District of Lohardaga, and there they speak their own language. Those of Manbhum are a wilder and less civilised tribe than their brethren of that District. An account of them by the late Mr. V. Ball will be found in the Proceedings of the Asiatic Society of Bengal for 1868, which is quoted on p. 285 of the Statistical Account of the District. The Pahariās are a cognate race to the Khariās, and inhabit the same hills. See the Statistical Account of the District, p. 288.

The patois is called Khariā-ṭhār or Pahariā-ṭhār, according to the speakers. The number of speakers returned is as follows:—

District.	Dialect.	Number of Speakers.
Manbhum	Khariā-ṭhār	2,298
"	Pahariā-ṭhār	462
	TOTAL	2,760

As in the case of the Kurmāli dialect of Bihārī, we meet Bihārī forms mixed up with Bengali ones, but not to so great an extent as in that form of speech. In Kurmāli, Bihārī forms predominate, and the dialect is classed under Bihārī; but in Khariā-ṭhār, the basis of the dialect is evidently Bengali. The following is an account of the peculiarities of the Khariā-ṭhār as illustrated by the two specimens immediately following:—

I.—PRONUNCIATION—

A Bengali a (pronounced in Bengali as ō, or o) frequently becomes u. Thus, kuri, for kari, having done; muri, having died; bunib, for baliba, I will say; dhuri, having caught; kunnu, for karinu, I did; bilum, for bilamba, delay; munē, in (my) mind; dilu, for dila, he gave; and many others. An ai, becomes indifferently, ē, i or a. Thus hēnāk, hināk or hanāk, for hailek, he became; hibāk, it will be.

In the case of the word munāk for mārilēk, ā has become u.

The letter ē (pronounced in Bengali as é or ě), frequently becomes ā, which is pronounced as ā, like the a in hat. Thus, yāhak, pronounced yāhōk, for ēk, one; kunāk, pronounced kunnāk, for karilek, he did; hēnāk, pronounced hēnnāk, for hailek, he became; bunāk, for balilek, he said; sār, pr. shār, a sēr-weight.

The y is sometimes dropped. Thus kahināk, he said; hināk, it became.

The letter ō is frequently changed to a (pronounced ō as in hot). Thus nak, for lōk, a person; chhatkā, for chhōtkā, small, young; char, for chōr, a thief, and others.

So u and ū become a in māṛash, for mānush, a man; bhakē, for bhūkhe, hunger.

Au becomes ai, in dailat, wealth.

As regards consonants, there is a tendency to aspiration, as in dhūr, for dūr, distant. So, h is inserted, as in yāhak (yāhōk) for ēk, one; chaharātē, for charātē, to feed.

The letter n is liable to become r, with nasalisation of the preceding vowel.

Thus mūrish, for munis, a servant; śūri for śuni, having heard; jīris, for jinis, things; mārash, for mānush, a man. This is really an attempt to pronounce a cerebral n, the sound of which has been lost in Bengali, but which still exists in Oriyā and in the languages of Western India. At the beginning of a word, it becomes l, in lahi, I am not; lay, is not.

The letter l sometimes becomes r, as in sakar, for sakal, all; ākār, a famine; nikri, having come out; but it more usually becomes n, as in nak, for lōk, a person; kahināk, he said; hanāk, it happened; gēnāk, I am gone, or he went; āsnēk, he came; kunnu, for karilu, karinu, I committed; nāgnēk, for lāgilēk, they began; bhan for bhāla, good; and many others.

The letter y, added to a consonant doubles it, and is not itself pronounced. Thus nād̐y, pr. nād̐du, sweetmeats.

Of course, ś, sh and s are all indifferently pronounced as sh.

Note the curious word dhāimēnā, running,—apparently a corruption of dhāvamāna.

II.—NOUNS—

(a) Pleonastic Suffixes,—These are ta (gen. tār), and gā. Both are common. Thus, dui-tā, two; chāō-tā, the son; dailat-tār, of wealth; chhāo-gā, the son; sakar-gā, all; hāt-gā, the hand.

(b) The Accusative-Dative usually ends in kē. Thus bābbā-kē, to the father. Note, however, ghara-k jāt, going to the house.

(c) The Genitive is regular. Thus, nakēr, of a person; babbār, of a father, but ghara-k pās (Bihārī), near the house.

(d) The Instrumental-Locative usually ends in ē. Thus, mājhē, in; gharē, in a house; bhakē, by hunger; and many others.

Sometimes it ends in t. Thus gēnā-t, on going; buniyā-t, on saying.

(e) The signs of the Ablative are hātē and thēkē. Thus dhūr hātē, from a distance; mahar hāt-gā hātē, from my hand; naukā thēkē, from the boat.

(f) The Plural seems, as a rule, to be the same as the singular. When necessary, regular Bengali forms are used.

III.—PRONOUNS—

First Person,—muī, I; mahar, my; mahar-kē, muī-kē, me, to me; muī-rā, we. In the phrase muī dōsh hanāk, by me a fault has been, it seems as if muī was in the case of the Agent, or Instrumental. Cf. Hindūstānī, mujh sē dōsh huā.

Second Person,—tūī, thou; tāhar, tahar, thy.

Third Person,—sē, he; tāī, he (correlative); tāhar, tāhār, his; tāhar-kē, tahar-kē, him, to him; tāha-tē, on that; tāharā, tāhārā, they; tāhārdēr, of them; tāhar-dikē, to them.

Ēhāy, on this.

Adjectives,—ēī, this; sēī, ai, that.

Relative,—y(j)ē.

Others,—Anything, kichhu, kis; anyone, kēha; any, kōn (not kōnō).

IV.—VERBS—

In these there are the wildest irregularities. The most conspicuous is the want of sense of person. Forms for each person occur, but the third person singular seems to be capable of being used for all three persons. For examples, see below :—

A.—Auxiliary Verbs, and Verbs Substantive—

- (1) Present,—lahi, I am not; āchhay, thou art; āhay, it is; āchkē-y, they are, even; lay, is not.
- (2) Future,—hib'āk (pron. hibbāk), he will be.
- (3) Past,—han'āk (hōnnāk), hin'āk, hēn'āk, hēnāk, he was, it happened, etc.
All corruptions of Bengali hailēk.
Chhinā, rahinā, rahin, hēnā (corresponding to Bihārī, chhalā, rahalā, rahal, halā), he was, they were.
- (4) Past Participle,—hēnā, in gāṛ-hēnā, fattened.

The forms gēnā and hēnā are often used as an auxiliary, in the place of the Bengali chhila.

B.—Finite Verb—

- (1) Present,—kāṭu-ni, I did not transgress; jānu-nāi, I do not know; pāi-nāi, I did not get; pārum, they can; pāy, they get.
- (2) Imperfect,—kinit-gēnā (gēnā=Bengali gēla, used instead of chhila), I was selling, thou wast (art) selling; dēkhīt gēnā, I was seeing.
- (3) Future,—jām, I will go; dīm, we shall give; bunib, I will say.
(In colloquial Bengali, the m forms are common, in the case of verbs whose roots end in vowels, like dē, give; jā, go.)
- (4) Imperative,—kurī, let us make; dē, give; āśa, come; din, give me (respectful); rākhim, keep me (respectful).
- (5) Past,—First Person,—Regular is gēnām (= gēlām), I went. Usually it ends in nu. Thus kunnu, I committed; dēkhnu, I saw; jānnu (pr. jānnu), I knew; dhunnu, I caught.

Sometimes the form of the third person is used thus,—muri gēnāk, I am dead; kuñnāk, I said; kun'āk, I did; dēnāk, I gave.

Second Person,—din nāi, thou didst not give; mun'āk (form of 3rd person), thou hast killed.

Third Person,—There are several forms, which may be grouped as follows :—

- (a) Bengali forms in lēk,—āsneḱ, he came; dilēk, he gave; nāgnēk, they began; hanēk, there was.
- (b) Corresponding to the same,—in n'āk (āk),—kun'āk, he did; han'āk (etc., see Aux. verbs), it happened; ban'āk, bun'āk, he said; āsn'āk, he came; mān'āk, he killed; kuñn'āk, they said; dhan'āk, they caught; in nāk,—kahināk, kuhināk, he said; dhāināk, he ran; āsnāk, he came; hitnāk, (?) they made (pārayā nāgīt utu-putu hitnāk, they made an attempt for fleeing); ghuriyānāk, they returned.
- (c) Corresponding to Bengali forms in la,—rahnu (= rahila, pr. rōhilō), he remained; dinu, he sent; pānu, he got; mānu-i, he did not even desire; ninu (= laīla), he took.

- (d) Corresponding to Bihārī forms in lā,—gēnā, he went; nigānā, they carried off.
- (e) Corresponding to Bihārī forms in l,—bāch'ān, he survived (= Bihārī bāchāēl, for bāchal).
- (f) dim, he gave; khām, he ate. Possibly, there are Historical Presents, cf. parum, they can, above.
- (g) dit-nā, he did not give; nāgat, he began; nāgay, they began. Possibly, these also are Historical Presents.
- (6) Perfect and Pluperfect,—kari hēnā (3rd person for first), I have done; māqi hīkāk (3rd person for first), I asked; dēkhi hēna (3rd person for first), I saw; kuri hinā, he has done; bāch buni hēn'āk, he spoke; mari ginu hēnā, he had died; bāch hēnā, he has survived.
- (7) Present Participle,—asit, coming; kinit, selling; dēkhit, seeing; śūrit, hearing.
- (8) Infinitive,—(a) chaharātē, to feed; pindhātē, to put on; māri ditē, to kill; anhātē, to stop.
(b) nibrāt, to finish; sudhāt, to ask; jāt, to go; dēkhit, to see; chālāt, to ply; chihirit, to make a noise.
- (9) Verbal Noun,—pārayā, fleeing; hanāy (loc.), on their being; gēnāt (loc.), on going; buniyāt (loc.), on saying.
- (10) Conditional Participle,—gēnāhi, going.
- (11) Conjunctive Participle,—The Bihārī form in i, is the most usual. Thus,—bāṭi, having divided; kuri, having done; and many others. So rāhi kuri, having remained; thāki kuri, living; uṭhi kuri, having arisen; āni kuri, having brought, which are also Bihārī.

Other forms are—

(b) āsā, coming; hēnā, being; nignā, taking; ānā, taking.

(c) khāyē kuri, having eaten; khāyam, having eaten; chihirik, calling.

An instance of the Passive is pānu gēnā, he was found.

An instance of an Inceptive Compound is kuri nāgnēk, they began to make.

An instance of an Acquisitive Compound is dēkhit pāi nāi, I could not see.

Of the following specimens one is a translation of the Parable of the Prodigal Son, and the other is a statement of an accused person.

MAL-PAHĀRIĀ.

The last variety of Western Bengali is the dialect spoken by the Māl-Pahāriās, a Dravidian tribe which has abandoned its original customs and language, and has become Hinduised. Its present language is a corrupt Bengali, included in which, like flies in amber, we meet, here and there, a stray word of Dravidian birth. According to Mr. Risley, their latest describer, the tribe is probably of common origin with the Mālēs of Rajmahāl, who still speak a Dravidian language. But its members have become so thoroughly Hinduised, and are so shocked at the impure practices of their northern cousins, that they deny all relationship.

The Māl-Pahāriās inhabit the centre portion of the District of the Sonthal Parganas and the adjoining portion of the Birbhum District, but the dialect associated with their name is only reported from the former district. The map opposite p. 59 shows the locality in which it is spoken. The number of speakers is estimated at 12,801. Hitherto, hardly anything was known about the language of this interesting people. From their Dravidian origin, and from the fact that a few words of the meagre vocabulary, which is all that has been available, are Dravidian, it has been provisionally assumed that it belonged to the Dravidian family. The following specimen, for which I am indebted to the Rev. L. O. Skrefsrud of Benagaria, shows, however, that it is merely a corrupt Bengali.

The following are the authorities which I have seen regarding the Māl-Pahāriās:—

BUCHANAN-HAMILTON, Dr. Francis, apud The History, Antiquities, Topography, and Statistics of Eastern India, by MONTGOMERY MARTIN. London, 1838. There is an account of the tribe on p. 126 of Vol. II.

DALTON, Edward Tuite, C.S.I., Descriptive Ethnology of Bengal. Calcutta, 1872. Account of the tribe on p. 274. Vocabulary, p. 302.

HUNTER, Sir W. W., LL.D., K.C.S.I., Statistical Account of Bengal, Vol. XIV, Bhāgalpur and the Santāl Parganās. London, 1877. Account of the tribe on p. 298.

RISLEY, H. H., C.I.E., The Tribes and Castes of Bengal. Calcutta, 1891. Vol. II. p. 66.

The language of the Māl-Pahāriās closely resembles the Khariā-ṭhār spoken in Manbhum, of which examples have just been given. It is not, therefore, necessary to give a full analysis of the various grammatical forms presented in the version of the Parable printed below. The following remarks will be sufficient.

As in Khariā-ṭhār, every n becomes cerebralised to ṇ, which is strongly pronounced as in Oriyā and Western India. In the Bengali language, the letter ṇ has lost its proper pronunciation, and is pronounced like an ordinary dental n. Hence a new device has to be coined for representing the true sound of ṇ. This is done, in the case of Māl-Pahāriā, by writing the letter ण̃, i.e., the letter ṇ, with the following vowel nasalised. Whenever this occurs, I have transliterated the whole as ṇ.

In the conjugation of verbs, the third person singular of the past tense ends in -ā̃, as in ballā̃, he said. The following forms of the Perfect may be noted:—

kērīṇhha, I have done.

diṇāṇhas, thou hast given.

bāchīṇhā̃, he has survived.

The Conjunctive Participle is formed by adding hēnak, as in guṭiā̃i-hēnak, having collected; gāṇē-hēnak, having gone; and many other instances.

III.—SOUTH-WESTERN BENGALI.

This dialect is spoken in Central Midnapore. It is bounded on the east and north by the Standard dialect spoken in those portions of the District, and on the south and west by the Oriyā of Midnapore and of Mayūrbhanja. It touches the sea in the Nandigrām Thana. It covers a small area, and might almost be classed as a mixed sub-dialect of Standard Bengali and Oriyā. It differs considerably, however, from both languages, and possesses peculiarities of its own which entitle it to be classed as an independent dialect, and not as a mere mixture.

It is spoken by 346,502 people.

I am indebted for the following account of the languages of Midnapore to a note which has been furnished to me by Babu Krishna Kishor Acharji, the Secretary of the Midnapore District Board. Three main languages are spoken in this District, namely, Bengali, Oriyā, and Santālī. The last is a tribal language, and not a local one. It is spoken by the Santāls of the west of the District in Thanas Dantan, Gopiballabhpur, Jhargaon, and Binpur. The other inhabitants of these thanas speak a corrupt Oriyā. Oriyā is also spoken in the southern portion of the thana of Narayangarh, and in the Sub-Division of Contai in the south of the District.

In the rest of the District the language is Bengali. The boundary between Bengali and Oriyā is not capable of accurate definition. On each side of the border-line above indicated, there is a mixed dialect which may be styled either bad Bengali or bad Oriyā. In the north and east of the District there is spoken a tolerably pure Bengali belonging to the Standard dialect. The members of the Kaibartta caste speak the curious dialect which I have named South-Western Bengali; and they are so numerous in the centre of the District and in the west of the Tamluk Sub-Division, that their language must be considered the main language of the tract.

The following is the Kaibartta population in the area referred to :—

	Name of Thana.	Population.
Sadr Sub-Division.	Midnapore (South of Thana)	6,592
	Debra (South of Thana)	23,613
	Sabang (whole)	121,770
	Narayangarh (North)	18,751
Tamluk Sub-Division.	Panskura (West)	75,542
	Tamluk (Do)	57,796
	Nandigrām (Do.)	42,438
TOTAL		346,502

This may be taken as the population speaking South-Western Bengali. It should be observed that the dialect of Nandigram, mentioned above, is a mixed one, and partakes of the nature of the Standard Bengali spoken in the rest of the Tamluk Sub-Division.

The boundary between South-Western Bengali and Oriyā may be taken to be the River Kalighai, where it passes through the Narayangarh Thana. This river, also named here the Haldi, continues to be the language boundary and becomes the Northern boundary of the Contai Sub-Division. On the east of the Contai Sub-Division the dialect lies, in Thana Nandigram, between that Sub-Division and the River Haldi, which here falls into the sea. The annexed map shows roughly where this South-Western Bengali is spoken. It also covers the ground where Bengali, Oṛiyā, and Bibāri all three meet, and shows, so far as a map can show by definite lines, a state of affairs which is essentially indefinite, the common boundaries of these three languages in this locality.

The dialect of Bengali spoken in the north and east of the District, as already stated, belongs to the Central or Standard dialect. In the extreme north, however, near Garhbeta and Salbani, it shades into the form of the Western dialect spoken in Bankura. Elsewhere, too, there are slight local variations which do not require illustration.

The Oṛiyā spoken along the border line of Bengali, is, as already said, much mixed with that language. Moreover, the form of that language which is spoken in Thanas Dantan, Gopiballabhpur, Jhargaon, and Binpur is considerably leavened with words borrowed from the Santālī of the tribes living in that neighbourhood.

Regarding the Kaibarttas of Midnapore, reference may be made to Mr. Risley's Tribes and Castes of Bengal, and to the account of the tribe given in pages 54 and 55 of the Statistical Account of the District. According to a local tradition which is not mentioned in either of these works, their original home was on the banks of the Sarju, in Oudh, a sufficiently improbable claim to respectability of race, which is not borne out by the caste-statistics of that Province. They appear to have been a non-Aryan race and to have entered Midnapore from Orissa, and it is certain that they conquered the district by force of arms. They now form more than thirty per cent. of the whole population of the District, being strongest, as explained above, in Thana Sabang, while most of them are found south of the River Kasai. They founded several great families, most of which have since died away, but the Rājā of Tamluk is still a member of the caste. One of their leaders became Rājā of Sujamuta, and his last lineal descendant died some years ago, after running through the splendid patrimony which he had inherited. The defeat of the Rājā of Mainā by the Kaibarttas at the time of their original invasion of the District is the subject of a local poem, once very popular, but now seldom read.

The history of their arrival in the District accounts for the very peculiar character of the dialect of Bengali spoken by them. Probably originally owning some non-Aryan language, they arrived in Midnapore speaking a corrupt patois of Oṛiyā, and on this as a basis, they have built the dialect of Bengali which they speak in their present home.

As might be expected, the dialect is strongly influenced by Oṛiyā. For instance, the word pō, a son, is much more used in that language than in Bengali. The word sān'ō, younger, is for the Oṛiyā sāna, ḡau-sau, every one, is Oṛiyā for Bengali ḡē-sē: parāk, again, is low Oṛiyā for a 'son.' The colloquial Oṛiyā forms its ablative by adding u, thus gharu, from a house; so also we have in these specimens words like māḡhu, from among, sē-thinu, from that place. The plural of Oṛiyā nouns is formed by adding the syllable māna. With this may be compared—

chākarmankē , to the servants,	corresponding to the Oṛiyā	chākaramānanku .
kasbimankār , of harlots	„ „	kasbīmānankar .
mōrmankār , of us	„ „	mōmānankar (vulgar).
āmānnakē , to us	„ „	ambhamānanku .

MAP ILLUSTRATING THE MEETING GROUND OF BENGALI ORIYĀ AND BIHĀRĪ

The root tha, meaning 'to be,' does not occur in Standard Bengali, but is found in Oriyā. So we find a root thā in these specimens, viz., in—thāya, he remains or they remain, corresponding to Oriyā, thāē, he remains.

thāini, I was " " thili.

thāila, he was, or they were, " " thilā.

thāitē, lasting " " thāntē.

The first person singular of the past tense in Oriyā ends in i, and the second person in u, thus kali, I did; kalu, thou didst. So also we have in these specimens thāini, I was, kōllu, thou didst.

The conjunctive participle in Oriyā ends in i, thus dēkhi, having seen. So we have here words like jāi-ni, not having gone.

Besides the above the following peculiarities may be mentioned:—

(I) Pronunciation.—A is frequently written and pronounced as ō or o. Thus we have kor^aā for kariyā, having done; chol^aā, for chaliyā, having gone; dhor^aā for dhariyā, having held; hol^aā (pron. hollō) for haila, he became; tōkhnu for takhan, then; mōtu, for matē, like.

The vowel ē is frequently written ā, pronounced ā (like the ā in 'hat'). Thus gēla, he went, becomes g^aāla, pronounced gālō; dēkhitē, to see, becomes d^aāktē, pronounced dāktē; chhēlē, the young of any animal, becomes chh^aālā, pronounced chhāllā.

There is, in fact, a tendency even for ā to become this ā (ā). Thus rāgiyā, being angry, becomes r^aāg^aā, pronounced rāggā.

As usual, āi becomes ē, and is so written. Thus khāila, he ate, becomes khēla. This ē again becomes ā, as above, so that we have pāila, he got, becoming first pēla, and then p^aāla (pron. pālō).

The vowel i between two consonants is frequently elided, and the first consonant is assimilated to the second. Thus parīla, he fell, becomes palla (pron. pōllō); karila, he did, becomes kalla; karitē, to do, becomes, kattē; lāgila, he began, becomes lāgla. Similarly hāila, he was, becomes hala or hol^aā. This, it may be noted, is also common in Oriyā. If, however, the second consonant is y, the first consonant is not assimilated. Thus for kariyā, having gone, we have kor^aā; for rāgiyā, being angry, becomes r^aāg^aā (rāggā).

There is a constant tendency to make a word, which properly ends in a, end in i. Thus mādhur^aā, sweetness, becomes mādhujⁱi; bāk^aā, a word, becomes lākⁱi; (pron. bākki); nit^aā, continual, becomes litti (see below) (here the word is spelled as pronounced).

As regards consonants, there is a steady tendency to double them when they are medial, and the accent falls on the preceding syllable. Thus for phūkā, squandering, we have phukkā; for bara, great, we have baḍḍā; for thēkiyā, having appointed, thekki; for bhōkē, hunger, bhokkē; for thākur, God, thākkur; for śital, cold, śittōl; for majhār, pleasant, majhjhar; and many others. Note also, in this connexion, the word saggal, all, for sakal.

There is a tendency to disaspiration. Thus kāch, near, for kāchhē; d^aāktē (dāktē), for dēkhitē; gar for garh, a fort. In hāblās for abhilāsh, the bh has been disaspirated, and the aspiration transferred to the commencement of the word. A medial h is liable to elision, thus kaïla for kahila, he said; kaïba, for kahiba, I shall say; chäila, for chähila, he wished.

On the other hand p is aspirated in bāphu, for bāp, a father.

As in Oṛiyā, initial n is very often changed to l. Thus we have lijēr, for nijer, of one's own; laya, for nay, I am not; lāy for nāy, like; lāch for nāch, dancing; litti (see above) for nit'a, continual; Lārān-garēr Lallārān, Nara-nārāyan of Nārāyan-garh.

(II) In the declension of Nouns, allusion has been already made to the Oṛiyā ablative in u, in words like mājhu, from among; sēthinū, from there. There is a locative in i in words like ekkāthi, in one place; pāṭhśālī, in the school. A termination of the genitive is kār in words like lokkār, of a man; tānnēkār or tānnākār, of them. The corresponding termination in Oṛiyā is kara, which is only used in the plural.

(III) Several irregular forms of the Pronouns have been noted. These are mui, the old singular 'I'; from this we have, mō-kē, to me; mōr, my; mōnnē, we; and mōrhē, our; mōrmankār, of us. From the regular āmi, we have a dative plural, āmānnakē, to us. The series for the second person is not so complete, but we have tui (old singular), thou (used with a verb in the singular); tūi, thou (honorific, used with a verb in the plural); and a curious form tan, meaning 'thy.' For the third person we have tān (honorific), his; tānnē, they, and tānnēkār as well as tānnākār, of them.

With regard to Verbs, a peculiar negative suffix ni or nika, must first be mentioned. It occurs in words like, jāi-ni, not having gone; haya-ni, it is not; dichha-ni, thou hast not given; pēli-ni, I did not disregard; dīla-nika, he did not give; jānchhu-nika, do you not know; chäila-nika, he did not wish.

In the conjugation of verbs, the personal terminations used are, as already pointed out, those of Oṛiyā.

As regards conjugation, the Present is regular. The Present definite is contracted from the standard form. Thus jānchhu, you know, for jānitēchha. But more usually an entirely different form is adopted, in which the auxiliary is formed from a base tha. Thus we have—kari-thi, I am doing.

jāu-thu, thou art going.
khābāya-tha, you are feeding.
haya-thē, he is.

As examples of the Past tense may be quoted—thāi-ni, I was, standard, chhilām, Oṛiyā thili.

pāni, I got, „ pāilām.
pori, I fell, „ parilām.
kollu, thou didst, standard, karilē.
g'ālu, thou wentest, „ gēlē.
baslu, thou didst sit, „ basilē.
kalla (pron. kollō), he made, „ karila.
hol'a (pron. hollō), he was, „ hāila.

Of the Perfect, which is also extremely contracted, I quote the following examples. It will be noted that the chh is sometimes doubled, and is sometimes not—kachchhi (1st specimen), } I have made, standard, kariyāchhi.

kochchhi (3rd specimen), }

pāchhi, I have got, standard, pāiyāchhi.

dichha-(ni), you have (not) given (pl.) standard diyāchha (nā).

dichhē, he has given „ diyāchhē.

Note the form āssan (for āsiyāchhēn), he has come.

As examples of the Pluperfect may be quoted—kochchhini, I had done, standard, kariyāchhīlām.

g'āchhla (pron. gāchhlō), „ giyāchhīla.

Of the future, the following are examples :—

kaiba (pron. kōibō), I shall say, standard, kōhība.

chhārbō-(ni), I will (not) desert, „ chhāriba nā.

korbin, he will do, „ karibēn.

habē, he will be, „ haibē.

Causal verbs are formed by adding bā to the root. Thus—khābāya-tha, you are feeding, standard, khāōyāitēchha.

pābāilu, thou didst cause to get, „ pāōyāili.

The first specimen is the Parable of the Prodigal Son.

The next specimen is a folk-song in the same dialect. It refers to the departure of Kṛishṇa from Vṛindāvana for Mathurā, in order to slay the demon Kāmsa. The speaker is supposed to be Kṛishṇa's elder brother Bala-rāma. This occurred in the Dvāpara or third age of the world; and in the preceding, or Trēta, age, Kṛishṇa had also been incarnate as Rāma-chandra and Bala-rāma as Rāma-chandra's younger brother Lakshmaṇa. In the war between Rāma-chandra and Rāvaṇa, Lakshmaṇa had been dangerously wounded by a celebrated weapon named the śakti-spear. He was only revived by Hanumān bringing him a magic root. This is what is referred to in the fourth verse. It will be understood that Kṛishṇa is believed, like Rāma-chandra, to have been an incarnation of the Supreme Deity, Viṣṇu. Before his birth his mother was imprisoned by Kāmsa, in order to kill the infant directly he was born. The child was saved by a miracle. In the last verse, Kṛishṇa is represented as placing his own mother in prison. As the supreme ruler of the universe, he was responsible for what occurred.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

Saurēndra Bābu, the younger son of Nar-nārāyan Bābu of Nārāyaṅgarh is a very nice boy. He is as open-hearted and equal-tempered, as he is charming. He is about fourteen or fifteen years of age, and all this time he has been so sweet, that servants, slaves, neighbours, everyone, when they hear his gentle language, are full of his praises. He is never heard to utter a single angry or trivial word. Our Nitāi is his friend, and is so very intimate with him, that they eat and sleep and sit together, and every day they go together to Bahurūpa village school to recite their lessons.

There is a report that he will go up in the month of Chaitra of this year to Midnapore, and will there pass an examination before the Sāhib, and will get into Government service. Everyone says that he will ultimately obtain a very high post. But his mother says to us, 'As long as I live, I shall not let my son go away to a distant country. What is there that I have not plenty of? For whom is all this property of mine, if not for him? For whom have I collected so much wealth? My "gentleman" has no necessity for taking service. My darling, "others may earn twelve by running and bustling, but we will earn thirteen by sitting quietly at home."¹ What is the use of taking service? With forty bighās of land we shall have plenty to eat while we stay at home.'

IV.—NORTHERN BENGAL.

The standard of the northern dialect of Bengali may be taken to be the form of the language which is spoken in the District of Dinajpur. To the west, it merges into the Maithili dialect of Bihārī, through the Siripuriā sub-dialect in Eastern Purnea. To the east and north, it becomes the well-marked dialect spoken in Rangpur, Jalpaiguri and the neighbouring Districts to the east and known as Rājbangsī. To the south, in Rajshahi and Pabna, it more nearly approaches the standard dialect of Central Bengal.

The dialect is spoken in the following Districts,—Rajshahi, Dinajpur, Bogra, and Pabna.

The whole of this tract has, within historic times, been subject to the Kōch tribes who invaded it from Cooch Bihar, Assam, and Eastern Bengal, and members of the tribe still exist in each District. They were originally reported as speaking their original Kōch language, but an examination of the specimens of their language which I have received shows that they have given up their original speech, and now only speak a more or less corrupt variety of Northern Bengali. Careful enquiries made on the spot have elicited the fact that, even in the privacy of their homes, and when speaking to members of their own tribe, these Kōch speak only Bengali. In the four Districts abovementioned, their language does not differ from that of other peasants of the locality.

The dialect is also spoken in the east of Malda District. Here, there are some 65,000 people of Kōch origin, who while they have abandoned their original language, speak an impure Bengali, differing from that of their neighbours belonging to other castes. The remaining speakers of Bengali speak a variety of the northern dialect. Malda, as the meeting place of several languages, would form an interesting study to the comparative philologist. Curiously enough, language is much more distributed by race than according to locality, so that in one and the same village in the east of the District four or five languages may be heard spoken. Bengali, Bihārī, Santālī, Kōch-Bengali, and others all meet in this District on equal terms. The Bengali of the District, though of the northern variety, is much infected by the neighbouring Bihārī, and this is specially true of the sub-dialect spoken by the Kōch, and is its special point of difference. Its grammar shows remarkable points of agreement with Oriyā.

Another sub-dialect of Northern Bengali is found in the north-east of the District of Purnea. It is called Siripuriā from the name, Śrīpur, of the pargana in which it is most prevalent, and also Kishanganjīā, from the principal town of the sub-division of that name. It is largely mixed with idioms borrowed from the neighbouring Bihārī, and is even written in the Kaithī character which is that usually adopted for writing that language. The people who speak it are mostly of Kōch origin. Of these, some 456,000 are Musalmāns, and some 136,000 are still called Kōch. A wild tribe entitled Kurariā also speaks the same sub-dialect. Of these there are about 11,500. These three classes were originally returned as speaking three different languages, but further inquiry shows that they all speak the same language, Siripuriā, which closely resembles the Kōch-Bengali spoken in Malda. The total number of people returned from Purnea as speaking Siripuriā is 603,623. Its western limit, and hence the western limit of Bengali, may be roughly taken as the River Mahānanda.

We thus find that Northern Bengali is spoken by the following number of people:—

Name of District.	Number of Speakers.
Rajshahi	1,411,942 ¹
Dinajpur	1,412,650 ¹
Bogra	740,807 ¹
Pabna	1,339,531
Malda	535,000
Malda (Kōch sub-dialect)	65,000
Purnea (Siripuriā sub-dialect)	603,623
TOTAL	6,108,553

The following points may be noticed regarding the form of the dialect spoken in Dinajpur:—

The system of spelling and pronunciation closely follows that of Central Bengal, the more contracted forms of the verbal conjugation being as a rule followed. Here and there we meet the letter l used instead of r, as in the word śarilē for śarirē, in a body.

As regards vocabulary note the use of the word tābat, the Sanskrit tārat, to mean 'everything.'

In the declension of nouns, there is a Locative Singular in ēt or at. Examples are: kashītēt, in trouble; pāyēt, on foot; khētēt, in the field; dēśat, in the country; hātāt, on the hand; kāchhat, near. The Nominative Plural sometimes takes the same form as that of the Instrumental Singular. Thus, chhāōyātē, pronounced chhāwātē, children. Besides the usual Genitive Plural ending in dēr, for digēr, as in bēsūdēr, of harlots, there is a similarly contracted Accusative Dative Plural, as in chākardēk, to the servants; bandhudēk, friends. In the Pronouns also, it will be seen that there is a tendency to drop the final ē of the Accusative-Dative termination kē.

In regard to the pronouns, the pronoun of the first person is hāmi, I. Its Accusative-Dative Singular is hāmākē, or hāmāk, its Genitive Singular is hāmār, and its Nominative Plural is hāmārā. Similarly, for the second person, tumi is 'thou,' the Genitive Singular of which is tumār, and so on for the other cases. For the pronoun of the third person, we have sē, he; tāk or tāhāk, him, or to him; tārā, they; and tāydēr, their. The remaining pronouns exhibit no irregularities. Jēkhan and tēkhan mean 'when' and 'then.'

In the conjugation of verbs, there are irregularities in the personal terminations. The second person, honorific, sometimes ends in ēn. Thus, dēn, you give; karilēn, you made; āchhēn, you are. The first person of the future ends in im, as in balim, I will say. The third singular Past ends in ē in the case of Transitive, and drops its termination in the case of Intransitive verbs. The following examples may be noted,—dilē, he gave; pālē, he obtained; khālē, he ate; puchhlē, he asked. For Intransitive verbs we have haīl, he became. So, chhil, he was; gēl, he went; lāgi, he began; khēlchhil, he was, or they were, playing. In one instance, we also find a Transitive verb dropping its final termination, viz., in kahil, he said.

As samples of the Perfect tense, we may quote,—dichhi, I have given; karichhi or contracted karchhi, I have done; bāchichhē, he has escaped; gēichhē, he has gone; āsichhē, he has come; and ānchhē, he has brought. Honorific forms are karichhēn, he has made; and pāichhēn, he has obtained. As a Pluperfect, the word gēichhil, he had gone, is an example.

For the Future, we have pām, I shall get; jām, I shall go; balim, I shall say.

The Infinitive ends in bā. Thus, bharibā, to fill; dēkhbā pālē, he was able to see; karbā lāgil, he began to do; parbā lāgil, he began to fall. Sometimes it is inflected in the Genitive case. Thus, dibār lāgil, he began to give; nibār chāhil, he wished to take; dākibār khailām, I told to call.

The Conjunctive Participle ends in ē after a consonant. Thus, āsē, having come; karē, having done; and many others. After a long ā, the termination is y. Thus, pāy, having got; khāy, having eaten.

A notice of the dialect of Dinajpur, with a short Vocabulary by G. H. Damant, will be found on page 101 of Vol. II, 1873, of the Indian Antiquary.

The following two examples come from Eastern Malda, and the dialect closely resembles that of the preceding ones. They have been prepared with much care by Babu Radhesh Chandra Set, and the pronunciation is excellently illustrated. The following are the chief peculiarities of the dialect of these specimens:—

I.—PRONUNCIATION—

The letter a (ö) is pronounced as ō or o. Thus jhōn for jan, a person; chhōtō for chhōṭa, a little; dhōllē (pr. dhollē) for dharilē, he caught.

The letter ē or ē is frequently written ā, and both are pronounced like the ä in hat. Thus yāk (pr. yāk) for ēk, one; bātā (bātā), a son; chhēlā (for chhēlē) a child; pāt, for pēt, belly; chāt, for chēt, senses; khātē (for khētē), in the field; tākā (for thēkē), from.

In suchtē, to think, ō has become u, and in dōrā, au has become ō.

In the word jhōn for jan, a person, j has become jh.

The local dialect pronounces r as v. Thus bara for barā, great. The letters ś, sh, and s are all written s, which is pronounced as dental s. Here we see the signs of the influence of the adjoining Bihārī.

II.—NOUNS—

The Accusative Dative is usually formed by adding k. Thus bābāk, to the father; sahōriyāk, a citizen (Acc.); bōk, to a wife. Sometimes the ordinary form is used, as kuttā-kē.

The Genitive Singular is regular.

The Instrumental Locative is generally regular, but sometimes ends in ēt, as in gharēt, in the house.

The sign of the Ablative is hōtē, as hāt hōtē, from the hand.

As an example of ē in the Nominative Plural, we have chāoyāl-pāoyālē, the children.

The Genitive Plural is formed by adding ghōr, to the Genitive Singular. Thus tār-ghōr, of them; dōstēr-ghōr, of friends. From this other oblique cases may be formed. Thus, tār-ghōr-kē, to them.

III.—PRONOUNS—

First Person,—hāmī, I; hāmāk, to me; hāmār, my; hāmārā, we.

Second Person,—tūi, thou; tōk, thee; tōr, thy.

Third Person,—tāi, āi, he; tāk, him; tār, his; tāt, thereon; tār-ghōr, of them; tār-ghōr-kē, to them.

i, this one; u, that one.

Adjectives, ōi, ai, that.

Others,—kēhu, anyone; kichchhu, anything; kunu, any.

The rest are regular, so far as they appear in the specimens.

IV.—VERBS—

(a) Auxiliary Verbs, and Verbs Substantive—

(1) Present,—lōhi, I am not; āchhis, thou art; āchhē, he is.

(2) Past,—achhlō, hōlō, he was, etc.

(3) Past Conditional,—hōtō, he would have been.

(4) Verbal Noun,—hōbār, of being.

Finite Verb—

1. Present,—kāṭi, I cut ; kari, I may make ; rahi, we may remain ; dis-mi, thou didst not give ; khāy, they eat.
2. Present Definite,—mōrchhi, I am dying.
3. Imperfect,—dichhlō-nā, he was not giving ; āschhilō, he was coming.
4. Future,—pāmu, I will get ; jāmu, I will go ; kahmu, I will say ; karmu, I shall do ; kabhē, he will say.
5. Imperative,—dē, give ; rākh, keep ; āy, come ; d'ākhēk, look ; khāi, let us eat ; dāi, let us give ; kari, let us do.
6. Past,—Second Person,—dili, thou gavest.
3rd Person,—
 (a). Transitive Verbs,—kahlē, he said ; dilē, he gave ; phēklē, he squandered ; dhōllē, he caught ; paṭhālē, he sent ; dēkhlē, he saw ; kōrlē, he made ; khālē, he ate ; pālē, he got ; puchhlē, he asked ; kōllē, he made ; karlē, he made ; rākhlē, he put.
 (b) Intransitive Verbs,—g'ālō, he went ; kōlō, he became ; pōlō, he fell ; ālō, he came ; lāglō, they began ; sāndhālō, he entered ; thāklō, he remained.
7. Past Conditional and Habitual,—bhālō-bāstō, he used to like.
8. Perfect,—kar'āchhi, I have done ; diyāchhē, he has given ; uṛiyāchhē, he has wasted ; āy'āchhē, he has come ; pāy'āchhē, he has got ; khāy'āchhē, they have eaten.
9. Pluperfect,—mar'āchhilō, he had died ; hariyāchhilō, he was lost.
10. Infinitive,—charātē, to tend ; bharātē, to fill ; kahtē, to call ; rāntē, to cook ; khātē, to eat ; suchtē, to think.
11. Present Participle,—bittē, passing (of time) ; jāntē, knowing ; rahtē-i, even remaining.
12. Conditional Participle,—pālē, if he got ; puchhlē, having enquired ; kahlē, if I say.
13. Conjunctive Participle,—This ends in 'ā. Thus bāṭ'ā, having divided ; kar'ā, having done ; jāy'ā, having gone ; and many others.

Sometimes the regular form is met, as, sāndhiyā, having entered.

Malda District is a meeting-place of several languages,—of Bengali, Bihārī, Santālī, Kōch, and others. Curiously enough, language is distributed by race, rather than by locality, so that in one village four or five languages may be heard spoken.

The two following specimens are the Parable of the Prodigal Son, and a short Folk-tale.

In the Malda District there are some 65,000 people, members of Kōch tribes, who now speak a patois of Northern Bengali. The following are specimens of this patois. As it closely follows the ordinary Northern Bengali of Malda it is not necessary to give a grammatical analysis of its forms. For the same reason it is only given in the Roman and not in the Bengali character. It is sufficient to notice the forms ar, his, and ak, to him. Note also the way in which the third person of the past tense drops all terminations as in kahil, he said; dil, he gave, and many others. The Bihārī auxiliary verb chhē, he is, used in dhōy-chhē, he caught, marñ-chhu, I am dying, etc., is noteworthy. The specimens are the same as the two preceding ones. It is a curious fact that the grammar of this specimen is much more like that of Oṛiyā than like that of Bengali.

The western limit of Northern Bengali extends into the Purnea District. That language may be taken as occupying the eastern third of the District, that is to say, the whole of the Kishanganj and the eastern half of the Sadr Sub-division. In the Kishanganj Sub-division, and in the Kasba Amur and Balrāmpur Thānās, the Musalmāns, who are said to be of Kōch origin, speak a mixture of Bihārī and Bengali, closely resembling the Kōch-Bengali of Malda. This dialect is called Kishanganjiā or Siripuriā, and is returned as spoken by 603,623 souls. Although in the main a Bengali dialect it is written in the Kaithī character, which is one of those used for Bihārī.

It is unnecessary to give an analysis of its forms, as it closely resembles, on the one hand, the dialects of Malda, already illustrated, and on the other hand, in the forms borrowed from Bihārī, the dialect which will be shown as existing in Western Purnea. The following forms, peculiar to the dialect, may be noted. There is a tendency to change a to u. Thus sē-khunā for sē-khanā, then, ghurī for gharī, a space of twenty minutes. As in Malda, r always becomes ṛ, and all sibilants are pronounced as s, though written ś in the Kaithī character. Note also the following forms which belong neither to Bihārī nor to Bengali, but are a corruption of the former, pōl, he fell; phōl, he became; ōl, he came. The word ōsē, having come, is a corruption of the Bengali āsīyā.

The following specimens are a translation of the Parable of the Prodigal Son, and a short account of a village embroglio. They are printed in the vernacular character, in facsimile, in order to show how Bengali looks when written in the Kaithī character.

Turning now to the south-east of the District of Dinajpur, we come to that of Bogra, in which, also, the northern dialect of Bengali is spoken. The following two specimens illustrate the form of the dialect spoken in this district. It will be seen that it differs little from that of Dinajpur. The following may be noted as local peculiarities, —bā, a father; tur-i, even thine; mērō, we; and especially the curious verbal forms, kartitēchhi, I am doing; khattitēchhi, I am working; kartutuchhu, thou art making, and kartitichhē, he is making.

The dialect spoken immediately to the north, in Rangpur, is Rājbangsī or Rangpurī, and, as may be expected, some stray Rājbangsī forms are also found. Such are, locatives like dēsōt, in a country; gālōt, on the neck; pronominal forms like añi, tañi, he; and the typical dropping of an initial r, as in āk, for rākh, keep; ayē, for rahiyā, having remained; āj, for Rāj, a proper name, and ōmō, for rōpiba, I will transplant.

Of the two following specimens, one is a translation of the Parable of the Prodigal Son, and the other the deposition of a complainant made in a criminal court.

South of Dinajpur and Bogra, and between them and the Ganges, lie, respectively, the Districts of Rajshahi and Pabna. The dialect spoken here differs from that spoken in Dinajpur, tending, if anything, towards the standard Bengali spoken across the Ganges. The language of Pabna, perhaps, differs more than that of Rajshahi, and for these two districts it will be sufficient to give a version of the Parable of the Prodigal Son in the language of the women of the former district.

It is an excellent specimen of the extremely clipped pronunciation adopted by women. In order to show this the more clearly, when the syllable yā is pronounced like the a in hat, I have transliterated it ʼā. I also transliterated oyā, by wā, which, as elsewhere, is the correct pronunciation.

Note the tendency to shorten a final ē to i, as in sānni for sāmnē, in the presence of, and āsti, for āsītē, coming. Note also the Dative termination gunē, as in āmākgunē, to me; bapēkgunē, to the father.

V.—RĀJBANGSĪ.

This well-marked dialect is spoken in the country to the North-East of that in which Northern Bengali is spoken. As in the rest of Northern Bengal, this tract has been subject to the domination of the Kōch; but the conquest was much more complete, and the Kōch tribe predominates through the land. Those Kōch, who are now Hindūs, are principally known under the name of Rājbangsī. But large numbers of them have become Musalmāns, so that the mere number of people of the Rājbangsī tribe affords no idea of the number of people of Kōch extraction in the country. The name of Kōch is itself retained in the name of the State of Cooch, or Kōch, Behar. The Kōch originally came from across the Brahmāputra, and hence the Bengali which they speak may reasonably be expected to bear traces of its eastern origin. This, it will be seen, is the case. The Rājbangsī dialect bears many close points of resemblance to the dialect of Eastern Bengal.

The dialect is usually known as Rājbangsī, from the tribe of that name already alluded to. It is also frequently called Rangpurī from one of the Districts in which it is spoken.

The dialect is not confined to the Bengal Province, but extends into the Goalpara District of Assam, in which it gradually merges into Assamese. It is the language of the west and south-west of that District. To the south it is stopped by the Tibeto-Burman languages of the Garo Hills. In Bengal, it is bounded on the east by the Brahmāputra, with the Garo Hills on the opposite side. In its extreme south-east corner, it just touches the Eastern Bengali of Maimansingh, also across the river. On the south and west it is bounded by the Northern Bengali already described, and on the north by the Tibeto-Burman languages of the Lower Himalayas. It is spoken in the following Districts, Rangpur, Jalpaiguri, the Tarai of the Darjeeling District, the Native State of Cooch Behar, together with the portion of Goalpara in Assam, already mentioned. In the Darjeeling Tarai, the dialect is influenced by the neighbouring Northern Bengali, and has a special name, as a sub-dialect, viz., Bāhē.

We thus find that the Rājbangsī dialect is spoken by the following number of people:—

Name of District.	Number of Speakers.
Jalpaiguri	568,976
Rangpur	2,037,460
Cooch Behar (Native State)	562,500
Darjeeling (Bāhē sub-dialect)	47,435
TOTAL for Bengal	3,216,371
Goalpara	292,800
TOTAL for Assam	292,800
GRAND TOTAL	3,509,171

GRIERSON, G. A.,—The Song of Mānik Chandra.—Journal of the Asiatic Society of Bengal, Vol. xlvii, 1878, Pt. I, pp. 136 and ff. An Epic Poem in the dialect with Translation.

The following Grammar of the dialect is based on the one above mentioned. The difference of the dialect from Northern Bengali is principally owing to a large infusion of the idiom of Eastern Bengal :—

I.—PRONUNCIATION.—In addition to the usual contracted forms which we meet in every Bengali dialect, the following peculiarities of the Rājbangsī dialect are to be noticed. As in Northern Bengali, ō is frequently substituted for a. Consonants are often elided, as in sa-i for sakhi, a friend ; dē-ō for dēb or dēva, a god ; pi-a for priya, beloved one, a husband. The letter chh is pronounced as a dental s ; thus, āchhē, he is, is pronounced āsē ; the name of the present writer, when he was stationed in Rangpur, was written, ‘ Grīrchhan.’ The letter j is pronounced as z or as jh ; thus, jan, a person, pronounced zan ; jan, for jakhan, when, pronounced in the same way ; so, jēlā pronounced jhēlā or zēlā, when. The letters l and n are frequently interchanged. For instance, the word banāila, he made, appears sometimes as balāna, sometimes as balāla, sometimes as banāla. An initial r is usually elided, and if the following vowel is a, it becomes ā. Thus, randhitē, to cook, becomes āndhitē, and raba, a noise, becomes āō.

Aspirated letters are exchanged for unaspirated ones, and vice versā. Thus, jhan and jan, a man ; jē and jhē, who ; garbha and garba, a womb ; bādhā and bādā, a hindrance.

II.—NOUNS.—The following is an example of the declension of a noun :—

	Sing.	Plur.
Nom.	bālak or bālakē , a boy,	bālakra or bālak-gulā .
Acc.-Dat.	bālakak or bālakōk ,	bālak-gulāk .
Instr.	bālak-hātāy ,	bālak-gulā-hātāy ,
Abl.	bālāk-thanē or thāi ,	and so on.
Gen.	bālakar or bālak-kār ,
Loc.	bālakat or bālakōt ,

Besides the above, the forms of Standard Bengali are also met. Instead of gulā gūā may be used to form the plural. These words are sometimes added to the Genitive singular, instead of to the base. Thus (Goalpara), sātēr-gulā, companions. We also find the word ghar substituted for gulā, also used with the Genitive singular. Thus (Jalpaiguri), chākarēr-ghar, servants ; bandhur-ghar, friends ; (Cooch Behar) sakhir-ghar, friends. In Darjeeling and Jalpaiguri, we also find the suffix lā. Thus, hi-lā or i-lā, these ; ai-lā, those ; jēi-lā, (those) which ; chākriyā-lā, servants ; kasbi-lā, harlots.

The case-suffixes fluctuate a good deal, both in form and use. Thus, for hātāy, we find hātē ; and for thanē, tānē, or tanē. We also find tānē, meaning ‘for,’ and hātē used as a sign of the ablative.

III.—PRONOUNS—

The above remarks about number and case also refer to pronouns.

First Person,—thus declined :—

	Sing.	Plur.
Nom.	muī, maī, mō, hāmi, or hāmra.	hāmā, hāmra, or hāmā-gulā.
Acc.-Dat.	mōk, hāmāk.	hāmāk, hāmā-gulā,
Instr.	mōr-hātāy.	and so on.
Abl.	mōr-thanē or thāi.
Gen.	mōr, hāmār.
Loc.	mōt, hāmāt.

Second Person,—tuī, tai, tō, thou. Plur., tōmā, tōmrā, tōmā-gulā, and so on. Acc. Sing., tōk, tōmāk. Gen., tōr, tōmār; and so on.

Third Person,—ō, ōyē, ūyāy, ōyāy, āy, āi, or ōkēnā, he, that; Acc. Sing., uyāk, pronounced uāk, ak; Gen., ar, arhē. Plur., umār-ghar, ōmrā, umhrā; Gen., amhār, umhār, umār. Tā, tāy, tāi, he, that; Acc. Sing., tāk, tāmāk; Gen., tāmār, tār, tārkhē. Plur., tāmār; Gen., tāmār. Ē, this; Acc. Sing., ēk, āk; Gen. Sing., ēr, ar.

Relative Pronoun,—jā, jāy, or jāi, or jhāy. Acc. Sing., jāk, and so on.

Interrogative Pronoun,—kā, kāy, or kāi, who? Acc. Sing., kāk, and so on.

Indefinite Pronoun,—kāy, kāy-ō, kā-ō, kāhay, kāha-i, any one.

As in the case of nouns, gilā may be substituted for gulā throughout the Plural. The forms of Standard Bengali are also used.

IV.—VERBS—

A.—AUXILIARY VERBS, and VERBS SUBSTANTIVE—

(1) Present,—āchō, I am; (2) āchis; (3) āchē.

(2) Past,—āchinu, I was; (2) āchili; (3) āchilo.

This verb is, however, often spelled āchhō, etc., as in Standard Bengali.

The verb hātē, to become, has its past, hail (not haīl), he became. Note the forms, hayā, having become; na-hāa (Jalpaiguri), I am not; nāi-kā, there is not (Jalpaiguri).

B.—FINITE VERB,—karitē, to do.

(1) Present,—karō, I do; (2) karis; (3) karē.

(2) Present Definite,—karitēchō, I am doing; (2) -chis; (3) -chē.

(3) Imperfect,—karitēchinu, I was doing; (2) -chili; (3) -chil.

(4) Past,—karinu or karnu, I did; (2) karilē or -lu; (3) karil.

(5) Perfect,—karichō, I have done; (2) karichis; (3) karichē.

(6) Pluperfect,—karichinu, I had done; (2) -chili; (3) -chil.

(7) Future,—karim, or karimu, or karimō, I shall do; (2) karibu; (3) karibē.

Past Conditional and Habitual,—karitām, I used to do; (2) karitē; (3) karita.

Imperative,—(2) kar, karō, do; (3) karuk, let him do.

Infinitive and Present Part.,—karitē, to do.

Conjunctive Part.,—karyā, karē, kari, kairē, having done.

Conditional Part.,—karinē, (if he) had done.

Gerund,—karibā, Acc., karibāk, and so on, doing.

Inceptive Compound,—karibār nāgō, I begin to do.

Potential Compound,—karibār pārō, I am able to do.

As usual the Past tense is liable to frequent contraction, especially when the root of the verb ends in r, or h. Thus instead of karinu, we can have kaillu, I did; so maillu, I died, for marinu; and kail, he said, for kahil. So again kaichē or kaichhē, for kahiyāchhē, he has said.

The following abnormal forms may be noted,—kahum (Darjeeling), I will say; kaō (Jalpaiguri), I speak; pālāō, I flee (Jalpaiguri); bērāchō, I am roaming (do.); kabhār lāgil (Darjeeling), he began to say.

From the root kar, make, we have,—kannu (Rangpur, Goalpara, and Cooch Behar), kanu (Darjeeling), kōrnu (Jalpaiguri), I did; kanna (Jalpaiguri), we did; kōllō (Jalpaiguri), thou madest; kōlē (Darjeeling), he made; karchō (Goalpara), karchhu (Jalpaiguri), kaichhu (Darjeeling), I have done; karchē (Goalpara), kaīrchē (Cooch Behar), he has made. Other forms worthy of note are, rāk (for rākh) (Goalpara), keep thou; āichchē (Goalpara and Cooch Behar), he has come; bāichchē (Cooch Behar), he has survived; jāyā hānē (Jalpaiguri), having gone; dēkhilmantē (Darjeeling), immediately on seeing.

Besides the usual conjunctions, ki and jē, meaning 'that', we find dē in Darjeeling, and ki bōlē or bōlē in Jalpaiguri.

The dialect of Western and South-Western Goalpara in Assam is pure Rājbangśī.

The first specimen is the Parable of the Prodigal Son, and the second a piece of Folk-lore.

In both cases, as in the case of the Rangpur specimens, a phonetic transcription has been added.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

Story of a Washerman's Ass and Dog.

A certain washerman had an ass and a dog. One day the ass says to the dog ‘Shālā! I have to labour all day long while thou dost only sit, eat, and bark.’ The dog says, ‘canst thou do the work that I do? From this day forth I will do thy work and thou shalt do mine.’ After saying this, the dog went on carrying the clothes of the washerman and the ass kept watch over his house.

Some days after, one night a thief came to the house of the washerman and began to dig a mine. The ass on seeing the thief commenced braying. The washerman being aroused from sleep gave grass and chaff to the ass, tied it well and went to bed. But the ass went on braying more loudly than before. The washerman hearing the bray of the ass got angry and began to belabour him with a stick. Then the dog said from the yard, “How my brother ass! how is the stick? Don’t you know the saying:—

‘Suits him the work whose it is.

To others like a stick it seems.’ ”

The next two specimens are also in pure Rājbangśī. They come from the Rangpur District. Note how l and n are confused. Even when l is pronounced l, it is written n in the Bengali character.

The first specimen is the Parable of the Prodigal Son.

The second specimen from Rangpur is a folk-song. King Manāi relinquished his throne and became an ascetic, and the following are the arguments which induced him to follow this course of conduct :—

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE ABOVE.

What didst thou, O Manāi, when thou camest into the world ?

Fast thou, and pray ; make Allāh see thee.

What didst thou, O Manāi, when thou camest into the world ?

The (mighty) man, who mounts in palankeen, who has himself fanned, and who has the umbrella (of royalty) carried over his head, even his body, the dust will eat, and no one will go with him (to the other world).

In Jalpaiguri, also, pure Rājbangsī is spoken. Of the three following specimens, one is a translation of the Parable of the Prodigal Son, and two are Folk-songs. It has not been thought necessary to add, again, a phonetic transcription.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

All those past things are coming to my mind for full six months, O my grandmother, my wife being dead.

My wife being dead I became mad, and day after day have I wept sitting in the low-lands, O grandmother, leaving my home.

Who will now cook my meals and feed me, who will now call me, coming to my side and addressing me as 'kaira kaira' ?

Who will now, O my grandmother, spread the bed for me, who will fan me, as she sits beside me, making the sweet sound of 'kērēt kurūt' ?

In wintry nights am I alone lying on my bed. Who will now make me lie down beside her, making the bed warm (with her body) ?

Leaving my household duties, O my grandmother, I have become like a bereaved lover. Hither and thither am I roaming, reeling and tossing, O grandmother, my wife being dead.

My whole frame is aflame for my wife. Bring me a widow (for me to marry) if thou canst, O grandmother, taking pity on me.

The next specimen (also from Jalpaiguri) is a poem relating the woes of an unmarried girl.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

At dawning youth I was not by Hymen favoured,
 How long still am I to remain single at home,
 O fate marble-hearted!

The full-blown flower of my golden youth yields to Malaya's softest breeze, My parents have become my foes in not sending me to another's home bound in ties hymeneal,
 O fate marble-hearted !

3.

My heart I cannot open to my father for shame, my mother I cannot press by maidenly modesty bound,
 Slowly is love consuming my frame as fire within chaff,
 O fate marble-hearted !

Even though my soul give way to pressing love within, my lips never open for fear of shame,
 If I give out the feelings of my heart, the folk would blame me,
 O fate marble-hearted !

Such mind is mine, Oh Lord, such mind is mine,
 A youth to my heart would I find ; with him would I fly to a distant clime,
 O fate marble-hearted !

6.

Stain who will my name, aught do I not care.
 To the fill of my heart will I enjoy the time in my love's sweet company,
 O fate marble-hearted !

In the State of Cooch Behar, also, pure Rājbangśī is spoken. Of the two specimens here given (both of which have been kindly provided by the State officials), the first is a translation of the Parable of the Prodigal Son ; and the other is a folk-song.

A popular song in the Rājbangśī language; being the parting words of a wife addressed to her husband, a merchant, on the eve of his sailing out to trade in distant places.

Prāṇ sādhu rē,

Dear merchant O,

Ĵadi ĵān, sādhu, parabās,

If you-go, merchant, away-from-home,

Nā karēn, sādhu, parār āś,

Not do, merchant, other's hope,

Āpan hātē, sādhu, ādhiyā khān bhātō, rē.

Own hand-with, merchant, cooking eat rice, O.

Prāṇ sādhu rē,

Dear merchant O,

Kōchār kari, sādhu, nā karēn bay,

In-corner-of-loincloth money, merchant, not do spend,

Parār nārī, sādhu, āpan nōyāy, rē,

In the Darjeeling Tarāi, the form of Bengali is in the main Rājbangśī, but we also find the influence of the neighbouring Northern Bengali of Dinajpur, in words like āchhila, instead of āchhil or āchil, he was. The dialect of the Darjeeling Tarāi is locally known as Bāhē. Of the two specimens here given, one is a version of the Parable of the Prodigal Son, and the other is a children's folk-song. In the transliteration, I represent ā by ā.

VI.—EASTERN BENGALI.

Judging from the number of people who speak it, this is the most important of the Bengali dialects. It extends from the Districts of Jessore and Khulna, near Calcutta, across Eastern Bengal, and, up the Surma Valley, into the Assam Districts of Sylhet and Cachar. It exhibits well-marked peculiarities of pronunciation,—a Cockney-like hatred of pre-existing aspirates, and, in addition, the regular substitution of an aspirate for a sibilant. While Standard Bengali is unable to pronounce sibboleth, except as shibboleth, Eastern Bengali avoids the sound of sh, and has ‘hibboleth.’ On the other hand the Eastern Dialect cannot pronounce the letters ch, chh, and j; but substitutes ts for the first, s for the second, and z for the third. These peculiarities of pronunciation become more marked as we go eastward. They are only partially observed in the Districts nearest Calcutta, are in full possession of the dialect in the Central District of Dacca, and are carried to their extremest lengths in Sylhet and Cachar.

A detailed account of the various forms of the dialect will be given later on, and the above general account must suffice here.

Eastern Bengali is the dialect of the following Districts,—Dacca, Mymensingh, Tippera, and Backergunge in Bengal, and Sylhet and Cachar in Assam. An isolated colony of the dialect also appears in the island of Sandip at the mouth of the Megna, where it is surrounded on three sides by the altogether distinct South-Eastern Bengali, and is bounded on the fourth by the Bay of Bengal. Sandip belongs politically to the District of Noakhali, and the existence of Eastern Bengali in this area is explained by a reference to history. The island was formerly a kind of Alsatia colonised by pirates who came originally from the upper reaches of the Megna, near Dacca.

Eastern Bengali is also spoken in the Bengal Districts of Faridpur, Jessore, and Khulna. Here, however, we see it merging into the Standard dialect of Central Bengal, and we are authorized to call the form of speech spoken in these Districts an East-Central sub-dialect. In the extreme south of Faridpur, true Eastern Bengali is spoken.

In the north-east of the District of Mymensingh and in the Surma Valley, a mongrel form of Eastern Bengali is spoken by the debased tribes at the foot of the Garo Hills. It is principally spoken by the Haijongs, who are said to have originally immigrated from the neighbouring hill country, and it is hence called the Haijong sub-dialect.

We thus find that Eastern Bengali is spoken by the following number of people :—

Name of District.	Number of Speakers.
Dacca	2,350,000
Mymensingh	3,398,121
Tippera	1,776,972
Backergunge	2,144,306
Faridpur (South)	20,000
Carried over	9,689,399

Brought forward	9,689,399
Noakhali (Island of Sandip)	100,000
Mymensingh (Haijong Sub-dialect)	5,000
Faridpur (Remainder)	1,796,856
Jessore	1,884,624
Khulna	1,173,551

Total for East-Central Sub-dialect	4,855,031

Cachar	228,221

<hr/>

The dialect spoken in East Sylhet is called by Europeans Sylhettia. So also the dialect of Cachar (which is practically the same as that of Eastern Sylhet) is locally known amongst the same as Kāchārī. These local names do not connote any distinct dialect. All that can be said about these two Districts is that their local dialects are essentially the same as those of the Districts of Eastern Bengal, but that the peculiarities of speech affecting the latter, are carried to an extreme in the two Assam Districts.

Nearly all the inhabitants of Eastern Bengal are Muhammadans, and hence the dialect is sometimes called Musalmānī Bengali, a sufficiently inaccurate title when we consider that there are many Musalmāns in other parts of Bengal who do not speak it. The influence of the Muhammadan religion has, however, caused a number of Arabic and Persian words to be introduced into the vocabulary of the Eastern Districts in a more or less deformed shape. Numerous instances will be noticed in the following specimens.

AUTHORITIES—

No monographs have, so far as I have been able to ascertain, been specially devoted to the dialects of Eastern Bengal. On page 329 of Vol. xxxv of the Calcutta Review, there is a short account of the peculiarities of the pronunciation of the dialect in the Tippera District, by Mr. H. C. Sutherland, B.C.S. In the year 1867 there were published by the Government of Bengal, a series of Reports on the History and Statistics of various Districts of what was then the Province. There are short vocabularies of local words in the Reports of Dacca, Backergunge, Sylhet, and Cachar.

TRANSLITERATION OF THE BENGALI ALPHABET FOR EASTERN BENGALI.

[Note.—This is only used when no phonetic transcription is given along with the transliteration. In that case the system of transliteration used for Standard Bengali is adopted.]

VOWELS.

As in Standard Bengali, except that ঞ, following a consonant, and এ (when so pronounced) are transliterated by ā. ও is transliterated wā.

CONSONANTS.

শ sha, ṣha, śha, ḥa, 'a .

The three sibilants are all, indifferently, transliterated by sh. The only exception is that the compound ঞ will be transliterated śra, it being pronounced sra.

When the aspiration of ঘ, ঝ, ঢ, ধ, and ভ is omitted in pronunciation, they are transcribed g'a, z'a, ḍ'a, d'a, and b'a, respectively. Similarly when হ is not pronounced it is represented by '. Thus হাতে 'ātē, কহিলাম ka'ilām.

The compound ক্ষ is represented by kh', or kkh', according to pronunciation.

It will be convenient to commence the consideration of the Eastern dialect of Bengali with the form of the language spoken in the District of Dacca. This District contains the capital of Eastern Bengal, and its language may be considered as a kind of standard. The first specimen is therefore a translation of the Parable of the Prodigal Son into the dialect used by women of the Manikganj Subdivision of the Dacca District, which has been kindly prepared for me by Babu Jagadish Chandra Sen. The same dialect is spoken by the lower classes throughout the District. With the transliterated version there is also given a phonetic transcription, showing, as nearly as may be, the exact pronunciation of each word.

The following are the principal peculiarities of this dialect as illustrated by the specimen.

I.—PRONUNCIATION.

The vowel a is usually pronounced as ō in hot, but is sometimes lengthened into a long ō. Thus, kōirtō for karita, he used to make. This is specially common in verbal terminations, such as lāiglō, for lāgila, he began, g'ālō (gālō), he went, and many others.

An unaccented i is almost invariably pronounced, not in its own syllable, but epenthetically in the preceding one. This change is preserved in the system adopted for spelling in the vernacular character. Thus bāitā, for bāṭiyā, having divided; kairā for kariyā, having made; kōirtō for karita, he used to make; b'āiblō, for bhābila, he considered; lāiglō for lāgila, he began; thāiktē for thākitē, remaining; kōirbār, or kairbār for karibār, of making; śuinbār, for śunibār, of hearing, and many others.

The sound ā (written 'ā) pronounced like the ā in hat is very common. The letter ē or ē, is so pronounced except when final. Thus dēō, give, becomes dāō; dilēn, he gave, dilān ; dēśē, in a country, dāshē ; gēla, he went, gālō ; pēt, a belly, pāt. In the Bengali character these are all written, d'āō, dil'ān, d'āsē, etc. In future, I shall represent the sound by ā, it being understood that this usually represents a Bengali ā.

The letter ch is pronounced ts. Thus chaliyā, having gone, is pronounced tsōilā ; and bachchā, a young one, batstsā.

The letter chh is pronounced like a hard s. Thus āchhila is pronounced āsilō chhāōyāl, a child, sāwāl.

The letter r is pronounced r. Thus bara, pronounced bōrō, for barā, great.

Soft aspirate consonants are disaspirated. Thus bhāgē, in a share, is pronounced bāgē ; bharanēr, of filling, bōrōnēr ; bhābila, he thought, bāiblō ; dhariyā, having seized, dōirā ; bhāla, good, bālō ; ārambha, beginning, ārōmbō ; bandhu-bāndhab, friends and relations, bōndu-bāndōb. This elision of an h, I shall represent in phonetic transcription by an apostrophe. Thus b'ōrōnēr, b'āiblō, d'ōirā, etc.

Similarly the letter h is elided. Thus kahila, he said, becomes ka'ilō ; hāila, he became, 'oilō ; hāōnēr, of being, 'ōnēr ; chāhila, he wished, chā'ilō.

The letter j, and y when it would be pronounced j in standard Bengali, are pronounced z. Thus janma, birth, is pronounced zōnmō ; yāik, let him go, zāik ; yē, who, zē ; yakhan, when, zōkhōn. I shall substitute z for j henceforth in dealing with this specimen.

The sibilants ś, sh and s, are all pronounced as sh.

II.—NOUNS.

The usual pleonastic suffix is ḍi or ḍī, thus dui-ḍī, two ; chh(s)ōṭa-ḍī, the younger. Sometimes tā is used, as in āk-tā, a, one.

The Nominative Singular often ends in ē, as in bāpē, the father.

The termination of the Accusative-Dative is ērē. Thus bāp-ērē, to the father ; chākar-ērē, the servant (acc.).

The termination of the Instrumental-Locative is ē, or after a vowel tē ; also, after long ā, y. Thus b'āg-ē, in a share ; dās-ē, in a country ; māṭh-ē in the field ; bāri-tē, in the house ; sāikkh'ā-tē, in the presence of ; khidā-y, by hunger.

The termination of the Genitive is the same as in standard Bengali. Thus zanēr, of a man ; dāsēr, of a country ; bārīr, of the house.

Examples of the Plural are śuōrērā, swine ; chākarērā, servants ; chākar-gō, servants (acc. plur.).

III.—PRONOUNS.

First Person,—āmi, I ; āmā-rē, me, to me ; āmār, my.

Second Person,—tumi, thou ; tōmār, thy.

Third Person,—tini, sē, he ; tā, that (nom. and acc.) ; tā-rē, him, to him ; tār, his ; tā-tē, thereon ; tā-gō, their ; tārā, they ; tān, to them. To him, ōyā-rē, his, ōyār. Of this, iyār.

Adjective Pronouns are, ēi, this ; ai, sēi, that.

Other Pronouns are, zē, who, what ; zā-kichh(s)u, whatever ; zā, what (thing) ; kichh(s)u, some, any ; kēu, anyone ; kōnō, any ; ki, what ?

IV.—VERBS.

(a) Auxiliary Verbs, and Verbs Substantive—

Present,—āchh(s)a, thou art ; āchh(s)ē, he is.

Past,—āchh(s)ilō, they were ; hailō, they became.

(b) Finite Verbs—

Present,—mari, I die ; kari nāi, I did not do ; dāō nāi, thou didst not give ; parē, it falls ; khāy, they eat.

Future,—kōmu, I will say.

Habitual Past,—khāitō, they used to eat ; kōirtō, he used to make ; ditō, he used to give.

Imperative,—dāō, give ; rākhō, keep ; dākha, see !

Past,—dilā, thou gavest.

kailō, he said ; gālō, he went ; dilō, he gave, and many others.

dilān, he (respectful) gave.

Perfect,—korch(ts)i, I have done ; pāich(ts)i, I have got ; bāichch(ts)ē, he has survived ; āich(ts)ē, he has come ; pāwā-gich(ts)ē, he has been found ; dich(ts)ēn, he has given.

Pluperfect,—gich(ts)ilō, he had gone.

Infinitive and Pres. Part.,—thāiktē, remaining ; āistē, coming (in both, accent on the first syllable).

Verbal Noun,—ch(ts)arāibār-lāigā, for feeding ; kōirbār, of doing ; śuinbār, of hearing ; zāibār, of going ; tōshāibār, of appeasing ; b'aranēr-lāigā, for filling ; 'aonēr, of being.

Conjunctive Participle,—bāitā, having divided ; kaīrā, having made ; chāilā, having gone ; uithā, having arisen ; dēikhā, having seen, and many others.

Regular are, giyā, having gone ; urāiyā, having wasted ; pāiyā, having got ; lāiyā, having taken.

Examples of the Passive Voice are—karan zāik, let it be done ; pāwā gich(ts)ē, he has been found.

Examples of Inceptive Compounds are—kōirbār āramb'a kaillō, they began to do ; āigāibār lāiglō, he began to approach ; śuinbār lāiglō, he began to hear ; tōshāibār lāiglō, he began to appease.

An example of a Desiderative Compound, is zāibār ch(ts)ailō, he wished to go.

The dialect of Mymensingh closely resembles that of Dacca. The population being largely Musalmān, the vocabulary is freely mixed with Arabic and Persian words. One example will suffice; it is given as not being easily recognizable. It is bābaka-i (written b'ābaka-i), meaning 'all,' for بيباق, bē-bāq.

The following specimen is the Parable of the Prodigal Son, in the dialect of the Musalmāns of the Eastern Part of the District. The language is so far influenced by the neighbouring Assamese, that an initial s is pronounced and written h. In Assamese a sibilant, whether initial or not, is pronounced as a rough h, something like the Persian kh, and is transliterated by h. Examples are hē, for sē, he; haggal, for sakal, all; huōr, for śuar, pigs; hamkē for sammukhē, before; hunā, for śuniyā, having heard.

The transliteration of the specimen is partly phonetic. That is to say, instead of uyā and ōyā, I have written wā. Instead of 'ā following a consonant I have written ā, which letter I have also given for ē and for ā when those vowels are so pronounced. Examples are bāshāt, which should properly be transcribed b'āsāt; kairā (and many other similar ones) instead of kair'ā, for kariyā, having done; āk, for ēk, one and 'ārāiyā, for hārāiyā.

Bengali.

The letter j, I represent by z, and y when pronounced as z by z. Thus zutā, instead of jutā, shoes; zē, instead of yē, which. Ch is represented by ts, thus tsākar for chākar, and chh by s, thus āsil for āchhil. The three sibilants I represent throughout by sh. Thus, I transcribe ব্যসাত, goods, bāshāt, and not bāsāt.

When an aspirate is elided, I represent its absence by an apostrophe. Thus 'aīlō for haīla, he became; 'ātē, for hātē, by a hand; 'ārāiyā, for hārāiyā, having been lost; d'airā (written dhairā), for dhariyā, having seized; b'āla for bhāla, well.

The compound ksh, I represent by kh. Thus khētō, in the field.

The following special peculiarities may be noted :—

I.—PRONUNCIATION.

The vowels a (pronounced ō), ō, and u, are freely interchanged. Thus suḍu, for chhōḍa, small; thurā for thōrā, a little; both dīla and dilō, he gave; tamār and tōmār, thy; tar for tōr, thy.

The letter kh when medial, sometimes becomes h, thus both takhan and tahōn, then.

II.—NOUNS.

The Nominative, as in Dacca, often ends in ē. Thus putē, the son; jan-majurē, servants; bāpē, the father.

The Locative sometimes ends in a (pronounced ō), as in mulōka, in a country; khēta, in a field; dīla, in the heart; banda, in the field. It sometimes ends in t, corresponding to the standard tē. Thus, bārīt, in the house; galāt, on the neck.

Accusative-Datives Plural are tsākarārē, to the servants; dusarārē, friends.

III.—PRONOUNS.

Note the form tānē, to them. In the Dacca specimen, we had tān.

IV.—VERBS.

The First person of the Future ends in ām. Thus, pāibām, I will get; zāibām, I will go; ka'ibām, I will say.

The 3rd singular Past ends in a, or in ō, and sometimes drops all terminations. Thus, dīl, dīla, or dilō, he gave; āsil, he was.

The Respectful Imperative is peculiar. We have dēukhāin, give thou.

The Infinitive ends in at, as in b'arat, to fill.

The Conjunctive Participle ends in yā, pronounced ā. Thus, d'airā (written dhairā), having seized; kairā (written kairā), having done; hunā (written hunā), having heard.

Although the transcription is partly phonetic, the ordinary rules of Bengali pronunciation, when not specially altered, are to be followed. Thus a is to be pronounced as ō, or, when final, as ō. E.g., the word bara, is to be pronounced as bōrō.

The letter ^ʹ (above the line) is very faintly pronounced, and is, indeed, hardly audible.

Pronounce ā as the a in hat; ē as the e in met; ō as the o in hot; and oi as in oil. The letter o (without any diacritical mark) represents the sound of the first o in promote, and is the o in the French word votre as compared with vôtre. It should be carefully distinguished from the ō of hot.

Other consonants and vowels are pronounced as in the authorized Government system.]

HAIJONG SUB-DIALECT.

This is a corrupt form of Eastern Bengali spoken by members of the Haijong (often incorrectly called Hajong) tribe, a Tibeto-Burman clan settled in the districts of Mymensingh and Sylhet, principally in the country at the foot of the Garo Hills. Haijong (or Hajong) has hitherto been described as a Tibeto-Burman language, but the tribe has long abandoned its original form of speech. The dialect is also spoken by Dālus (properly a Gārō sept), Bānāis, Hādis, and other low-caste tribes of the same locality.

I give two examples of this sub-dialect. First, in the Bengali and in the Roman characters a version of the Parable of the Prodigal Son from Mymensingh, and, secondly, a Folktale from Sylhet. The latter I give only in the Roman character.

The following is an account of the chief grammatical features of this form of speech, but it must be understood that, besides the forms given below, those of Standard Eastern Bengali are also freely used.

NOUNS.—Nominative.—The Nominative often takes the termination rā, as in palā-rā kay, the son says. It sometimes ends in ā, as in hāpālā kubālē, the child beat (her).

Accusative.—This case also optionally takes the termination rā, as in ai tākā-rā di, give this rupee. The regular termination of the accusative, corresponding to the standard kē, is gē, as in a-gē kobāo, beat him. Gē is added to any form of the nominative. Thus, polārāgē thālē, she placed the boy; hāpālāgē dēkhilē, he saw the child.

Instrumental.—The sign of this case is di or diā, as in dari diā (or di) bāniā, having tied him with a rope.

Dative.—The signs of the Dative are gē, as for the accusative, thāi and thit. Thus, a-gē di, give to him; bāp thāi, to a father; māstar thit kalē, he said to the master.

Ablative.—The signs of the Ablative are thākkā, and tan, as in tsuā thākkā, from the well; bāp-tan or (added to the genitive) bāp-lā-tan, from a father.

Genitive.—The sign of the Genitive is lāk or lā, as in rājā-lāk, of a king; rāni-lā, of the queen.

Locative.—The standard forms are common. Besides them, we have mi, ni, and mini suffixed. Thus, ghar-mi or ghar-mini, in the house; dēsha-ni, in the country.

The usual Plural Suffix is gilā.

PRONOUNS.—The Personal Pronouns are the following :—

	First Person.	Second Person.	Third Person.
Sing. Nom. . . .	mai	tai	ai
Oblique	ma	ta	a
Plur. Nom. . . .	āmrā or āmlā	tumrā or tumlā	amrā or amlā .
Oblique	ām , āmā	tum , tumā	am , um , amā , umā .

The Demonstrative Pronouns are ei and i, this, and ai, a, u, adā, udā, that.

The Relative Pronouns are jē, who, jā, what.

The Interrogative Pronouns are kāi (Obl., kā), who? and ki, what? kāi-u is 'anyone'; and kata, how many?

VERBS.—In the Conjugation of Verbs, the standard forms are freely used. We also have another set of forms for the various tenses, which do not change for number or person. This is due to the influence of Tibeto-Burman languages. Thus, take āsē, meaning 'am', 'is', 'are', we have.

mai āsē , I am	āmlā āsē , we are.
tai āsē , thou art	tumlā āsē , you are.
ai āsē , he is	amlā āsē , they are.

The Past Tense of the Verb Substantive is thākibār or thākibān.

The following are the conjugational forms of the root mār, strike :—

Present, mārē, strikes. Other examples are kay, says ; jāy, goes.

Past, māribār or māribān, struck. Other examples are jābār, went ; chābār, wished.

Imperative, mārek or mār, strike.

Infinitive, māribākē or māribāk.

The Future usually takes the standard form (māriba, etc.), but we have also karānga, will do, with a pure Tibeto-Burman termination.

The Conjunctive Participle ends, as in the standard dialect, in iyā, but usually adds the Locative suffix mi, as in dēkhiyā-mi, having seen.

In a certain country there lived a king whose daughter became of marriageable age. Then the king said, 'I shall give my daughter in marriage to whomever I see first to-morrow morning.' A widow, who had a suckling male-child, heard this. So she left it sleeping in the courtyard of the king's palace before the day dawned. As soon as the king rose, the first human being he saw was the child, and so, as soon as he saw him, he married his daughter to him; but great sorrow arose in the hearts of both him and his queen. The Princess, without speaking a word, took her husband in her lap, and went to the house of her mother-in-law, weeping as she walked. A few days after this the mother-in-law died, so the babe never knew who was his mother and who was his wife. The wife nursed and tended him till he was a grown-up boy, when she sent him to school to learn reading and writing. After learning for a while, the stripling said to his master, 'there's a woman in our house, and I don't know what she is to me. If I ask her she keeps silent, and won't answer me.' The master said, 'some day give her a sound drubbing, and let us see what she will say.' The boy then beat the woman, and she cried out, 'why do you beat your wife in this way?' The boy then understood, and became ashamed to speak to his master, for he came to know his wife through the master's artifice.

Immediately adjoining, and to the east of, Mymensingh is the Assam District of Sylhet. In the west and south of this District, especially in Sunānganj and Habiganj, the language closely resembles that of Mymensingh.

In North-East and North Sylhet, especially in Jaintiāpur and Karimganj, the language is more corrupt. Sylhet Town, which is the head-quarters of the District, being within six miles of the Jaintiāpur Pargana, lies within the area in which this dialect is spoken, and hence this form of speech is called Sylhettia by Europeans. For this reason it is often wrongly said that the language of the whole Sylhet District is uniform, and the term Sylhettia is incorrectly applied to the dialect of the west of the District, as well as to that of the North-East. The term 'Sylhettia' properly means the language of the town, and not of the District, of Sylhet. It is estimated that of the 2,033,000 speakers of Bengali in Sylhet, 1,355,000 use ordinary Eastern Bengali. The rest speak Sylhettia.

The following specimen is a piece of folk-lore for which I am indebted to Babu Padma Nath Bhattacharyya, Vidyāvinōd. It is in the dialect of Western Sylhet. It will be seen how closely the language agrees with that of the Mymensingh specimen. With regard to the spelling, it should be remembered that an unaccented o, as in tomār, is pronounced as if it was ū. Moreover, the y in words like kariyā is not pronounced. The letter ē is never pronounced ā as is the case in more western dialects of Bengali. When j or ḡ is pronounced as z, the sound is a little softer than that of the z in the English 'zeal.' The locative case ends in a not ē, as ghara for gharē, in a house.

In the Sunāmganj Subdivision of the Sylhet District, there is a village named Kālisurī, in which dwelt a certain Khankār. His family consisted of his wife and one son. One night there came a few of his relations on a visit; and when she had finished her cooking, his wife asked him to go out and cut some plantain-leaves, as there were not sufficient dishes in the house. He refused, saying, 'how am I to get leaves at this hour of the night?' Thereupon his wife, without leaving the house, stretched out her hand, and cut some plantain-leaves off a tree which was in Māmudpur, a village fully two daṇḍas, or a walk of forty-eight minutes, distant. When the Khankār saw this miracle he was filled with terror, and, on the following day, as soon as his relations had gone he told her that a message had come from her father's house, and that they must set out there at once. Then, taking his wife and son, he engaged a boat and started. After going some distance they came to an island in the middle of the river, and he said to his wife, 'you land here and make arrangements for cooking, and we will go and catch some fish.' Saying this, he landed her, and went off a long way in his boat. Then his wife understood his design of abandoning her, and cried out to him, 'Thou burnt-faced Khankār, in pity for thy son, I spare thy life this day, otherwise would I have shown thee a terrible miracle.'

Go home, go. But whoever henceforth lives on the site of thy house will be heirless.' Even to the present day, the site of that Khankār's house remains unoccupied.

As already stated, the dialect spoken in Sylhet Town and in the North and North-East of the District is that which Europeans call Sylhettia. Natives do not use this title. They call it Jaintiāpurī, Pūrba Srihātṭiyā, or Ujāniā. The latter means the language of the upper country. It is estimated that, of the 2,033,000 speakers of Bengali in Sylhet, 678,000 use this dialect. The most noteworthy peculiarity is the formation of the genitive singular, which ends in ār, not in ēr. We shall notice the same peculiarity in Cachar. The formation of the Periphrastic Present, with the syllable rā, which also is found in Cachar, should be noted.

AUTHORITY—

The Government Report on the History and Statistics of Sylhet District, by (?) T. Walton, B.C.S., Calcutta, 1867, contains a Vocabulary of words peculiar to the Sylhet District.

The following notes on Sylhettia Grammar are based on a very full account of the language which has been kindly placed at my disposal by Mr. P. H. O'Brien, I.C.S. With it I have combined information for which I am indebted to the kindness of Mr. A. Porteous, I.C.S., Mr. W. H. Lee, I.C.S., and Babu Padma Nath Bhattacharyya, Vidyāvinōd. As the compilation has been done by me, I must accept the entire responsibility for any errors which may be detected.

The language spoken by the inhabitants of Eastern Sylhet is not intelligible to the natives of Central or Northern Bengal. It is, nevertheless, Bengali. There are some peculiarities of pronunciation which tend to render it unintelligible to strangers. The inflections also differ from those of regular Bengali, and in one or two instances assimilate to those of Assamese.

Written character.—Among the low class Muhammadans of the east of the district the use of the Dēva-nāgarī alphabet occurs. It is extremely common for Muhammadans to sign their names in this character, and the only explanation they offer for its use is that it is so much easier to learn than Bengali. Puthis in Bengali are printed in this character, but except for this purpose and for the writing of signatures by otherwise illiterate men, the script is hardly used,—never, at least, in formal documents.

Pronunciation.—The vowel a is sometimes pronounced as in 'ball,' and is then transliterated ā. This is most noticeable when the vowel is followed by a liquid, as in mānushār, of a man; nāl, a rod; mān, a maund; ghār, a house. Ē is always pronounced correctly and never as the ā in hat. As regards consonants, the first point that strikes one is the guttural pronunciation of k, like the German ch.¹ Then ch is pronounced like English s, and there is no difference between ch and chh. Thirdly p is frequently pronounced like ph (not f but perhaps pf). Mr. Porteous does not think that any ordinary Sylhettia could attain to the true sound of ph. The change is not universal. Thus pāp, sin, does not become phāph. In fact, very little distinction is heard between any of the aspirated letters and their unaspirated originals, thus ghār is almost pronounced gār, and ভারী bhārī very much like bārī. Sometimes p has the sound of w, as supārī, pronounced suwārī.

The sibilant is often, but not invariably, changed to h. Thus hāph for sāp, a snake; hakaḥ for sakal, all. In words borrowed from Hindūstānī (which are common), the s-sound is usually preserved. Thus sārkar (not harkār) Government; sazā, punishment; sakht, hard; sāmhñē, before; samjhitē, to understand. The letter h is often dropped, thus 'āti for hāti, an elephant; ka'ilām for kahilām, I said; so, even, 'āt gāō, seven villages, for hāt gāō, which is itself for sāt gāō. In Eastern Sylhet (as distinct from the western sub-dialect) j is not pronounced as z. On the contrary the z of Hindūstānī words is pronounced as j. Thus jamīn, land, for zamīn. The distinction between cerebral and dental consonants has almost (but not quite) vanished. Educated natives can sometimes distinguish between āṭh-gāō, eight villages, and 'āt-gāō, but not easily. Practically, the literary word ashṭa (pronounced aṣṭa) is used for 'eight.'¹

The umlaut, or epenthesis, is noticeable in Sylhettia. A coming 'i' (ee) sound influences a present vowel, if there is a consonant between; e.g., কণা kanā is sounded kainā, কাল (কালি) kāl (kāli) is pronounced kāil. Similarly, চার (চারি) chār (chāri) is চাইর ṣāir, রাত (Standard Bengali রাত্রি rātri) is rāit, and so on. This influence is even felt by an antecedent উ u sound, as in ঘুরিও ghuriō, which is plainly ghuiriō on a Sylhettia's tongue.

In the following note, when a is pronounced as the ō in 'home,' it will be transliterated ō.

Declension.—

Nom. ঘর ghār.

Gen. ঘর ghārār.

Loc. ঘরো (ঘর) ghārō.

Abl. ঘরতনে ghārtanē.

বাড়ী bāri, a homestead.

Locative বাড়ীত (bārit).

So other nouns in ই i.

Singular.

Plural.

Nom. মানুষ mānush, মানুষে mānushē (মাইনশে māinshē).

মানুষরা mānushrā.

Gen. মানুষ mānshār.

মানুষরার mānushrār.

Dat. মানুষরে mānush-rē.

মানুষরারে mānushrā-rē.

Acc. do. do.

do. do.

Inst. মাইনশে māinshē.

মানুষরায় mānushrāy.

The plural sometimes ends in আইন āin. Thus ঘরাইন ghārāin, houses; গাছাইন gāṣāin, trees.

Conjugation.—

Preterite.

Singular.

Plural.

1. আমি দেখিলাম āmi dēkhlām

আমরা দেখিলাম āmrā dēkhlām.

2. তুমি দেখিলায় tumi dēkhlāy

তোমরা দেখিলায় tōmrā dēkhlāy.

তুইন দেখিলে tuin dēkhlē

তোরা দেখিলে tōrā dēkhlē.

3. তাইন (honorific) দেখিলা tāin dēkhlā

তাইনরা or } দেখিলা tāinrā or tāin tāin

হে (সে) দেখিলো } hē (sē) dēkhlō,

তাইন তাইন } dēkhlā.

(দেখিল), দেখল } dēkhlō

তারা দেখিলো (দেখিল) tārā dēkhlō, দেখল dēkhlō.

Future.

1. আমি দেখবু āmi dēkhmu [also দেখবাম dēkhhām—properly Western Sylhet.]

2. তুমি দেখবায় tumi dēkhhāy.

তুইন দেখবে tuin dēkhhē.

3. তাইন দেখবা tāin dēkhhā (honorific):

হে দেখবো (দেখব) hē dēkhhō.

¹ Authorities do not all agree about the pronunciation of these letters. Babu Padmanath Bhattacharyya, Vidyāvinōd, who is a native of Sylhet District, considers that চ ch is pronounced more like ts than like s, but to English ears there is no difference between ch and chh. He adds that the Musalmāns of the North-east of the district pronounce ক kh like the Arabic ك kā and ফ ph like the Arabic ف f. The letter হ h, he says, is not elided at the commencement of a word. Thus, while he would pronounce কহিলাম kahlām, as ka'ilām, he would always pronounce the h at the commencement of হাতি hāti.

The Conditional Preterite is also used for the Future. It is as follows :—

1. দেখতাম dēkhtām.
2. দেখতায় dēkhtāy.
দেখতে dēkhtē.
3. (Hon.) দেখত dēkhtā.
দেখতো dēkhtō.

Conditional Present.

1. দেখি dēkhi.
2. দেখো (দেখ) dēkhō.
দেখ dēkh.
3. দেখইন dēkhain (honorific).
দেখে dēkhē

The sound of the ai in dēkhain is very much like the sound of the Russian ai.

Periphrastic Present.

1. বাইতেছি jāitēsi, not zāchchi.
বাইয়ার jāiyār.
বাইত্রাম jāitrām.
বাইরাম jāirām.
2. বাইতেছ jāitēsō or বাইত্রায় jāitrāy, etc.
বাইতেছোছ jāitēsōs or বাইত্রে jāitrē, etc.
etc., etc.

Perfect.

1. গেছি gesi.
2. গেছ gesō.
গেছোছ gesōs.
3. গেছইন gesain.
গেছে gesē.

In Western Sylhet the form is গীছি gīsi, etc.

Imperative.

It is the same as in regular Bengali except in the honorific person, e.g., বসিতে (বসিতে) baîtē (basitē), to sit.

তুই ব tui ba, sit.

তুমি বও tumi baō (pronounced baw-ō).

আপনি বইন or বউকা āphni baïn or baükā.

Do not sit (to an inferior) বওছ (বছ) না baōs (bas) nā.

আপনি āphni takes the 3rd person honorific of the verb. The feminine of হে (সে) hē (sē), he, is তাই tāi, she.

তাইন tāin is equivalent to তিনি tinī. Ki-tā karain tāin, what does he do? Its plural is তাইনরা tāinrā, তাইন তাইন tāin tāin, and even তিনিরা tinirā, according to locality.

- The last form is not considered correct, though it occurs in petitions. তান tān is the genitive and oblique case of হে hē, he, and of তাই tāi, she. Some derivative pronominal form are, এবায় ēbāy, this way; উবায় ubāy, that way; হনো hanō, there; যেব্লা jēblā, when তবলা tēblā or হেব্লা hēblā, then; কুবায় or কুয় kubāy or kucāy, where; কেমনে kēmanē, how ; কেনে kēnē, why ; এখন akhan, now ; কিণ্ডর লাগি kiōr lāgi or কিসের লাগি kisēr lāgi, why ? The last phrase is ordinary Bengali.

Construction.—The most noticeable peculiarity of construction is with regard to the infinitive of purpose or desire.

‘ I wish to go ’ may be expressed—

আমি যাইতে চাই āmī jāitē chāi.

আমি যাইতাম চাই āmī jāitām chāi.

আমি যাইবার চাই āmī jāibār chāi.

In the second case both the verbs are inflected in the other persons, e.g.— তুমি যাইতায় চাও tumi jāitāy chāō.

হে যাইত চায় hē jāitō chāy.

তাইন যাইতা চাইন tāin jāitā chāin.

[Zamindar]. তোর লোগে কিছু আনোছ নাই।
Tōr lōgē kisu ānōs nāi?
 Have you brought nothing with you?

NOTE.—In this note the inherent a when it has the aw-sound as in ball is transliterated ā. When it has the o-sound as in roll it is transliterated ō. Sometimes the o-sound is represented by the vernacular ও in writing, e.g. কব্বত or কর্ত্তো karta or kartō, he will do.

FREE-TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

I was at home. Then a child came and told me that Ārjad was cutting and carrying off my sesamum. On this I went (to the field), and objected to his cutting. Then he replied, 'I am come to cut the sesamum by the order of Śarat Thākūr.' I answered, 'This land has been cultivated by me for fourteen years. The crop was sown by me. How can you take it?' He then rushed at me with a sickle, to cut me, but I caught the sickle in my hand. I then turned back and saw his uncle standing by, who came and separated us. On this he ran at me with a cudgel, and gave me a blow on the head. I cried out, 'See, Gentlemen all, he is killing me.' After this I received a blow and fell down. Then he cudgelled me well on the back and on the forearm. Then he cut the sesamum and carried it away. My nephew took me home. He cut the sesamum himself, while some little boys carried it away.

East of Sylhet lies the District of Cachar, also belonging to the Assam Province. The language of the south of the District is Bengali, which is superseded in the hills in the north of the District, and also in the hill country to the east and south of the District, by various languages of the Tibeto-Burman family. The Bengali spoken in Cachar is the most eastern outpost of the language. It is the same as that spoken in Eastern Sylhet, and possesses all the peculiar characteristics of the extreme Eastern Bengal type. Amongst special peculiarities exhibited by the two specimens annexed, the following may be noticed.

There is a tendency to pronounce an initial p as f. Thus paramarsa, counsel, is pronounced förömörshö. So strong is this tendency that words which properly commence with ph are spelt with a p and pronounced as if beginning with f. Thus phēlāi-yāchhi, I disregarded, is spelt pālāichhi and is pronounced fālāisi. We shall notice this peculiarity again in the South-Eastern Bengali of Chittagong.

In nouns, the genitive case ends in ār, in which the ā is pronounced like the aw in awl. Thus, mānushār, of a man. The locative ends in a. Thus, dēsa, in a country.

Amongst verbal forms, note hayar, it is, used in asking a question. Note also forms like kartrā, he is doing; āichhāin, he (honorific) has come; dichhāin, he (honorific) has given. The terminations of these two last are the regular terminations of the 3rd person honorific in Bihari. Also note pāilaanē, he would have found.

Of the two specimens given, the first is a translation of the Parable of the Prodigal Son, and the other is the statement of an accused person, made in a Criminal Court, and taken down in his own language.

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

[In the phonetic transcription ' represents the elision of an aspirate, which gives a pronunciation like that of h in the French word hôte. S is hard as in this, sin. It is not pronounced like the sh in shell, which is represented by sh. Z is somewhat softer than the z of zeal, but not so soft as the s in pleasure.

Pronounce ā as the a in hat; ē as the e in met; ō as the o in hot; ā like a in all; and oi as in oil. The letter o (without any diacritical mark) represents the sound of the first o in promote, and is the French word votre as compared with votre. It should be carefully distinguished from the ō of hot.

Other consonants and vowels are pronounced as in the authorized Government system.]

The dialect of Tippera closely agrees with that of Dacca. Two specimens are given,—one the parable of the Prodigal Son, and the other a statement made in court by an accused person.

The following special peculiarities may be noted :—

The tendency to drop aspiration is stronger even than in Dacca, the aspiration of even hard aspirated consonants being liable to be dropped. Thus k'āiyā, having eaten, for khāiyā; uītā, having risen, for uṭhiyā; rāk'a for rākha, keep; mit'a for mithyā, false. Sometimes even aspirated consonants are dropped altogether, and a y substituted. Thus zayam dāyēn, for zakham dēkhēn see the wounds. In the middle of a word, ch like chh, is pronounced as s. At the commencement of a word the pronunciation of ch is described as 'a cross between s and ch.' In the transliteration, I represent it in the first case by s, and in the second case by ts.

The elision of h is also carried further. Thus, as in Dacca, s is pronounced h. Thus āshiyā, having come, becomes, first, āhiyā, and then ā'iyā; shuna, hear, becomes first huna, and then 'una.

In the declension of nouns, the accusative-dative sometimes ends in ra, as in pāt-ra, to the field.

The following are examples of the plural, tsākrānirā-rē, to servants; naṭinirā-rē, to harlots; tsākrarār, of servants.

Special forms of pronouns, are āmārē, me, or to me; āmār or āmrār, my; tamār, thy; tē or tāin (respectful) he; tān-rē, to him (respectful); tārār, of them; tārā-rē, to them; hāyār or hēr, of this.

In the Auxiliary verbs, s (chh) is sometimes disaspirated to s (ch). Thus we find āsa, thou art; āsil, he was.

Examples of the Perfect, are karsi, or karsi-ō, I have done; karsa, thou hast done; karssē and karsē, he has done.

For the Future, we have zāyyām, I will go; balbām, I will say.

The Conjunctive Participle differs slightly from that of Dacca. Examples are,— bāiṭṭā, having divided ; chaṭṭā, having gone ; uṭṭā, having risen ; baṭṭā, having spoken ; maṭṭā, having died ; āinnā, having brought ; āishshā, having come, and so on.

The Infinitive ends in tō, as in b'ārtō, to fill, or in tām, as in ka'itām, to say.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

Incarnation of justice, I have not really beaten my mother-in-law. She has laid a false charge. Her son has beaten me. Last Tuesday I went to the hills at dawn to cut firewood. On returning in the afternoon I did not find my wife at home. I had a small shepherd boy named Hāji 'Ali whom I asked, 'where is she?' He said that my mother-in-law had come and, giving her evil advice, had taken her away. She had a neck-ring on her neck, a nose-ring in her nose, an ankle-ring on her ankles. She has gone away with them. The day before yesterday in the evening after the time of the makrim prayer I went to her father's house with the panchāyats of the village. The panchāyats stood on a mat in the middle of the courtyard. I was on the steps of the back door of the additional shed attached to the hut on the eastern bhiti, when the elder brother of my wife came running, from where I know not, and struck me on my calf with a stick; again rising, he struck me on my back below the shoulder. My wife's younger brother gave me a slap, and a blow with his elbow from behind.

Incarnation of justice, see my wounds. My mother-in-law has without cause laid this plot against me and instituted this false charge in order to ruin me, and after obtaining my wife's divorce to give her in marriage elsewhere.

More than a hundred miles south-east of Dacca, at the mouth of the River Megna lies the island of Sandip, with a population of 100,000, now forming part of the District of Noakhali. Although the language of the island of Hatiā to the west, of Noakhali to the north, and of Chittagong to the east, is the South-Eastern dialect of Bengali, which is usually named after the District of Chittagong, the language of Sandip is a curious isolated example of the Eastern Bengali spoken in the Dacca District. This is probably due to the circumstances under which the island was populated. The following history of Sandip is condensed from the pages of the Statistical Account of Noakhali.

Cæsar Frederick, the Venetian traveller, in 1565 described the inhabitants of Sandip as "Moors"; and stated that the island was one of the most fertile places in the country, densely populated and well cultivated. Purchas, circ., 1620 A.D., mentioned that most of the inhabitants were Muhammadans; and there are now several mosques in the island two hundred years old, and others on the mainland of a still greater age. The Muhammadan population of the islands around the mouths of the Megna practised piracy up to a comparatively recent date. The last pirate of note was one Dilāl, Raja of Sandip, who kept a small army in his pay. He was eventually captured by the Nawāb of Bengal, and ended his days in an iron cage at Murshidabad. From the time that Sandip first came under British administration, it formed a constant source of disquiet. It afforded an asylum for the refuse of the river Districts from Dacca southwards, and had a mixed population of Hindūs, Musalmāns, and Maghs, who formed on the island agricultural colonies, fishing settlements, piratical villages, and robber communities. The subordinate tenants kept up a bitter quarrel with the landholder-in-chief, and every class seemed to have a grudge against the rest, and some complaint to make against Government. But the firm administration of the British officials gradually produced its effect. A Commissioner was appointed to measure and partition the island. His appearance, however, was at first only the signal for new disorders. He, on the one hand, complained of 'obstructions and difficulties,' thrown in the way of his executing his duties ; while on the other hand, the tālūkdārs forwarded a bitter petition and lament. Ultimately the troublesome island was placed under the direct management of the Collector, who was ordered to conduct a land settlement. This was subsequent to 1785. In 1822 the island was made over to the newly constituted District of Noakhali.

If we are permitted to take language as a test of origin, we may assume that the majority of the heterogeneous collection of pirates, fishermen and agriculturists, who formed the population of Sandip when it came under British administration, came from the neighbourhood of Dacca. As will be seen, the dialect closely resembles that of the Districts of Dacca and Tippera.

Of the three specimens here given, the first is the parable of the Prodigal Son. The second and third are folk-songs. The third is historically interesting, as it shows that the inhabitants of the island have still the same objection to having their land measured, and the same lawless instincts, including a readiness to apply the 'red bull,' i.e. fire, to the houses of anyone who might harbour the objectionable land-surveyors.

The remarks regarding the dialect of Dacca also apply here. As special forms, we may note, the dative plural, tār-ga-rē, to them; the use of the verb ditē, to give, to form inceptive compounds, as in karan dila, they began to do; and the infinitive in tām, which we have also met in Tippera. Here it occurs in the third specimen, in the phrase, kaīrtam ditām na, we would not allow to do. There is a tendency to elide the letter r, as in the word mattēsi, I am dying, and in b'a'ittē, to fill. The other forms will be found dealt with under the head of the dialect of Dacca.

[In the phonetic transcription ' represents the elision of an aspirate which gives a pronunciation like that of h in the French word hôte. Z is somewhat softer than the z of zeal, but not so soft as the s in pleasure. The letter ' (above the line) is very faintly pronounced, and is, indeed, hardly audible.

Pronounce ā as the a in hat; ē as the e in met; ō as the o in hot; and oi as in oil. The letter o (without any diacritical mark) represents the sound of the first o in promote, and is the o in the French word votre as compared with vôtre. It should be carefully distinguished from the ō of hot.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

(1) A learned man is pleased if Musalmāns listen to his sermons. And a sad man becomes glad when he finds happiness in the midst of the fire of his sorrow.

(2) A beggar becomes happy when he gets his alms; and a poor man when he obtains wealth. The money-lenders become happy if they can soon realize their interest.

(3) Muḥabbat 'Alī says that, failing to have the object of his desires, a son-in-law is satisfied when he is entertained with new things in his father-in-law's house.

(4) A fisherman becomes glad when he can catch enough of fish. A carpenter is delighted when he gets good wood to work.

(5) A lover is pleased when he meets with his dear beloved; and a woman rejoices when she gets ornaments and finds a beau.

(6) A bird loves to fly and sits on branches of trees. A peacock is delighted and dances with its tail-feathers erected, when clouds gather in the sky.

(7) A boatman is pleased to make a voyage, if he can make some profit. A rower is glad when he sets sail against stream.

(8) The village attorney fraudulently earns money; and office-clerks become glad when they receive bribes.

(9) The Judge is pleased if his order be not reversed; and the lawyers (who are great liars) become glad when they receive their fees.

(10) The dancers become cheerful when a reward is given; and the police are full of joy when anybody is murdered.

(11) The bees are satiated with honey, and gardeners are delighted with flowers. Learned men feel deep joy in reading poetry and holy books, and the gods are pleased with offerings.

(12) Brahmā, Viṣṇu, and Śiva are won over by hearty devotion; and he who has the power of the three gods can attain to heaven.

Separated from Dacca by the River Meghna, and together forming the delta which lies between that river and the River Madhumati or Haringhata (both being mouths of the Ganges), lie the two Districts of Faridpur on the north, and Backergunge on the south. The dialect of the latter District closely agrees with that of Dacca, as will be evident from the specimens to be given, and from the following note kindly furnished by Mr. Beatson Bell, I.C.S., Collector of Backergunge.

A.—PRONUNCIATION—

1. In this District, as elsewhere, the endings of verbal forms are clipped. Thus, baliyāchhē is pronounced bolsē, etc.

2. The aspiration is frequently omitted from soft consonants, bh being pronounced as b, dh as d, and gh as g. Thus—dhār is pronounced as dār.

bhāi „ bāi.

ghar „ gar.

3. The letter ḡ is sometimes pronounced like è and sometimes as ē. Thus ḡk, one, but hē, he. In the phonetic transcriptions I write the sound which Mr. Beatson Bell represents by ḡ as e. It is nearly but not quite the e in met.

4. Initial s is often pronounced as h: e.g., śēshē is pronounced as hēshē.

5. The letter k in the middle of a word is generally pronounced as h: e.g., ākāl, a famine, is pronounced āhāl. The k in the verb karitē, to do, can also be throughout pronounced as h.

6. Initial h is sometimes dropped as is done in London. Thus, hākīm is pronounced 'āhīm. So medial h in words like ka'ilām, or ka'ilām for kahilām.
7. The letter ch is pronounced as ts. Thus chākar is pronounced tsāhar.
8. The letter chh is always pronounced as the s in 'sea.'
9. The letter j is often pronounced as z. Thus jal becomes zal.

B.—GRAMMATICAL PECULIARITIES—

NOUNS—

1. The plural in the oblique cases is often represented by gō.
2. The accusative is generally in rē and not kē.

PRONOUNS—

1. The plural in gō is used here also : thus, mōr, my ; mōr-gō, our.
2. The genitive of the third personal pronoun is sēr, and not tāhār. Sēr is pronounced hēr, as noted above. The genitive of the honorific third personal pronoun is not tāhār but tāhān.

VERBS—

1. The most noticeable grammatical peculiarity, apart from mere carelessness of pronunciation, is the first person of the future tense. It ends, not in ba, but in mu. Thus jāmu, or zāmu, I shall go ; karmu, or harmu, I shall do.

2. The infinitive in tām is used in parts of the District near Tippera and Noakhali. This form does not occur in the specimens.

The following four specimens which come from Backergunge are—

- (1) The Parable of the Prodigal Son ;
- (2) A popular Muhammadan song from the Patuakhali Sub-division in the south of the District, bordering on the Bay of Bengal ;
- (3) A popular Hindū hymn from the Pirōjpur Sub-division ; and
- (4) A satirical poem from a Barisal newspaper, called the Barisāl Hitaishī, of the 26th November 1897, entitled Chhakānanda. The last is the only printed specimen of the Backergunge dialect which I have seen. It is a skit upon the appointment of democratic assessors who had at the time been recently appointed in the District.

In addition to the information contained in the above notes, I am informed by Babu Monmohan Chakravarti, who is well acquainted with the Backergunge dialect, that there are two other peculiarities of pronunciation which should be remembered. The first is that a final a at the end of a word is pronounced like the ō in 'hot,' and not like the o in 'port' as is customary in Standard Bengali. Thus kahila, he said, is pronounced hō'ilō, not hō'ilō, as we might expect. The other is that, as elsewhere in Eastern Bengal, the letter r is pronounced as r. Thus baṛa, great, is pronounced bōrō, not bōrō. Besides the above, the following forms occurring in the specimens should be noted, as illustrating stray peculiarities of the dialect. Uḍiyā for uṭhiyā, having arisen ; rāhō and rēhō for rākha, keep thou ; hēlāi for phēlāi, I throw away ; and bōz'dē for bujhītē, to understand. Note also the verb substantive thāha (i.e., thāka), thou art.

AUTHORITY—

জিলবুনিয়াতে তোমেরদি অয়দর মেয়ার নাতি ।
 মোকামিয়াতে লালমতি ঐ রঙ্গের যুবতী ॥
 তোমেরদি এ মুল্লুহে মোরে রেহোনা ॥ ১ ॥
 জোপখালীতে বসত করে জেউল্লা ব্যাপারী ।
 তার গরের ছোড মাইয়া লালমতি সুন্দরী ॥
 তোমেরদি এ মুল্লুহে মোরে রেহোনা ॥ ২ ॥
 মোকামিয়াতে দেছে বিয়া কুসাখার পোয়ের দে ।
 তার আউনা কেশীর তাগা কোমরে জোর মাদলীমাতে ॥
 তোমেরদি এ মুল্লুহে মোরে রেহোনা ॥ ৩ ॥
 কানে আছে কানচাপা নাকে আছে সোনা ।
 লালমতির গলে আছে সোনার চিকলী দানা ॥
 তোমেরদি এ মুল্লুহে মোরে রেহোনা ॥ ৪ ॥
 লালমতির পায়ে মল কলই জন্ জন্ করে ।
 তা দেখে তোমেরদি বাড়ীর চার দার গোরে ॥
 তোমেরদি এ মুল্লুহে মোরে রেহোনা ॥ ৫ ॥
 লালমতি গঞ্জরা একই জোরা বাড়ী ।
 তা দেখিয়া তোমেরদি চৈকে পইল আরি ॥
 তোমেরদি এ মুল্লুহে মোরে রেহোনা ॥ ৬ ॥
 এক রোজ তোমেরদি রাস্তা পতে যায় ।
 সেই কালে লালমতি আত ইসারায় কয় ॥
 তোমেরদি এ মুল্লুহে মোরে রেহোনা ॥ ৭ ॥

 বিকাল বেলা তোমেরদি মোগ বার্তে আইও ॥
 তোমেরদি এ মুল্লুহে মোরে রেহোনা ॥ ৮ ॥
 এতক হুনিয়া তোমের মনের আনন্দিতে ।
 বিকাল বেলা গেলেন তোমের লালমতির বাড়ীতে ॥
 তোমেরদি এ মুল্লুহে মোরে রেহোনা ॥ ৯ ॥
 লালমতি কয় তোমেরদি মোর কতা লও ।
 মোর কোলে কাটা পোলা মাজিয়া বউরে নেও ॥
 তোমেরদি এ মুল্লুহে মোরে রেহোনা ॥ ১০ ॥

লালমতি কয় তোমেরদি মোর কতা রাহ ।
 মাজিয়া বউরে নিয়া আগে ওজন করিয়া দেহ ॥
 তোমেরদি এ মুল্লুহে মোরে রেহোনা ॥ ১১ ॥
 লালমতি কয় তোমেরদি বোজ্জুদে পারলানি ।
 মাজিয়া বউরে নিয়া দেহ রাখতে পারনি ॥
 তোমেরদি এ মুল্লুহে মোরে রেহোনা ॥ ১২ ॥
 লালমতি কয় তোমেরদি কই তোমার কাছে ।
 মাজিয়া বউরে লেও আগে মুই যামু পাছে ॥
 তোমেরদি এ মুল্লুহে মোরে রেহোনা ॥ ১৩ ॥

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

1. In Jilbuniā lived Tōmēraddi, the grandson of Ḥaidar Mīyā; and in Mōkāmiā dwelt Lālmāti, a damsel of fair complexion.

(Refrain,—O Tōmēraddi, keep me not in this land.)*

2. In Jōpkhāli liveth Ziāullā the merchant, and in his house was the fair Lālmāti the youngest daughter.

3. He gave her in marriage to (Rahīm Khān,) the son of Kusā Khān of Mōkāmiā. Long is her hair; she weareth a girdle at her waist, and a double amulet on her head.

4. In her ear is an earring; on her nose is gold; on her neck is a golden necklace.

5. On her feet are tinkling anklets; and when Tōmēraddi seeth these he taketh to wandering round her homestead.

6. Lālmāti Gañjarā hath two homesteads, and when he seeth this Tōmēraddi's eyes are attracted to her.

7. One day Tōmēraddi goeth along the road, and Lālmāti signalleth to him with her hand, saying,——

8. Lālmāti saith, 'Tōmēraddi, take heed to my words. Come this afternoon, O Tōmēraddi, to my homestead.'

9. When he heard this, the soul of Tōmēraddi was filled with delight. That afternoon did he go to Lālmāti's homestead.

10. Saith Lālmāti, 'Tōmēraddi, take heed to my words. In my lap is a little son. (I cannot flee with thee.) Take my sister-in-law, the wife of my husband's middle brother.'

11. Saith Lālmāti, 'Tōmēraddi, take heed to my words. Take first my sister-in-law. Weigh her and see (that she is more beautiful than I).'

12. Saith Lālmāti, 'Tōmēraddi, canst thou not understand? See if thou art able to take and keep my sister-in-law.'

13. Saith Lālmāti, 'Tōmēraddi, I speak to thee. Take first my sister-in-law, and I will follow afterwards.'

14. Saith Tōmēraddi, 'Lālmāti, I speak to thee. If thou comest afterwards, what shall I do with her?'

15. Saith Lālmāti, 'Tōmēraddi, remain thou seated for awhile. Wait but a little while, that I may put on my veil and come.'

16. So much saith she, and she taketh and putteth on her veil, and forth she goeth out of the house with Tōmēraddi.

17. Saith Lālmāti, 'Thou hast undone the knots and dishevelled all my hair, which I had combed and anointed with cocoa-nut oil.'

18. When he carried off Lālmāti, Tōmēraddi was struck in great perplexity. At first he took her to Jilbuniā.

19. Perplexed was he as to what he should do, now that he had carried off Lālmāti. The first day he concealed her in the house of Khidir's mother.

20. Thence he took her in a boat across the river, and hid her in Kādāliā, in the house of Sarabullā.

* This refrain is repeated in the original after each verse.

21. In this way some days were passed, and then Rahim Khān, (her husband,) brought a criminal case in the court at Patuakhali.

22. So, for carrying off Lālmāti, and for her sake, Tōmēraddi suffered a year's imprisonment.

(Refrain,—O Tōmēraddi, keep me not in this land.)

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

The conversation of Kālu and Dhalu with their ploughs on their shoulders.

Kālu.—O brother sir, what shall I do? I am an assessor or something. Government has given a summons: we and the Judge and the Magistrate shall decide the sessions case as a panchāyat. A great devil is on my back: is there any way out of this? In thought, in thought, my brother, I have no sleep all night.

Dhalu.—O brother sir, what is your anxiety in this? God has given you a judgeship. Now how many pleaders and mukhtars will fold their hands before you, saying 'your honour, your honour!' how often will they sing your praises in various ways! Now you beside the judge will sit, sir, on a chair. This is good news, brother sir: now we want some sweetmeats.

Kālu.—Let ashes fall on the forehead of such good fortune: what is the use of such good fortune? When the time of the plough has passed away, what shall I eat to save my life? We are cultivating men, brother sir. Do we understand cases one cinder? Poor men without resource, our difficulty is to eat and live. Another difficulty has come on the top of all and a useless expenditure of pice. Does this suit us? Fine folk understand the work of fine folk.

The dialect of some 20,000 people inhabiting the 'chars' within the jurisdictions of the Bhēdarganj and Gōsainhāt outposts of the Palang Thana, in the extreme south-east of the Faridpur District, and bordering on Backergunge, is nearly the same as the dialect of the latter district. A few lines of the translation of the Parable of the Prodigal Son received from that locality will be sufficient to prove the similarity. It is hence unnecessary to do more than this in order to illustrate the dialect. The translation is as follows:—

Kērō mānshēr	dugā pōlā	āchhil.	Hēr mad'yē	yē chhōdā	āchhil, hē
Kērō mānshēr	dugā pōlā	āsil.	Hēr maiddē	zē sōdā	āsil, hē
A-certain	man's	two sons	were.	Of-them	among he-who younger was, he hēr bāērē	ka'ila,	'bā-ji,	bittār	yē b'āg	āmār b'āgē pāimu, āmārē dē.'
hēr bāērē	kōilō,	'bā-zi,	bittār	zē bāg	āmār bāgē pāimu, āmārē dē.'
his father-to	said,	'father,	of-the-property	what share	my in-share I-shall-get, me-to give.'
Ēi kat'ā	huinnā	hē tā-gar	mad'yē	b'āg	kaīrā dila.
Ēi kōtā	huinnā	hē tā-gōr	maiddē	bāg	kōirā dilō.
This word	having-heard	he	of-them	among	division having-made gave.

It will be seen that the dialect is slightly mixed with the Tippera idiom. Words like huinnā, etc., belong to Tippera rather than to Backergunge. The locality where the dialect is spoken is only separated from Tippera by the River Megna.

The dialects of the Districts of Faridpur, Jessore and Khulna form a connecting link between the standard language of Central Bengal, and the extreme Eastern type which we find in Dacca and Backergunge.

If we wish to give the sub-dialect of these Districts a distinct name, we may call it East-Central.

The only real marks of an Eastern pronunciation which we meet in these three Districts is in the letters chh, which is pronounced as s, and j which is pronounced as z. Thus we have āchhē, he is, pronounced, āsē, and jan, a person, is pronounced zōn. There is also the usual tendency to pronounce e like the ā in hat. Thus gela, he went, is pronounced gālō.

But ch is not pronounced ts or s. They say chākar, a servant, not tsākar; h is not dropped. They say hāila, he became, not 'āila, and dhariyā, having seized, not d'ariyā; s is not pronounced as h. They say sāp (shāp), a snake, not hāp.

We still find the dative termination, rē instead of kē, but, as a rule, allowing for contractions, the grammar is practically the same as that of Central Bengal.

In the extreme south of Faridpur, as already pointed out, the dialect is the same as that of Backergunge.

The first two specimens come from the Sub-division of Bagerhat, in the Khulna District. This part of the country being close to Backergunge still retains some of the peculiarities of that District.

The system of transliteration is the modified phonetic one used for Eastern Bengali.

The Collector also states, 'the pronunciation of j as z is by no means universal, and when it occurs, is more common in the middle than in the beginning of word.' I have not attempted to show this transliteration. I have thought it best to transliterate every j sound by z, as in the case of other Eastern Bengali specimens.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

A few boys were playing about on the channel bank. After a time the man came to the landing-place in a boat, and shortly afterwards cried out, 'Alas, alas, I am Bengali.

gone, I am dying.' Then the boys ran into their houses saying that a mad man had come and was acting in a queer way. Then Safar Hauladār came and took a doctor who was at Rāmchandrapur to Usmānullā's house. The doctor examined the man and said that he had become speechless. At that moment, or shortly afterwards, the man died.

The following specimen comes from Jessore. It is the Parable of the Prodigal Son.

The translation is an excellent specimen of the dialect.

Note the tendency, which we have also observed in Western Bengali for the 3rd singular Past to end in ō in the case of intransitive, and in ē in the case of transitive verbs. Thus thāklō, he remained; uṭhlō, he arose; but kalē, he said; dēlē, he gave.

The Habitual Past, as usual, is always treated as if the verb was intransitive. Thus, khātō, they used to eat.

The next specimen also comes from Jessore. It is a statement made in Court by an accused person, recorded in his own language. We may note that in the word thā'ō, remain, we have an instance of the elision of a medial k, which we shall subsequently see is common in South-East Bengal. Note, also, the change of r to n, in the word nāttir, of the night.

TRANSLITERATION AND TRANSLATION.

[In this transliteration z is somewhat softer than the z of zeal, but not so soft as the s in pleasure. Pronounce z as in this, not like the sh in shell, which is represented by sh. The letters ' and ' (above the line) are very faintly pronounced, and are, indeed, hardly audible. The consonant preceding them should be pronounced as if doubled.

Pronounce ā as the a in hat, ē as the e in met. The letter o (without any diacritical mark) represents the sound of the first o in promote, and is the o in the French word votre as compared with vôtre. It should be carefully distinguished from the ō of hot.

Other consonants and vowels are pronounced as in Standard Bengali.]

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

Baktār has committed murder. I saw him and Umēs do it. Baktār said to me at midday, 'Jēhēd, go to Umēs's house this evening.' Accordingly, I went that night, after eating, to Umēs's house. Umēs told me to eat and stay there for the night. At midnight, Umēs went out in the direction of the canal, and after he came back told me that it was time to go. I asked where we had to go, and he said, 'we have to uproot a few paddy plants of mine.' I told him that I should not be able to do any stealing, and he told me to come, and that he and some one else would do the uprooting. I said, 'who else?' and he said, 'Baktār Shēkh.' Then I said, 'come along; let us be going.' So they went off to a field of paddy plants.....After a time I heard Narim Sardār crying out, 'Jasim! Hāsim! Baktār Shēkh has murdered me.' I ran up in the direction of the voice and saw Baktār strike him on the forearm. He also held Narim's arm to one side with his left hand, while, with his right hand, he gashed him on the neck with a bill-hook. I ran up to catch hold of Baktār, but could not do so, and remained standing by the head of the murdered man.

It is unnecessary to give any specimens from Faridpur. The dialect and its pronunciation are the same as in Jessore. In the extreme south, the dialect is the same as that of Backergunge, vide p. 264.

VII.—SOUTH-EASTERN BENGALI.

Along the eastern shore of the Bay of Bengal, in the Districts of Noakhali (excluding the island of Sandip, in which Eastern Bengali is spoken) and Chittagong, and in the north of the District of Akyab, the last belonging to the Province of Burmah, a very peculiar dialect of Bengali is spoken, which I have named the South-Eastern. Here the causes which have led to the corruption of Eastern Bengali have proceeded to their extreme limits, and, especially in Chittagong and Akyab, the difference is so marked that a native from other parts of Bengal does not readily understand what is said to him. In Chittagong itself, the dialect is known as ‘Chaṭgāiyā,’ but this name is hardly suitable, as it will be seen that the form of the language extends not only to most of the islands at the mouth of the Megna, but also to the District of Noakhali, proper, on the mainland, between Chittagong and Tippera. The only exception is, as already stated, the island of Sandip. A sub-dialect is spoken by the Chākmās of the Chittagong Hill Tracts, which will be described later on.

The language is spoken by the following number of people :—

Name of District.	Number of Speakers.
Noakhali	909,199
Chittagong	1,267,433
Akyab	114,152*
Chittagong Hill Tracts (Chākmā)	20,000
TOTAL	2,310,784

The following account of South-Eastern Bengali is based on Mr. Pargiter's work above mentioned, with a few additions derived from other sources :—

I.—PRONUNCIATION—

The vowel a is, as elsewhere in Bengal, pronounced like the ö in hot. It retains this sound even at the end of words, where, in standard Bengali, it would be pronounced like the ō in port. Thus তুমি, thou art, is pronounced āsō, not āsō. There is a tendency to substitute this vowel for others. Thus কাঁফিয়াত, a remark, is pronounced kōfiōt, and chhōḍa, small, is pronounced chōḍō. In the interior of a word it is often pronounced like a long ō. Thus haīl, he, was pronounced 'ōīl.

* Figures taken from the Census Report.

The letter k at the beginning of a word very often has the sound of a rough kh, like that of the Arabic ح kh, or like the ch in loch. Thus kaun, who? is pronounced khaun. In transliteration this sound will be represented by kh.

K is sometimes pronounced g. Thus gōri for kari, having given.

Kh is often pronounced like h; and is sometimes corrupted to g. Thus mug dēi sinī, for mukh dēkhilē chini, if I saw his face, I should recognise him.

Ch is pronounced like s. Thus chākar, a servant, is pronounced sāōr; kharach, expenditure, pronounced khōrōs.

Chh is pronounced like ch, at the beginning of words, and like s in the middle of words. Thus, chhōḍa, small, is pronounced chōḍō, and āchhi, I am, is pronounced āsi.

J (including জ j) and jh are pronounced like the z in zeal. Thus, jan, a person, is pronounced zōn; bujhit, to understand, pronounced buzit.¹

Ṭ and ṭh are often changed to ḍ. Thus uḍa for uṭha, get up; chhōḍa for chhōṭa, small.

P at the beginning of a word is often pronounced like f. Thus fāri for pāri, I can. Sometimes even like h. Thus hōlā (in Noakhali) for pōlā, a son; hāichhi (in Hātīā) for pāichhi, I have got; hut (Noakhali) for put, a son.

Ph is often pronounced like p or h. Thus pellām for phēlilām, I threw; and hēla for phēla, throw. In Noakhali ph in the middle or at the end of a word is regularly pronounced f. Thus bāphē, pronounced bāfē, the father.

Ṣ, sometimes, and s, generally, at the beginning of a word are pronounced like h. Thus sakal, all, becomes hōkōl; and sōr, a noise, becomes hūr.

H is frequently elided. Thus haīl, he was, pronounced 'ōīl; ka'īl, for kahila, he said.

Y in composition with another consonant is almost always distinctly pronounced as in kargya, thou madest, pronounced kōrgyō, and not kōrgg'ō or kōgg'ō. When the vowels a or ā are in the syllable preceding such a y, they are pronounced as if the vowel i came between them and the succeeding consonant. This is specially the case when the y in combination is followed by the vowel ē. Thus māpyē, he measured, is pronounced māipyē; sākhya (properly sāksha), hāikya; āsyē, he came, āishyē, and so on.

A single consonant, especially a hard one, occurring between two vowels is often elided, and the vowels open one on the other without blending. The elision is almost invariable if the second vowel is i or ī. Thus, dākiō, call, becomes dāiō; āsi and āsiō, come, āi and āiō; ḍubā, a bamboo hedge round a tank, becomes ḍuā; dēkhitē, to see, becomes dēitē; bēbāk, all, becomes bēāk; bādhē, he binds, becomes bāē; śwaśur, a father-in-law, becomes haūr; khāilām, I ate, becomes khāiām; basiō, sit down, becomes baiō; khuliyā, having opened, becomes khuiyā and khui; nikāla, drew out, becomes niāla.

But m in such a position is often changed to anunāsika, ম্. Thus, āmi becomes āi; tumi, thou, becomes tūi; tāmāk, tobacco, becomes tāuk and tāuk; āmār, my, becomes ār; and tōmār, thy, tōr.

A compound consonant preceded by a long vowel is generally reduced to a single one, all except the last being omitted or replaced by anunāsika, ~. Thus, śūkhnā, dry, becomes hūnā.

Final ē is often dropped, especially in the locative suffix tē of nouns and in the infinitive of verbs. Thus, bāritē, at home, becomes bārit; kahitē, to say, becomes kahit.

Final a is omitted in the third person Past and Pluperfect of verbs. Thus, gēl for gēla, he went; āchhil for āchhila, he was; kargil for kargila, he had made.

Short words with ā in the first syllable, sometimes insert i, or less frequently u, after the ā in pronunciation. Thus, hāil for hāl, a rudder; āij for āi, to-day; āugē for āgē, before.

In words of several syllables, especially those borrowed from Persian or Arabic, the accent is thrown back as far as possible, and the following syllables are lightened. Thus haōyālā (Arabic حال), a charge, becomes hāolā, a kind of land tenure; ēlakā (Arabic علاقه), connexion, becomes ēlakā.

II.—DECLENSION—

The following is an example of the declension of a noun:—

Nom.	put or put-ē , a son.
Acc.	put-rē .
Dat.	„
Abl.	put-tun .
Loc.	put-ē or put-at .
Gen.	put-ar .
Instr.	put-ar-di .

Inanimate nouns drop the termination of the Accusative. In the case of pronouns the termination of the Ablative is added to the Genitive case.

An example of the plural is chāyar-hala-rē, to servants. Some nouns form their plurals in gun or un. Thus, kūur-gun, dogs; ghōrā-un, horses.

The following examples illustrate the declension of Pronouns:—

First Person,—āi, I; ā-rē or āyā-rē, me or to me; ā-r or āyā-r, my; ā-rā or āyā-rā, we.

Second Person,—tui, thy; tōr, thy, and so on.

Respectful forms,—āonē, you; āonār, your.

Third Person,—tē, tāi, tān, hētē, he; tār, tān, his; tāttē, for him; tārā, tānā, they, and so on.

Other Pronouns,—ēi, this; ētār, hitār, of this; āi, hēi, that; zē, who; zā, what; ki, what?

III.—CONJUGATION—

(a) Verb Substantive—

Present.	Past.
1. āchhi , I am, we are.	āchhilām , I was, we were.
2. āchha , or āchhas .	āchhilā .
3. āchkē .	āchhil .

(b) Finite Verb—

Present.	Imperfect.
1. karir , kari , I make, we make, also, I am making, we are making.	karitē (or karitām) āchhilām , I was making, we were making.
2. karar , karas .	karitē āchhilā .
3. karēr , karē , honorific, kartan .	karitē āchhil .

A verb whose root ends in a vowel, forms its Present as follows :—

1. khāir, I eat, we eat.
2. khāor.
3. khāēr, or khār.

- Past.
1. kargyam, kargi or karilam (kariām), I made, we made.
 2. kargya or karilā (kariā), or karilāk.
 3. kargyē or karil.

- Pluperfect.
1. kargilyam, I had made, we had made.
 2. kargilā, or kargilī.
 3. kargil.

Transitive verbs often preserve the final a in the third person. Thus, ka'ila, he said; dila, he gave; I have not met instances of this in the case of Intransitive verbs. We have gēl, he went, not gēla.

The Past tense in gi, gya, gyē, is restricted to verbs whose roots end in r, r̥, or g. For the g, j is sometimes substituted. Thus dhargi or dharji, I seized. Other verbs take, in the Past tense, the terminations yi, ya, and yē, before which i is inserted if the root ends in a vowel. Examples are the following :—

- | | |
|--|--|
| 2. rākhyā , or rākhiya . | khāiya . |
| 3. rākhyē , pronounced rāikhyē . | khāiyē or khāilla . |

The Pluperfect is formed by adding lyam (1st person), lā or lī (2nd person), and l (3rd person) to the first person of the Past tense. We thus get rākhilyam, I had kept; khāiyilyam, I had eaten; and so on.

Future.

1. karyum, kargyam, karba, or karbām, I shall make, we shall make.
2. karbā.
3. karbya or karbē.

Before all these terminations, i may optionally be inserted. Thus, kariyum, karigyam, kariba, or karibām.

Imperative.

2. kara, do thou. With a negative, na kariō.
3. karuk, honorific karatak.

Infinitive,—karit(ē), kart(ē), or karitām, to make.

Present Participle,—karit(ē), or kart(ē), making.

Conjunctive Participle,—kari, or kariyārē, having made, making.

The Past Conditional or Past Habitual is illustrated in the specimens by bharāita, he would fill; khāita, they used to eat. Mr. Pargiter does not describe this tense, which is apparently the same as in standard Bengali.

The verb zāitē, to go, has an irregular Conjunctive Participle, gōi, having gone, which is often added to other verbs to render them more forcible. Thus, āi gēlām gōi, I went away; dēō gōi, give away.

For further particulars of the grammar, and for a vocabulary of words peculiar to the dialect, see Mr. Pargiter's work above mentioned.

NOTE.—As in other Bengali dialects, the spelling does not agree with the pronunciation. An interlinear phonetic transcription is therefore given in italics. In this transcription pronounce ā, like the a in hat; ē, like the e in met; ō, like the o in cob; ē, like the a in mate; ō, like the o in home; and kh, like the Scotch ch in loch. The sign ~ over a vowel nasalizes it. An apostrophe before a vowel, thus, 'ōil, means a very faint aspiration.]

I am also indebted to Mr. Anderson for the second specimen of the Chittagong dialect. It is a popular Folk-tale. After the full description of the pronunciation of this dialect which has been given above and illustrated in the preceding specimen, it has not been thought necessary to give an exact transcription in the Roman Character in this specimen also.

¹ This is a little folk-story given to me by Babu Nobin Chandra Das, Deputy Magistrate and a well-known Bengali author. He tells me that it is a little apologue much used by Bengali married ladies when they hear of a son-in-law turning out badly. It is also used by female relatives when they 'chaff' a boy on his wedding night.

² In Chittagong and in Eastern Bengal generally, ঙ is pronounced s and ঞ is pronounced sh. Consequently, in writing down this folk-story these letters are used, not phonetically, but where they would be used in literary Bengali. The transliteration into English letters is as nearly phonetic as possible.—J. D. ANDERSON.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

A Brahman had a son. That boy did not know how to write or read. After his marriage there was an invitation to his father-in-law's house. When he was going to the feast, his mother said, 'O son, take a pice, buy something in the way to eat. In father-in-law's house sit above all, and with sweet mouth speak like a kokila (cuckoo).' The boy while going by the way bought sweets for one pice and on reaching his father-in-law's residence saw a hay-stack higher than all. Upon this he jumped, and sitting on the top of it, put the sweets into his mouth, and cried 'coo, coo.' After a while seeing his father-in-law he asked,—'Father-in-law's son, has your marriage taken place?' His father-in-law said nothing. After that, having taken his meal (rice) he went to wash his mouth, and asked his father-in-law, 'when this canal was dug, what became of the earth?' His father-in-law was greatly annoyed. He said, 'Half the earth I have eaten and the other half your father has eaten. Otherwise why did I give my daughter to you?'

Across the estuary of the Megna from Chittagong, but having the Eastern Bengali-speaking Island of Sandip between it and the mainland, lies the large Island of Hatiā, the dialect of which is practically the same as that of Chittagong. This island, like Sandip, belongs to the District of Noakhali. The history of Sandip, the home of pirates, has already been given under the head of Eastern Bengali.

The dialect of Hatiā has a few traces of the influence of the language of the adjoining Districts of Backergunge to the west, and of Dacca to the north. For instance, kamu, I shall say; bhāirta, to fill; thāiktē, remaining, are Eastern, not South-Eastern forms. The following special forms are also worthy of note :—

Ablative Singular, bil-ēttēn, from the field.

Datives and Accusatives Plural, hōlāinē-rē, to the sons; chā'or-ga-rē, to the servants; ēyārēr-ga-rē, friends. In the last, the plural suffix is added to the genitive singular.

Pronominal forms,—hētē, he; hētār, hētār, of him, his; hētā-rē, to him; hētārā, they. Hiyār, of this, of these; ētā-rē, to this. Āmnēr, Your Honour's. Zigin, what; higin, that, correlative.

The only verbal forms deserving of special notice are āchhat, thou art, and the Tippera Infinitive khāitām, to eat.

Two specimens of this dialect are given. One is the Parable of the Prodigal Son, the other is a popular song, collected on the spot.

The first word in the above is properly হেন, which is misspelt সেন. In singing, the common folk of Noakhali endeavour to pronounce an initial প pa, and the result is ক pha (fa), instead of the হ ha which we meet in prose.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

1. At that time Sādhu Amīr went to the southern bank, and going there Sādhu Amīr began to look towards right and left.
2. There he found Bhēlbā Dēhī's flower-garden, and going into it Sādhu Amīr began to look on all sides.
3. Going into the flower-garden Sādhu had a walk, and there the Sādhu Amīr found a house.
4. Seeing the house Sādhu was exceedingly pleased and Amīr Sādhu entered into the house.
5. Entering into the house what Amīr did was that he got up and sat on the golden bedstead.
6. He moved the pillows on the bed and searched, and found Bhēlbā's necklace of gems.
7. He took it up on his hand, and looked at it and laid it to his heart.

The next specimen, which is a translation of the Parable of the Prodigal Son, comes from Chhāgālnāiyā thānā in the extreme east of the Noakhali District, close to the borders of Chittagong. The dialect closely resembles that of Hatiā. The following special forms may be noted.

The plural is everywhere made by adding ga. Thus, hōlār-ga-rē, to children. The word for 'he' is hētē. Amongst special verbal forms we may note āchhat, thou art; marīyēr, I am dying; kariyēr, I do; kamu, I will say; khāitām, to eat; lāig-ja, thou didst begin.

The two following specimens come from the Rāmganj thānā situated in the west of the District, close to Tippera. It will be seen that the dialect is still distinctly South-Eastern, and closely resembles that of Hātiā and Chhāgālnāiyā. The first specimen is the Parable of the Prodigal Son, and the other a popular song.

There are few special forms which require notice. Forms like lāigla, he began, and rāikhtō, to keep, belong to Eastern Bengal. The Infinitive in tām, is common to the Eastern and South-Eastern dialects. It occurs here in ka'itām, to say. We may note forms like hāt-rē-ttun, from in the field, and tā-ga-rē, to them. Āmnē means 'self' and āmnā, 'own.' Tān is used for 'him.' Ra'ichhat means 'thou remainest.'

[In the phonetic transcription ' represents the elision of an aspirate, which gives a pronunciation like that of h in the French word hôte. S is pronounced hard as in this, sin, and not like sh in shell, which is represented by sh. Z is somewhat softer than the z of zeal, but not so soft as the s in pleasure.

Pronounce ă as the a in hat; ĕ as the e in met; ô as the o in hot; and oi as in oil. The letter o (without any diacritical mark) represents the short sound of the ô in home. It is the first o in promote and is the o in the French word votre, as compared with vôtre. It should be carefully distinguished from the ô of hot.

Other consonants and vowels are pronounced as in the authorized Government system.]

TRANSCRIPTION.

[In the phonetic transcription ' represents the elision of an aspirate, which gives a pronunciation like that of h in the French word hôte. S is pronounced hard as in this, sin, and not as the sh in shell, which is represented by śh. Z is somewhat softer than the z of zeal, but not so soft as the s in pleasure.

Pronounce ā as the a in hat; ē as the e in met; ō as the o in hot; and oi as in oil. The letter o (without any diacritical mark) represents the short sound of the ō in home. It is the first o in promote and is the o in the French word votre as compared with vôtre. It should be carefully distinguished from the ō of hot.

CHĀKMĀ SUB-DIALECT.

Over the greater part of the Chittagong Hill Tracts, South-Eastern Bengali is used as a kind of Lingua Franca, in addition to the many Tibeto-Burman languages current in that area. Among the wilder tribes, to the east even this means of inter-communication is absent, and a case is on record in which a woman of the Khami Tribe once gave evidence in her own language, knowing no other. This was interpreted into Mrū, which was again interpreted into Maghī, which was finally interpreted into South Eastern Bengali, from which version, the Magistrate translated the evidence into English.

In the central portion of the Chittagong Hill Tracts, in the Chākmā Chief's Circle, situated in the country round the Karnaphuli River, a broken dialect of Bengali, peculiar to the locality, and of a very curious character, is spoken. It is called Chākmā, and is based on South-Eastern Bengali, but has undergone so much transformation that it is almost worthy of the dignity of being classed as a separate language. It is written in an alphabet which, allowing for its cursive form, is almost identical with the Khmēr character, which was formerly in use in Cambodia, Laos, Annam, Siam, and, at least, the southern parts of Burma. This Khmēr alphabet is, in its turn, the same as that which was current in the south of India in the sixth and seventh centuries. The Burmese character is derived from it, but is much more corrupted than the Chākmā. The resemblance between Chākmā and Khmēr does not, however, extend to the typical peculiarity of the former that the inherent vowel of the consonants is ā, not a, though even in this, there are noteworthy points of resemblance. The Khmēr sign for ja has not the hook on the right hand side possessed by the Chākmā jā. This hook represents the ā. Similarly the hooks on the side of the Chākmā ṭā, ṭhā, and rā, are all relics of the old sign for ā. Chākmā is spoken by about 20,000 people.

The following account of the Chākmā alphabet is based on information provided by Dewan Kristo Chandra, a gentleman of Chākmā nationality, and forwarded to me by Mr. J. A. Cave-Browne, Assistant Commissioner, Chittagong Hill Tracts.

The Chākmā alphabet is as follows :—

kā	khā	gā	ghā	nā
chā (sā)	chhā	jā	jhā	ñā
ṭā	ṭhā	ḍā	ḍhā	ṇā
tā	thā	dā	dhā	nā
pā	phā	bā	bhā	mā
yā	rā	lā	wā	shā
hā	hlā	ā

The most important point to notice in this alphabet is that the vowel inherent in each consonant is, not a as in other Indian languages, but ā. Note also that  the initial form (there is, of course, no non-initial form) of ā is treated as a consonant, much as the letter alif is treated as a consonant in Arabic.

For purposes of comparison, I here give the usual Burmese forms of the consonants:—

	ka ,		kha ,		ga ,		gha ,		ṇa ,
	cha ,		chha ,		ja ,		jha ,		ṇa ,
	ta ,		tha ,		da ,		dha ,		na ,
	pa ,		pha ,		ba ,		bha ,		ma ,
	ya ,		ra ,		la ,		wa ,
	sa ,		ha .

As regards vowels, except  ā, none of them have any proper initial forms. The following are their non-initial forms. In a parallel column I give the usual Burmese forms for the sake of comparison:—

Chākṃā forms.					Burmese forms.
	Over the consonant	.	.	.	None.	a
	No sign	.	.	.	 or 	ā
	Over the consonant	.	.	.		i
	Ditto	.	.	.		ī
	Under the consonant	.	.	.		u
	Ditto	.	.	.		ū
	Before the consonant	.	.	.		ē
	Over the consonant	.	.	.		(ai pr. oi)
	On each side of the consonant	.	.	.		o
	Ditto	.	.	.		au

When a consonant has no vowel the sign  is put over the consonant, equivalent to the Burmese  and the Bengali . Thus, Chākṃā , Burmese , and Bengali , all represent the letter k, without any vowel.

We thus get the following examples of the way in which non-initial vowels are attached to the letter  kā:—

 kā,  ka,  ki,  kī,  ku,  kū,  kē,  kai,  kō, kau  k.

When these vowels commence a word, the non-initial forms are attached to the letter  ā as a kind of scaffolding for the support of the sound, exactly as alif is used in Arabic. We thus obtain the following forms:—

 ākā,  aka,  iki,  ikī,  uku,  ūkū, ēkē,  aikāi,  ōkō,  aukau.

Note, however, that the initial form of ai is , not .
 Sometimes vowels take special forms when initial. Thus we have for initial ū in  ūchchuwā, rejoicing, instead of . For initial i, we sometimes have ō as in  mūi, I, instead of . Sometimes the form  is used, attached to a preceding consonant, as in  bēida, much. In the latter case  may be omitted, as in  for  jēinai, having gone. Similarly  stands for ēinai, not āinai.

The sign — is also used to denote the doubling of a letter as in  bhūyat-tūn, from in the field;  ūchchuwā, rejoicing.

When the letter  yā is compounded with a consonant, it takes the form as in  kyā, anyone. In similar circumstances,  rā, takes the form in  mantri, a minister. Other compound consonants present no difficulties.

The letter ch is often pronounced as s, and when this is the case, it is so transliterated. Thus  bēs, not bēch.

It is not necessary to give a detailed account of Chākṃā Grammar, which closely resembles that of Chittagong. The following remarks will suffice:—

Cerebral letters are regularly converted to dentals. Numerous examples will be found in the specimens. We may quote, dāki for ḍāki, having called; thēn for ṭhēn, a leg; aṇūdi for aṅguṭhī, a ring; ghadaki, a match-maker, for ghaṭaki; and so on.

The Verb Substantive is conjugated as follows :—

Present.		Past.
Sing. and plur.		Sing.	Plur.
1.	āgi , I am, we are.	ēlūñ , I was,	ēlanñ , we were.
2.	āgas , or nē , thou art, you are.	ēlē , thou wast,	ēlā , you were.
3.	āgē , or nē , he is, they are.	ēl , he was ;	ēlāk , they were.

The conjugation of the Finite Verb closely resembles that of Chittagong. The principal exception is that the first person ends in ūñ or añ. Other detail will be found in the list of standard words appended. The Conjunctive Participle ends in inai, as in jēinai, having gone.

A brief Chākmā Vocabulary, under the name of Doing-núk, is given by Phayre on p 712 of Vol. X, Pt. I, 1841, of the Journal of the Asiatic Society of Bengal.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

Once upon a time there was a king, who had only one lovely daughter. The fame of her beauty gradually spread over different countries, and people began to talk about it. Bye-and-bye matchmakers, attracted by the report, began to come. As she was his only daughter, the king loved her much, and whatever she said, that he used to do. When the damsel was full grown she made a vow that she would only take him for a husband who should leap into the river from the top of a precipice which she should point out.

People told her father to that effect, and he much remonstrated with her, explaining that men who ventured to attempt that sort of feat would surely die, but she refused to listen to him. As the king loved his daughter, he told people the story of her vow.

Then from different countries came young men in the hope of getting the king's daughter, but, as each jumped from the precipice, he died. No one got her.

When, in this way, many men had died, the king was much grieved, and began to think of some way in which, while his daughter's vow would not be broken, people would no longer lose their lives.

One day, in the evening, he was sitting alone on his throne in melancholy mood and thinking, when a youth came into his presence, and told him why he had come. The king was struck with his beauty, and reasoned much with him, saying, 'go back to thy home.' But the youth paid no heed to him. Then the king began to consider in his heart that if he could get this youth for his son-in-law, he would be very happy. He told the youth to come next day, and with a melancholy countenance went into his palace, shut his door, and lay down. While he was thinking he fell asleep, and in his sleep he saw a dream. An old woman was sitting by his head, and was saying to him, 'this youth thy son-in-law shall be. If thou tie pillows round him, and an umbrella to him, even if he jumps into the water, he will not die.' When the king woke, no one was visible.

Next morning, at daybreak, as the king was leaving his palace, he found the youth waiting for him. He remonstrated with him much, but when he saw that the youth would not listen to him for a moment, he called his minister, and ordered him to make arrangements for going to the place fixed for the leap. When all was ready, the king went thither with his daughter and with his relations and friends. When the princess saw how beautiful was the young boy, she said in her heart, 'how good would it be if I got him for a husband! Why did I make my vow?' Then, at the appointed time, the king tied four pillows and an umbrella to the youth, and gave the order, saying at the same time 'pray ye for his safety.' The youth took the leap and fell safely into the water, where he remained floating. Every one was much pleased, and the king took him home to his palace and married him to his daughter with great magnificence.

N.B.—This legend is a piece of folk-lore founded on tradition of great interest. The precipitous top of the hill still exists. It is called 'Jāmāmarōni' or bridegroom-killing. It is situated on the bank of the river Karnaphūli near Chitmorom in the Sitapāhār Forest Reserve.

STANDARD LIST OF BENGALI WORDS AND SENTENCES.

The following lists of Standard words and sentences in the various dialects of Bengali have been prepared independently of the corresponding translations of the Parable of the Prodigal Son. Some variations of spelling will therefore be observed. These I have deliberately left untouched, as they will be useful to the student as illustrating doubtful points of pronunciation.

I have to acknowledge my indebtedness to Mahāmahōpadhyāya Pandit Mahēśa Chandra Nyāyaratna, C.I.E., and to Babu Śyāma-charaṇ Gānguli for the very carefully prepared lists in Standard and Colloquial Bengali. The latter represents the language of the middle classes of Calcutta, and is spelt phonetically. The former is the Standard Bengali of the books, and is strictly transliterated.

ASSAMESE.

Assamese is the name of the Aryan language spoken in the Assam Valley in and between the districts of Lakhimpur and Goalpara. In the latter district it gradually merges into the Bengali spoken in Western Goalpara and in the adjoining district of Rangpur. In the area in which it is spoken, it is not by any means the only vernacular. It lives side by side with a number of non-Aryan languages which will be dealt with in their proper places. It is a language of the Valley only. Everywhere its home as a vernacular is bounded by the hills lying on the north and on the south, between which the River Brahmaputra takes its western course. There are also stray colonies of Assamese people in Sylhet, Cachar and Manipur, who still retain their ancestral language in a more or less corrupted form.

Where spoken. 'Canarese' and the like. It is based on the English word
Name of the Language. 'Assam,' which is a corruption of 'Āsām,' the Bengali name of the tract which consists of the Brahmaputra Valley. To spell the name of the language 'Asamese,' is to concoct a hybrid word half Bengali and half English. No one ever dreams of calling the country 'Asam,' and, till this is done, I prefer to call the language by its accepted English name. The Assamese themselves call their native country Asam, with the vowels in both syllables short. The name is said to be the term given by them to the Shans or 'Shāms' who commenced invading the country from the east in the thirteenth century, and whose ancient language is still called 'Ahom.' This word is popularly, but incorrectly derived from the Assamese word aḥam, which means 'unequalled,' being the same as the Sanskrit asama. As derived from 'Ahom,' the local name of the Assamese language should be written 'Āḥamiyā,' but it is spelt অসমিয়া, with, however, the irregular pronunciation 'Ösömiyā.'

Assamese, like its neighbour, Bengali, belongs to the Eastern Group of the Indo-Aryan vernaculars. Of these forms of speech it is the most eastern outpost. Except on the west, where it meets Bengali, it is surrounded on all sides by speeches belonging to altogether different families, of which the principal are the Tibeto-Burman and the Khassi.

It has long been a matter of dispute whether Assamese should be considered as a mere dialect of Bengali, or as an independent language. At the present day, its speakers stoutly deny the claim to pre-eminence advanced on behalf of Bengali, and most scholars now admit the validity of their arguments. The result is neatly put by Mr. Nicholl on page 72 of his Assamese grammar.

'Assamese is not, as many suppose, a corrupt dialect of Bengali, but a distinct and co-ordinate tongue, having with Bengali a common source of current vocabulary. Its Sanskrit did not come to it from Bengal, but from the upper provinces of India—this all who carefully examine the matter will readily admit.'

Whether Assamese is a dialect or a language is really a mere question of words which is capable of being argued ad infinitum; for the two terms are incapable of mutually exclusive definition. Like 'hill' and 'mountain,' they are convenient methods of expression, but no one can say at what exact point a hill ceases to be a hill and becomes a mountain. It must be confessed that if we take grammar alone as the basis of comparison, it would be extremely difficult to oppose any statement to the effect that Assamese was nothing but a dialect of Bengali. The dialect spoken in Chittagong, which is universally

The Assamese are justly proud of their national literature. In no department have they been more successful than in a branch of study in which India is as a rule curiously deficient.¹ Remnants of historical works that treat of the time of Bhagadatta, a contemporary of the great Kuru-Pañchāla war of the Mahā-bhārata, are still in existence. The chain of historical events, for the last six hundred years, has been carefully preserved, and their authenticity can be relied upon. These historical works, or būrañjis as they are styled in Assam, are numerous and voluminous. According to the customs of the country, a knowledge of the būrañjis was an indispensable qualification to an Assamese gentleman; and every family of distinction, as well as the Government and the public officers, kept the most minute records of contemporary events. In the year 1829 Halirām Dhekiāl Phukan published in the Bengali language a brief compilation from the būrañjis; and in 1844, Rādhā-nāth Bor Baruā and Kāśī-nāth Tāmūli Phukan published at the

American Mission Press a somewhat comprehensive work on the history of Assam in Assamese. A more modern work based on these būrañjis is the history of the Kōch Kings of Kāmṛup, by Mr. E. A. Gait, I.C.S., which appeared in the Journal of the Asiatic Society of Bengal for 1893.

Assamese literature is by no means confined to history. Some seventy poetical works, principally religious, have been catalogued. One of the oldest and at the same time most celebrated poets was Sri Hāṅkar, the founder in Assam of the Mahāpuruṣiā sect of Vaiṣṇavas, who flourished about 450 years ago in the reign of Rājā Nara-nārāyaṇa, and who was a voluminous writer. His best known work is a translation of the Śrīmad Bhāgavata Purāṇa. Among his contemporaries may be mentioned Rāma-haraswatī alias Ananta Kandāli who translated both the Mahā-bhārata and the Rāmāyaṇa into his native language, and Mādhav, the author of the Bhakti-ratnāvali, the Ratnākara Tīkā, and other works. The Hindū system of medicine was professionally studied by numerous Assam families of distinction, and some knowledge of the science formed one of the necessary accomplishments of a well-bred gentleman. Hence arose a good stock of medical works, principally translations or adaptations from the Sanskrit written in the vernacular. A list of forty-two dramatic works in Assamese, written by Sri Hāṅkar, Mādhav and their followers, has been published, and many of these are said to be still frequently acted in the village nāmghars.

The whole of the Bible was translated into Assamese by the Serampore Missionaries with the assistance of Ātma-rām Hārma, in the year 1813, and several editions have since been issued. In later years the American Baptist Mission Press has issued a large number of works, religious and lay, and has done much to keep the language pure and uncontaminated by the neighbouring Bengali. For a full account of Assamese literature, see the works mentioned below under the head of Authorities.

The following account of the Assamese alphabet, and of the pronunciation of the various letters, is based on that given in Mr. Moore's edition of Brown's Grammar. As regards the system of transliteration adopted, I have in the main followed that work. No rigid system of transliterating the vowels can show their pronunciation, for the pronunciation of the vowels varies in Assamese even more than it does in Bengali. I have hence used, with a few variations, which will be subsequently explained, the system employed in dealing with other languages for representing the vowels of the Dēva-nāgarī Alphabet and its congeners. As regards consonants, their pronunciation, though widely different from that of Standard Bengali, is fairly uniform, and admits of a system of transliteration which represents the sounds of the language with some approach to accuracy.

The Assamese alphabet is the same as that of Bengali, except that Assamese has a separate sign for the sound of w, which, when it occurs in Bengali, has to be represented by a clumsy composition of two separate letters. I here give the Assamese letters, together with their corresponding Roman equivalents. In old Assamese manuscripts the shape of some of the characters (especially those for ma and sa) are much more like those of the Dēva-nāgarī alphabet.

VOWELS.

অ a ā	আ ā
ই i	ঐ ī	এ e	ঐ āi

হ ha	Aspirates.

The non-initial forms of the vowels, and the compound consonants, are the same as in Bengali, and need not be repeated here.

The letter অ a has two sounds, a short and a long. The first is that of the o in 'hot,' and the second that of the o in 'glory.' The vowel will usually be transliterated by a, but, when it is desired to draw prominent attention to the fact that it has the long sound, it will be transliterated ā. As a rule it has the long sound when the next syllable contains the vowel i, as in kāri, having done, or u, as in gāru, a cow, rānuwā, a soldier. It is also found in the past and future tenses of verbs of the first conjugation. Thus hāl, he was; kām, I shall say. Sometimes the meaning of a word depends on the proper utterance of this vowel. Thus, kālā means 'black,' but kalā, a leaf, a plantain. So māh, a mosquito, but mah, a buffalo. In such cases natives often denote the long sound in the vernacular character by a short stroke above the syllable. Thus, কঁলা, black, কলা, a leaf, মঁহ, a buffalo, মহ, a mosquito. The long sound has sometimes nearly the effect of the first o in 'promote' which would be written প্রমোট in the Assamese character. Bronson represents it by an apostrophe. Thus ক'লা.

The vowel আ ā has the long sound of the a in 'father.'

The vowels ই i and ঐ ī are used indiscriminately to express both the long and short sounds which we hear in 'pique' and in 'pin,' respectively. The question of which sound is to be used depends entirely on accent, and has nothing whatever to do with the length of the letter as written. For this reason, Bronson in his dictionary has entirely abandoned the letter ঞ ī, and everywhere writes ই i. Hem Chandra Barua retains the distinction in writing.

Exactly the same remarks apply, mutatis mutandis, to the vowels উ u and ঊ ū. Each is used indiscriminately, according to accent, to represent both the u in 'put' and the oo in 'poor.' Bronson (but not Hem Chandra Barua) hence excludes ঊ ū from his dictionary, and writes only উ u.

The vowel এ e is always pronounced short, like the e in 'men.' It is hence transliterated e, not ē. Its sound sometimes approaches that of the a in 'cat.'

The diphthong ঐ ái is pronounced like the oi in 'going.' Its pronunciation is often weakened to i, especially at the end of a word, but this is considered a vulgarism. Thus, instead of kariba-lái, for doing, we often hear kariba-li.

Brown describes the pronunciation of the vowel ও o as follows: 'It is nearly the u in "bull," but there is a slight verging towards the sound of o in "whole."' When o is followed in the next syllable by the vowel i, the o becomes a pure u, and is so written. Thus, bole, he says, but bulise, he is saying.

The vowel ঔ áu is pronounced, as au in French, like the long o in 'note.'

Consonants.

The pronunciation of the consonants is as in Bengali, with the following exceptions:—

The letters চ, ছ, জ, and ঝ, which in other languages are transliterated cha, chha, ja, and jha, respectively, have, in Assamese, altogether lost the sounds thus represented. চ and ছ are both pronounced in the same way, viz., like the s in 'sin.' In order to distinguish between them, চ is transliterated sa, and ছ śa, but there is not the least difference in the pronunciation. For this reason, Bronson in his dictionary has abandoned ছ śa, altogether, and writes only চ sa throughout. In the same way, জ and ঝ are both pronounced like the French j, the si in 'vision,' the z in 'azure,' or the s in 'pleasure,' and are transliterated za and ẓa, respectively. So also Bronson has abandoned ঞ ẓa and writes only জ za. At the end of a word these letters are pronounced like a pure z, as in 'zeal.' Thus, mez, a table, tez, blood. Hem Chandra Barua retains all the four consonants.

The letters ড় ra and ঢ় rha, are pronounced like ra and rha, respectively. Thus বড় bar, pronounced bōr. Bronson (but not Hem Chandra Barua) hence excludes these two letters from his dictionary. Similarly, common people pronounce all other cerebral letters as if they were dentals. Thus du-tā, two, is pronounced du-tā. This is no doubt due to the influence of the many Tibeto-Burman languages in immediate contact with Assamese, which make no difference between dentals and cerebrals, and have, as in English, only semi-cerebrals.

The letter ফ pha is often pronounced like an English f.

The letter য় ya is pronounced like the y in 'yes.' The letter য without the dot is pronounced like the z in 'azure' and is transliterated ẓa. When য় ya is combined with a preceding consonant, the preceding syllable is sounded as if the letter i were added to it. Thus bākya, a word; hūnya, empty; anya, another; are pronounced bāikya, hūinya, and āinya, respectively. The vulgar often also drop the ya, and pronounce these words bāik, hūin, and āin.

The letter ব় wa does not occur in Bengali, in which language an original wa-sound becomes ব ba. Like the Bengali ব ba, ব় wa, when forming the second element of a compound consonant is hardly audible. Thus স্বরূপ swarūp, is sounded s'ārup. In such cases it will be transliterated by a small w above the line.

The three letters শ, ষ, and স, when not compounded with any other consonant are all pronounced something like a rough German ch, or like the Arabic ح khē. In such cases all three are transliterated by *h*a. Thus দেশ deh, a country; সন্তোষ hantoh, satisfaction, সকল hakal, all. When compounded with another consonant, they are usually pronounced like the s in 'sin.' When so pronounced, they will all be transliterated by sa. Thus আশ্রিত āsrit, protected; খ্রীষ্ট khrista, Christ; শাস্ত্র hāstra, scripture. When compounded with the letter ya, they are all pronounced as sh in 'hush,' and will be so transliterated. Thus শিষ্য hishya, a disciple. These three letters, however, retain the h-sound when compounded with a preceding r, and will be so transliterated. Thus, দর্শন darhan, not darsan. Bronson has altogether abandoned শ śa and ষ sha, and writes only স sa.

When consonants in the middle of a word are followed by the letter i, they are often elided. Thus হাঁটে for hāhite, with; কাঁ for kāri, having done; নাঁ for nādi, a river; *khui*se for khuzise, he wishes; buile for bulile, he said. A final a, except when following a compound consonant, is usually not pronounced. Numerous examples will be found above.

It is hoped that the following sketch of Assamese Grammar will enable the reader to understand the specimens of the language given on the subsequent pages.

ASSAMESE SKELETON GRAMMAR.

I.—NOUNS.—Thus declined in the singular—

	A man.	A son.	A body.	A bird.	An eye.	A boat.
Nom.	{ mānuh mānuh-e	{ putra putra-y	{ gā gā-i	{ sarāi sarāy-e	{ saku saku-we	{ nāo nāw-e
Acc.	{ mānuh mānuh-ak mānuh-ake	{ putra putra-k putra-ke	{ gā gā-k gā-ke	{ sarāi sarāi-k sarāi-ke	{ saku saku-ke	{ nāo nāw-ake
Instr.	{ mānuh-e mānuh-ere	{ putra-y putr-ere	{ gā-ye gā-re	{ sarāy-e sarāi-re or sarāy-ere	{ saku-we saku-re or saku-were	{ nāw-e nāw-ere
Dat.	{ mānuh-lāi mānuh-lāike	{ putra-lāi putra-lāike	{ gā-lāi gā-lāike	{ sarāi-lāi sarāi-lāike	{ saku-lāi saku-lāike	{ nāw-lāi nāw-lāike
Gen.	{ mānuh-are mānuh-at	{ putra-r putra-re	{ gā-r gā-re	{ sarāi-r sarāi-re	{ saku-r saku-re	{ nāw-ar nāw-are
Loc.	{ mānuh-ate mānuh-ate	{ putra-t putra-te	{ gā-t gā-te	{ sarāi-t sarāi-te	{ saku-t saku-te	{ nāw-at nāw-ate

The second form of the nominative is the one generally used before a transitive verb. The accusative in k is not used with inanimate nouns. The terminations in e are more emphatic than the others. Further emphasis is indicated by the addition of i or he, the latter being the stronger.

The plural is formed by the addition of bilāk, bor, or hāt to the nominative singular. The compound thus formed is then declined like the singular of mānuh. Bilāk is more honorific than the other two.

In nouns of relationship, four different forms are used, according as the relation is mine; yours, non-honorific; yours, honorific; or his. A full list is given in Brown's grammar, pages 27 and ff. The following are examples—

	My.	Your, non-honorific.	Your, honorific.	His.
Father	bopāi	bāper	bāperā	bāpek
Mother	āi	mār	mārā	māk
Son	po	puter	powā, powārā, or puterā	putek
Daughter	zi	ziyer	ziyā or ziyerā	ziyek
Husband	pai	paiyer	paiyā or paiyerā	paiyek
Wife	ghaini	ghainiyer	ghainiyā or ghainiyerā	ghainiyek

Adjectives, as a rule, do not change for gender, but a few ending in ā, such as burā, old, form the feminine in i, as in Hindi. Comparison is usually expressed by suffixing kai or kari to the locative of the noun with which comparison is made. Sometimes the locative alone is used.

II.—PRONOUNS.—In the following the Dative and the Locative are formed on the model of the Accusative. Thus, Dat., mo-lai; loc., mo-t.—

	I.	Thou, non-honorific.	Thou, honorific.	Your Honour, Self.
Sing. Nom.	may, māi, may-e	tay, tay-e	tumi, tumi-ye	āpuni, āpuni-ye	Hakal-o , all without exception, is thus declined—
Acc.	mo-k, mo-ke	to-k, to-ke	tomā-k, tomā-ke	āponā-k, āponā-ke
Instr.	may-e, mo-re	tay-e, to-re	tumi-ye, tomā-re	āpuni-ye, āponā-re
Gen.	mo-r, mo-re	to-r, to-re	tomā-r, tomā-re	āponā-r, āponā-re	hakalo , hakalowe .
Plur. Nom.	āmi, āmi-ye	ta-hāt, ta-hāt-e	tomolāk, tomolāk-e ¹	āponā-bilāk, etc.	hakalo-k-o , hakalo-ke .
Acc.	āmā-k, āmā-ke		tomolāk-ak, tomolāk-ake		hakalo-we , hakalo-re .
Instr.	āmi-ye, āmā-re	and so on.	tomolāk-e, tomolāk-ere		hakalo-r-o , hakalo-re .
Gen.	āmā-r, āmā-re		tomolāk-ar, tomolāk-are		hakalo-bilāk , etc.

¹ Or tomālok, tomālok-e, and so throughout.

	This, com. gen., non-honorific.	That, he, com. gen., non-honorific.	This, com. gen., honorific.	That, he, com. gen., honorific.	She, non-honorific.
Sing. Nom.	i, i-ye, e-ye	hi, hi-ye, he-ye	eō, ē-we	teō, tē-we	tāi, tāy-e
Acc.	iya-k, iya-ke	tā-k, tā-ke	eō-k, eō-ke	teō-k, teō-ke	tāi-k, tāi-ke	The adverbs, gār , whence, tār , thence, and kār , whence? are thus declined. In all three the ā is pronounced long as in 'all.' Gen. kār , kār-e , from whence?
Instr.	i-ye, iya-re	hi-ye, tā-re	ē-we, ē-were	tē-we, tē-were	tāy-e, tāi-re	Dat. kā-lai , kā-laike , whither? Loc. kā-t , kā-tā , where?
Gen.	iyā-r, iya-re	tā-r, tā-re	eō-r, eō-re	teō-r, teō-re	tāi-r, tāi-re
Plur. Nom.	i-hāt etc.	hi-hāt, etc.	eō-bilāk, etc.	teō-bilāk, etc.	tāi-hāt, etc.

	Who, which.	Which, inanimate.	Who?	What?	Anybody.	Somebody.
Sing. Nom.	zi, ze-ye	zi, ze-ye	kon, kon-e	ki, ki-he	keo, kēwe	kon-o-bā, kon-o-bā-i	Ki-bā , something is declined like ki , thus—
Acc.	zā-k, zā-ke	ziha-k, ziha-ke	kā-k, kā-ke	ki, kiha-ke	kā-k-o	kār-o-bā-k, etc.	Acc. kiha-bā-k .
Instr.	zā-re	zihe, zihe-re	kā-re	kihe-re	kā-re, kā-re-o	kār-o-bā-re, etc.	Similarly, kon-o , someone, anyone, is declined like kon .
Gen.	zā-r, zā-re	ziha-r, ziha-re	kā-r, kā-re	kiha-r, kiha-re	kā-r-o	kār-o-bā-r, etc.
Plur. Nom.	zi-bilāk, etc.	zi-bilāk, etc.	Ẓi , this, and he , that, are adjectives.

III.—VERBS.—These are usually quoted under the form of the First Verbal Noun, which is the same in form as the Past Participle. In Bronson's dictionary they are quoted under the form of the Conjunctive Participle. The plural is the same as the singular, but the suffix hāk is sometimes added when it is necessary to emphasise the plural signification. There are two forms of the second person, a non-honorific and an honorific. These will be numbered 2a and 2b, respectively.

A.—Auxiliary Verb and Verb Substantive.

Present, I am.

Past, I was.

1. āṣṭ
- 2a. āṣa
- 2b. āṣā
3. āṣe

āṣilṭ.
āṣil.
āṣil.
āṣil.

B.—Finite Verbs —These Brown divides into three conjugations.

The first includes nearly all the verbs whose roots end in vowels (the only important exceptions are the roots di, give, zi, live, and se, cut in lengths). It forms its First Verbal Noun by changing the final vowel of the root to owā, or, if the root ends in uwā, the uwā is changed to uwā, or if it ends in owā, the owā is changed to owā. Also, some verbs whose roots end in ā change the ā to uwā.

In the second conjugation, the First Verbal Noun is formed by simply adding ā. If the vowel of the root, which in this conjugation always ends in a consonant, is ā, it is shortened in the First Verbal Noun, and if it is o it is changed to u whenever the following syllable contains the letter i.

In the third conjugation, the First Verbal Noun is formed by adding ā to the root, the root-vowel always remaining unchanged. The only exception is that if the following syllable contains the letter i, and if the root-vowel is a, the root-vowel is pronounced long, like the a in 'all.' When it is not followed by i, it is pronounced as usual like the o in 'hot.'

Note that the second person honorific of the Present is always the same as the First Verbal Noun. Also that the Present Definite and Pluperfect Tenses are all periphrastic, being formed by the addition of suitable Tenses of the Auxiliary Verb. The Past is also used in the sense of the Perfect and Imperfect. There is no proper Subjunctive mood. In a conditional sentence, the word hēten is added to the past tense in the apodosis. In the protasis either the same form is used with the conjunction gādi, if, or else the hēten is subjoined to the Past Participle without gādi. Thus, halō-hēten, I would have been; gādi halō-hēten, or howā-hēten, if I had been. The Future Imperative is the same as the Future Indicative.

FIRST CONJUGATION—

Root, ha , be.		Present.	Past.	Future.	Present Imperative, be thou. 2a. ha . 2b. howā . 3. haok .
Verbal Nouns, howā , being. hāba , being. haōtā , being.		I am.	I was, I have been.	I shall be.
Present Participle, haōte , while being.		1. haō	hālō	hām .	Present Definite, I am being. hāi-ōō , - sa , - sā , - se .
Past " howā , been.		2a. hawa	hālī	hābi .
Conjunctive " hāi , having been.		2b. howā	hālā	hābā .	Pluperfect, I had been. hāi-ōōlō , etc.
Conditional " hāle , hālat , on being.		3. hay	hāl	hāba .

Similarly are conjugated the roots ka, say, la, take, ra, stop, ba, bear, and tha, place. Also the following, amongst others—

Root.	Meaning.	Conj. Part.	First Verbal Noun.
pā	get	pāi	powā .
sā	look	sāi	sowā .
bā	row	bāi	bowā .
dā	reap	dāi	dowā .
khā	eat	khāi	khowā .
anā	cause to bring	anāi	anowā .
guā	remove	guāi	gusowā .
khuwā	cause to eat	khuwāi	khūwā .
gusuwā	cause to remove	gusuwāi	gusūwā .
powā	cause to get	powāi	poōwā .
anowā	cause to be brought	anowāi	anoōwā .
hū	lie down, sleep	hūi	howā .

GENERAL REMARKS FOR ALL CONJUGATIONS.—Some verbs drop the termination wa of the second person non-honorific of the present. Thus, khā, thou eatest.

In the case of Transitive verbs, the letter e is usually added to the third person of the Past and of the Pluperfect. Thus pāle, he got, bulile, he spoke, buli-sile, he had spoken. The same termination is sometimes found with Intransitive verbs. Thus, āhil, or āhile, he came.

SECOND CONJUGATION—

Root, bol , speak.		Present, I speak. 1. bolō . 2a. bola . 2b. bloā . 3. bole .	Similarly are conjugated—	Root.	Meaning.	Conj. Part.	First V. N.
Verbal Nouns, bolā , speaking. bulāba , speaking. bolōtā , speaking.		Past, I spoke. bulilō , etc. (3. bulile .) Future, I shall speak. bulim , etc.		ān	bring	āni	anā .
Present Participle, bolōte , while speaking.		Imperative, speak, 2a. bol .		āh	come	āhi	ahā .
Past " bolā , spoken.		Present Definite, I am speaking. buli-ōō .		mār	strike	māri	marā .
Conjunct. " buli , having spoken.		Pluperfect, I had spoken, buli-ōōlō .		pār	be able	pāri	parā .
Conditional " bulile , bulilat , on speaking.				lāg	hit, be necessary	lāgi	lagā .
				nowār	be unable	nowāri	nowarā .
					and many others.

THIRD CONJUGATION—

Root, gu , depart.		Present, I depart, guō , etc.	Similarly are conjugated—	Root.	Meaning.	Conj. Part.	First V. N.
Verbal Nouns, guā , departing. " guāba , departing. " guōtā , departing.		Past, I departed, guōlō .
Present Participle, guōte , while departing.		Future, I shall depart, guōim .		kar	make, do	kāri	karā .
Past " guā , departed.		Imperative, depart thou, gu .		lar	run, move	lāri	larā .
Conjunct. " guāi , having departed.		Present Definite, I am departing, guāi-ōō .		naral	not to move	narāli	naralā .
Conditional " guāile , guāilat , on departing.		Pluperfect, I had departed, guāi-ōōlō .			and many others.

C.—Irregular Verbs.—The root gā, go, is thus conjugated.—Verbal Nouns, gōwā, gāba, gāōtā; Present Participle, gāōte; Past Participle, gōwā; Conjunctive Participle, gāi; Conditional Participle, gāle, gālat. Present, gāō; Past, gālō; Future, gām; Present Definite, gāi-ōō; Pluperfect, gāi-ōōlō.

The root dī, give. Verbal Nouns, diyā, dība, dīōtā; Present Participle, dīōte; Past Participle, diyā; Conjunctive Participle, dī; Conditional Participle, dīle, dīlat. Present, 1. dīō, 2a. diya, 2b. diyā, 3. diye; Past, dīlō; Future, dīm; and so on.

The root zī, live, is conjugated like dī, substituting ī for i throughout. This is a mere matter of spelling.

The root se, cut into lengths, is conjugated like a verb of the first conjugation, except that its First Verbal Noun, Past Participle, Second person Honorific Present, are sewā.

D.—Negative Verbs.—Nāi means 'there is not.' To express negation otherwise, na, nā, nī, nu, ne or no is prefixed to the Verb, the vowel of the prefix corresponding with the first vowel of the verb. Thus, nahaō, I am not; nidība, he will not give; nuhūne, he does not listen. When the first vowel of the verb is ā, the prefix is nā or ne, as nāzāō or nezāō, I do not go. If the verb begins with a vowel, only n is prefixed as in olāy, he appears, nolāy, he does not appear. The Past of nezāō is nagālō, I did not go, and so in the other tenses formed with gāl. The First Verbal Noun is, of course, nozowā. The negative of the root pār, be able, is given under the second conjugation, and of lar, run, move, under the third. Nāi used with the present tense gives it a past meaning. Thus, tumi diyā nāi, thou gavest not.

E.—Causal Verbs.—Causal verbs are formed much as in Bengali. Examples of Causals and Double Causals are given under the first conjugation. As a rule, the root of a Causal verb is the same as the First Verbal Noun of the simple verb. Similarly, that of a Double Causal is the same as the First Verbal Noun of the Causal.

F.—Passive Voice.—Formed by conjugating the Past Participle with ha. Thus, mok diyā haiṣe, it is being given to me. Or by conjugating the First Verbal Noun with gā. Thus, tāk powā gāy, that is found, literally, the finding that goes on.

G.—Compound Verbs.—Acquisitives are formed by conjugating the Accusative or Dative of the Second Verbal Noun with the root pā, get. Permissives, by conjugating the same form with dī, give. Thus, hi kārība pāy, he obtains permission to do; tumi awashyo hāsti bhog kārība-lai pābā, you will certainly get to undergo punishment; mok kārība diyā, allow me to do. Desideratives, the same form with khuz, wish, as in tumi kārība khuzā, you wish to do. Inceptives, the Dative of the same noun with dhar, seize, begin, as in tumi kārība-lai dharā, you begin to do. Potentials, the Accusative of the same noun with pār, be able, as in kārība pārō, I can do. Obligatives, the same form with lāg, hit, always in the third person, whatever the person of the subject, as in may kārība lāge, I must do.

Note.—In the phonetic transcription in italics, pronounce the letters as follows :—

ā as the a in 'father.'

ā as the o in 'glory.' It is nearly the first o in 'promote.'

i as the i in 'pique' or in 'pin,' according to accent.

ē as the e in 'met.'

e has a slightly heavier sound than the above.

o as the u in 'bull,' verging towards that of o in 'note.'

ō as the o in 'hot.'

u as the u in 'put,' or the oo in 'poor,' according to accent.

h nearly as the ch in the German 'ach.'

ng as the ng in 'sing.'

z nearly as the z in 'azure.'

The following translation of the Parable of the Prodigal Son has been prepared for this Survey by Captain P. R. T. Gurdon, I.S.C., and Srijut Hem Chandra Gosain. It has been pointed out that the preceding specimen illustrates the form of Assamese which has been adopted by Missionaries in their literary labours. The present one may be taken as illustrating the language as used by an educated Assamese who is not bound by these traditions.

There are few differences between the two, the principal being the free use of the respectful word āpuni instead of the more familiar tumi for 'you', and the use of the respectful form of the imperative when addressing a father. There are also one or two changes of idiom, such as 'eating' instead of 'giving' a kiss, and the like. On the whole, however, the versions are so similar that it is unnecessary to do more than to give a transliteration in the Roman character of the second. To add a copy in the Assamese character, a phonetic transcription, or an interlinear translation would be waste of paper and ink.

The gentlemen who have prepared the version are the joint editors of the Hema Kosha, the standard dictionary of the language, and their names are a guarantee for the accuracy and idiomatic character of the translation. I am glad to be able to take this opportunity of expressing my great indebtedness to Captain Gurdon, for much kindly assistance and criticism rendered to me during the preparation of this section of the Survey.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

This case is false. I did not go to steal anything at his house. The facts are these. I missed my cow which I had bought from Dhanī-rām a year ago. The cow though carefully kept by me used to visit her former owner's house very often, and I had to go and fetch her several times. On the day referred to by Dhanī-rām I went to his house to see if my cow had gone there. That was after sunset. I walked through his compound as usual to see whether my cow was straying there. It so happened that at that time his sister Mālātī, a grown-up girl of 18 years, came to the compound with a water-pot in her hand. It was then nearly dark. She saw me unexpectedly going towards her though I myself had not noticed her. She got frightened and screamed as if she thought I was a ghost. The people of the house, including Dhanī-rām, came and seized me saying that I had come there to visit the girl. That was the story Dhanī-rām told to the Police, but in the Court, in order to hide the shame of his sister, he gives out that I was stealing his mangoes and that Mālātī saw me first on the tree.

WESTERN ASSAMESE.

The Assamese spoken in the Districts of Kamrup and Goalpara, which are the most western on the north side of the Brahmaputra Valley, is not exactly the same as the standard language of Upper and Central Assam, being influenced by the Rājbangsī Bengali spoken immediately to the west, in west Goalpara and the Bengal district of Rangpur. This form of Assamese is sometimes called Dhekerī, which is, however, considered more or less as a term of opprobrium, having been first used when the portion of Assam now known as the Kamrup and Goalpara districts was conquered by the Āhoms. The Āhom Rājā gave the name of Sarkār Dhekerī or Dhekuri to this tract. According to Rāi Guṇābhirām Baruā's Būrañji, this name was given to this portion of Assam by the Āhoms to denote that it had been conquered, and consequently 'the people hated the name.' To avoid, therefore, wounding local susceptibilities I call this dialect simply Western Assamese.

The number of speakers of this dialect is as follows :—

Kamrup	515,900
Goalpara	27,600
	<hr/>
TOTAL	543,500

The principal points in which the following specimens show divergencies from standard Assamese are the following :—

The pronunciation of the vowels appears to approach more nearly to that of Bengali than does standard Assamese. Thus the vowel e is often pronounced like the a in 'hat.' Similarly the pronunciation of the vowel a seems, if we are to judge from the phonetic transcription, to be broader than in the standard dialect.

In nouns the words expressing relationship show slightly different terminations. Thus, instead of bāpek, his father, we find bāpāk. So also for the other persons, e.g., bāpei, your father, instead of bāper. The plural is formed by adding hāt or hēt instead of hāt. In sākārgilākak, to the servants, the Rājbangsī plural termination gilāk is used.

In verbs, note the forms āsāh, thou art, and forms like gei for gāi, having gone. The second verbal noun ends in ā, as in buzibā, to understand, instead of the standard buziba. In standard Assamese, the third person of the past tense of transitive verbs ends in e, but in the western dialect it also takes the Eastern Bengali termination āk. Thus kārilāk, he did, instead of kāriḷe. A sort of periphrastic conjunctive participle is formed by combining pāṣat, after, with the genitive of a verbal noun, as in kāri phelowār pāṣat, after having finished, i.e., having finished, equivalent to the standard kāri pelāi. The past tense of zā, go, is, as in Bengali, gel, not gāl. Similarly the pluperfect is geiṣil, not gāiṣil.

SUPPLEMENT.

MAYĀNG.

The State of Manipur is a very polyglot tract of country. The principal language is Meithei or Manipurī, but a number of other Tibeto-Burman dialects are also spoken. A tribe known as Mayāng speaks a mongrel form of Assamese known by the same name. The number of speakers is estimated at about 1,000. Except for their language the Mayāngs are indistinguishable from the general Manipurī population. All of them can speak Meithei. They are also known as Bishunpuriyā Manipurīs, or as Kālisā Manipurīs, and are said to be comparatively numerous among the Manipurī population of Cachar and Sylhet, where their special dialect is still spoken in their homes, as well as Meithei and Bengali. Probably $\frac{3}{4}$ of (22,500) the supposed speakers of Meithei in Sylhet really speak Mayāng. We may therefore put the total number of speakers of the dialect at 23,500.

There is a 'Meeyang' Vocabulary in Lieutenant-Colonel W. McCulloch's Account of the valley of Munnipore and of the hill tribes; with a comparative vocabulary of the Munnipore and other languages; published in the Selections from the Records of the Government of India (Foreign Department), No. 27, 1859.

I have said above that Mayāng is a mongrel form of Assamese. It can with equal (or perhaps more) justice be classed as a form of Eastern Bengali. The language possesses characteristics of both languages, but at the same time differs widely from both. I therefore place it in a supplement, while, for statistical purposes, I have shown it as a form of Assamese, merely because its speakers all live in territory under the political influence of the Assam Government. It will be seen that, both in vocabulary and grammar, it is strongly infected with the peculiarities of the Tibeto-Burman languages spoken in the Manipur State. This is just as much the case with the speakers of Mayāng who are settled in Sylhet, so that it may be taken as certain that they have come there from Manipur, although, according to tradition, they originally came into Manipur from an Aryan speaking locality.

I give four specimens of this curious language, two from Sylhet, and two from Manipur. Each pair consists of a version of the Parable of the Prodigal Son and a folktale. For the Sylhet specimens I am indebted to the kindness of Mr. A. Porteous, the Deputy Commissioner of that District. The Manipur ones have been prepared by Babu Bisharup Sing, under instructions from the Political Agent. In the Manipur State, the headquarters of Mayāng are two or three plains villages near Bishunpur (locally known as Lamāndong), 18 miles to the south-west of Imphāl.

Lists of words and sentences were also obtained from both localities, and the one given after the specimens is based on both. The following account of the grammatical peculiarities of Mayāng is based on all the materials available.

TIBETO-BURMAN INFLUENCE.—Mayāng is largely influenced by the Tibeto-Burman languages of the State of Manipur, both in its vocabulary and in its grammar. It would be a waste of time and paper to go into this question with any degree of Bengali.

minuteness, but the following results of a cursory examination (which has no pretence at completeness) of the first specimen received from Sylhet may be of interest :—

A. Vocabulary.—

- isāyā*, singing = Meithei isai, a song.
khom koriyā, collecting, cf. Meithei khom-sil-bā, to collect.
khum, answer = Meithei khum-bā.
kōl, embrace = Meithei kol-bā.
lempā-āmpā, cf. Meithei lēm-na pā-na, enough and to spare.
lichot, conduct, cf. Meithei ma-chot, conduct.
lōpuk, field = Meithei laubuk, Chiru loi-pūk.
mai-thōng-khān ōlothōk, turning before face, cf. Meithei mai onthok-pā, face away turn, to turn from.
māng-ōil-ottō, on being lost, cf. Meithei mang-bā, to lose.
mā-tik = Meithei ma-tik, fit.
merāk-e, among = Meithei ma-rak-tā, among.
miyām, many = Meithei ma-yām, flock.
mung-e = Meithei mang-dā, in front of.
ning, thought = Meithei ning-bā, the mind, to wish.
nungeiyā, being happy, cf. Meithei nungāi-bā, to be happy.
nung-si, pity = Meithei nung-si-bā, to pity.
pāng, friend = Meithei pāng.
phām, place, = Meithei ma-phām, place.
rāng, to = Anāl, Lamgang, Chiru, Aimol, Hallām, etc., rang, for.
rup, friend = Meithei ma-rup, companion.
sāruk, share = Meithei sa-ruk.
sau, son, young = Meithei chā.
sau-ōiyā, being angry, cf. Meithei sau-bā, to be angry.
sing = Meithei sing-bā, to become wise.
tāng-ōil, became dear, cf. Meithei tāng-bā, to become dear.
tetnāyā, always = cf. Meithei a-tat-pā, always.
them, persuasion = Meithei them-bā, to persuade.
thung-ōil, he arrived, cf. Meithei thung-bā, to arrive.
til-ōilā, they (he) joined, cf. Meithei til-bā, to join.
yāthong, a command = Meithei yā-thang, a command.

B. Grammar.—Note that the word for ‘bad’ is ‘good-not’ hobā-nāyā, as in all Kuki-Chin languages. The use of the Demonstrative pronoun after the noun which it qualifies is also typical of Kuki. The suffix of the Dative rāng is also a Kuki idiom. One of the forms of the future, that in ng, is taken from Thādo Kuki.

PRONUNCIATION.—This closely represents that of the Bengali of eastern Sylhet and Cachar. There is the dental s represented by ch in the Bengali character. The letter j is pronounced as j, not as z. The distinction between cerebral and dental letters has vanished, and there is the same difficulty in pronouncing the letter h. Thus, a house is gor, not ghor; wealth is don, not dhon; a share is bāg, not bhag; a hand is āt, not hāt; and he became is ōilō, not hōilō. On the other hand, s is pronounced as h, thus hune, having heard, for sune.

The vowel e usually appears as ā, as in āgō, for egō, one. The diphthong āi or ai, is pronounced something like ei, and is indifferently written āi, ai, and ei. Thus, jaitai, jāitai, or jeitai, they will go; petheilō, for the Bengali pāṭhāila, he sent; yaimopā, or yeimopā, middle.

Pronounce o as in 'hot'; ō as in 'home.'

NOUNS.—Article.—The Indefinite article is āgō, one which follows the noun it qualifies. Thus, mānu āgō, a man. It sometimes combines with the noun as in gorāgot, for gorā āgot, on a horse. The Demonstrative pronoun, augō, autā, or aukhonā, or some other of its forms, is used for the Definite article. Thus, bāyōk khulā augoi, the younger brother; rājā ōgoi, the king; pūtōk ōgō, the son; sāruk autā, the share; tār phām ōkhonāt, to the place of him, to his place. As in the case of the Indefinite article, it follows the noun it qualifies. When a noun with an article is declined, the declensional suffixes are added to the article, not to the noun, as in mānu āgōr, of a man, and ōkhonāt just given.

Pleonastic suffixes.—The suffixes gō and khān, khonā, or khnā, are very frequently added to a noun or pronoun without affecting the sense.

Gender.—This, when necessary, is indicated by the addition of words signifying sex. The most common seem to be lābā for males and āmōm and jelā for females. Thus gorā lābā, a horse; gorā āmōm or gorā jelā, a mare. There are also traces of the expression of gender by alteration of the terminations of words, as in gorōni, a mare; yaimopā pūtōk, middle son; yeimopi mālōk, middle wife. Compare the suffixes lābā and pā, male, and among and pi, female, in Meithei.

Nouns of Relationship.—These optionally take the termination ōk, no doubt the same as the Assamese ek, meaning 'his,' although, as is common in similar cases, the signification has been lost. Thus, bāpōk, a father, originally 'his father'. So pūtōk, son; mālōk, wife.

Number.—The plural is indicated by adding some word meaning 'all' or 'many', such as hābi, all; lōkei, people; and others. The plural is only indicated when the number is not evident from the context. Lōkei itself is said to be a plural of lōk, as jelei is of jelā.

Case.—The Nominative takes the termination e before transitive verbs, as in Assamese and Bengali. Thus, bāpōke dillō, the father gave. When this e is added to the pleonastic suffix gō, the two become goi.

The Accusative usually takes no termination. Sometimes it takes the termination re, which, after a consonant, becomes ore, for the sake of euphony. Thus, pūtōkore kilailu, I struck the son; tempākore gure, having covered the clod; tā-re, him. When the emphatic suffix au is added, the e of re is elided, as in āgō-r-au, (not having seen) even one (thief). In one case l, the termination of the instrumental is used for the accusative, viz., gorāl ukhānāt thailā, (they) put the horses there.

The termination of the Instrumental is ol as in tāruil-khān-ol, with a sword. After a vowel it becomes lō, as in autā-lō, by that.

For the Dative, the termination re is used, as for the accusative. Thus, bāpōk-ore, to a father, huor-ore, to the swine. More usual is the use of the old Kuki suffix rāng, which, after a consonant, becomes euphonicallly orāng. Thus, bābā-rāng or bāpōk-orāng, to a father. Okā or kā added to the genitive means 'for', as in kitārokā or kitārkā, for what, why? tārokā, for him.

The termination of the Ablative is tō, which, in the specimens is always added to the dative. Thus, bāpōk-orāng-tō, from a father. To signify 'from in', it is added to the locative, as in bārit-tō, from in the house. So mōrone-tō or mōronot-tō, from in dying, i.e., after dying, and other similar idioms with verbal nouns.

The termination of the Genitive is r, or, after a consonant, or, as in bābār or bāpōkor, of a father. The Kuki-Chin termination tā is also used, as in bābā-tā, of a father.

The termination of the Locative is e or t, the latter becoming ot after a consonant. Thus, gore in the house; aukhonāt, in that; mōronot, on dying.

ADJECTIVES.—These precede the nouns they qualify, as in durai des, a far country. But adjectival pronouns, as we shall see subsequently, and numerals, follow them. Thus, Mānu āgōr muni jiput dugō āsilā, of one man there were two sons. When the emphatic particle au is added to āgō, one, the two become āgau, one only, even one.

The Comparative degree is formed with jinge, more, the noun with which comparison is made being put in the ablative. Thus, bonōk-rāng-tō jinge us, taller than the sister. So, for the Superlative, hābi-rāng-tō jinge us, taller than all, tallest.

PRONOUNS.—The following are the Personal Pronouns:—

	First Person.	Second Person.	Third Person.
Sing. Nom.	mī	tī	tā.
Gen.	mōr	tōr	tār.
Obl.	mō-	tō-	tā-
Plur. Nom.	āmi	tumi	tānō.
Gen.	āmār	tōmār or tumār	tānōr.
Obl.	āmā-	tōmā- or tumā-	tānō-

In the first and second persons, the plural is used honorifically for the singular. In all, the usual case suffixes are added to the oblique form. Thus, mō-re, me; tā-rāng, to him.

The Demonstrative Pronouns are e, this, and au, ō, or u, that. To these, the pleonastic suffixes, gō, khān, or tā are almost always added. With the termination e of the nominative, gō becomes goi. It is sometimes written gu. Khān is often written khonā or khnā. Thus, aukhonāt, or aukhnāt, on that, thereon. When these pronouns are used as adjectives, they invariably follow the nouns to which they refer. Thus, gorā egōr, of this horse; phām aukhonāt, in that place; chus autā-lō, by those husks.

The Relative Pronoun does not seem to be used. The Tibeto-Burman idiom of employing a participle is used instead. Thus, tōr pūtōk-ote (te here means 'but') notir tullō lōg ōiyā, thy son who associated with harlots, literally 'having associated'.

The Interrogative Pronouns are kung (to which gō may be added, as usual), who? and kitā, what? Kār is whose? and kā-rāng-tō, from whom? Kitai is 'anything', and kuangau or kung-gō āgō is 'anyone'. Isu is 'so many'.

Verbs.—Throughout the conjugation, the plural is freely used for the singular. As in the case of nouns, pleonastic suffixes are freely added, without affecting the meaning. These are, in the case of verbs, tā and gā. Tā occurs in the specimens most commonly in interrogative sentences, but not always so. Thus (interrogative sentence) kitārokā gujurtārā-tā? why are you making a noise? (direct sentence) mī ning karauri-tā, I am making consideration. Gā is very common, and is used with all tenses, but most frequently with the past. It is most usual with intransitive verbs, but is also used with transitive ones, as in bellō-gā, he wasted (thy property).

The Verb Substantive is conjugated as follows.

The base is usually os, shortened from the Eastern Bengali ās, but the latter is also common. Hence, throughout the conjugation, ā may be substituted for the first o.

Present.

Singular.	Plural.
1. osu	osi.
2. osōt	osō.
3. ose	osi.

Past.

1. osilu	osilāng.
2. osile	osilai.
3. osil	osilā.

The Future is ōituo or ōitar, I shall be, from the root (h)ō, to become, and is conjugated regularly.

The Infinitive is onā, to be.

Ōil, he became, is frequent in verbs compounded from Tibeto-Burman roots, as in tāng-ōil, became dear.

The following paradigms illustrate the most common forms of the Finite Verb.

Present.—This closely agrees, in some of its forms, with the Bengali of Eastern Sylhet and Cachar. For the sake of comparison, I give the two dialects in parallel columns.

Mayāng.	Sylhettia.
Sing. 1. kilauri , I beat.	jāitrām , I go.
2. kilār	jāitrāy.
3. kilār	jāitrā.
Plur. 1. kilayār or kiliyār	jāiyār.
2. kilai	jāitrāy.
3. kilaitarā or kilaitrā	jāitrā.

As other examples, we may quote koriyār, we make; kortārā (with long ā in the penultimate), they make; paitrā, they get. Usually, however, in the specimens the pleonastic suffixes gā or tā, or even both, are added. Thus, we find in the specimen forms such as the following:—

Singular.	Plural.
1. jauri-gā or jaori-gā , I go	jaiyār-gā.
2. jaur-gā or jār-gā	jāri-gā or jaori-gā-tā.
3. jār-gā	jāri-gā.

The forms above given for the second and third persons plural are probably really singular. Another example of these suffixes is koror-tā, you are doing.

There is one example of the ordinary Periphrastic Present of Bengali. It is khowāsot, thou art giving to eat. The Bengali Present Participle, jāite, appears in the second specimen from Sylhet, with the pleonastic suffix gā, in the sense of a Present Definite. Viz., jāite-gā, is going.

Past.—In this tense, the third person singular differs in transitive and intransitive verbs, the latter dropping the termination. The conjugation follows generally the Bengali-Assamese system.

Singular.	Plural.
1. kilailu , I struck.	kilailāng .
2. kilaile	kilailai .
3. kilailō	kilailā .

In one place I have met kililu for 'I struck.' Other examples of this transitive conjugation are kōilu, I did; peilāng-gā, we (for I) got, which is written in another place peilāng-tā; dillō, he gave; hullō (for hunilō), he heard; kōilō, he did; bellō-gā, he wasted; mātlō, he said.

As already said, intransitive verbs drop the termination of the third singular. Thus, gesil-gā, he went; āil or eil-tā, he came; but eilā-tā, they came. It is probable that the feminine of the third person singular of the past tense of intransitive verbs ends in i, at least we have homeili-gā, she entered.

As examples of a Perfect tense, or, at least, a tense built on the same principle as the Bengali perfect, we have nungeiosi, they rejoiced, and korisi, I did.

There are two forms of the Future. One is an Aryan, and the other is a non-Aryan one. The Aryan Future is as follows:—

Singular.	Plural.
1. kilaituo or kilaitau , I shall strike.	kilaitāngai .
2. kilaituo	kilaitarai or kilaitrai .
3. kilaitoi	kilaitai .

In one instance, we have mōrotu, I will die. Other examples of this tense are mōrtai, he will die (plural for singular); jeitai, she will go; nā homaitau, I will not enter; korotāngai, we will make; māttau-gā, I will say.

The non-Aryan Future is formed by suffixing the Thādo Kuki future termination ng. Thus, māting-gā, I will say; jātāng, I will press; bujing, I will fill. It does not change for number or person.

The Imperative is the root alone, with or without gā suffixed. Thus, kilā, strike; jā-gā, go; rāk-gā, tend. Sometimes the future is used, as in dhorotrai, catch.

There are many participial or gerundial formations. The Bengali Conjunctive Participle in iyā, usually written e, is common. Thus, koriyā, having done; bāge, having divided. A very common idiom for expressing the Conjunctive Participle is to give the past tense followed by the locative of the demonstrative pronoun. Thus, hin peilō aukhonāt, after getting poverty, literally, he got poverty, on that (he went and joined a man of that country).

A kind of Adverbial Participle is formed by adding the Bengali locative termination te, to the Bengali adverbial participle in le. Thus, ōilete, on becoming. Another similar meaning is given by adding lārō to the root, as in tumailārō, on spending (his wealth a famine arose); eilārō, on his coming (you gave a feast).

A similar idiom is also formed by adding the ablative termination tō to the locative of the verbal noun or participle. Thus, mōronot-tō, or mōrone-tō, after dying; māng-ōilot-tō, on being destroyed.

The Infinitive ends in nā, as in denā, to give. The Infinitive of Purpose is formed by kā to the genitive of the simple infinitive. Thus, isānārokā, to rejoice; denārokā, for giving.

Another form of the Infinitive ends in āni, as korāni, to make, in jingtā korāni hobā, good to make alive. It has an Infinitive of Purpose in okā also made from it, as in rākhānirokā, for keeping.

Negative.—An adjective is negated by suffixing nāyā, as in hobā, good, hobā-nāyā, bad; naorāpāni-nāyā, not ill, in good health.

Some verbs are compounded with the negative participle. Thus, nāilu, I am not; nāil, is not; noi, nei, is not; nātlā, they gave not; nākōilō, he did not, he refused; nāsu, I am not, in hiklōk-nāsu, I did not disobey.

FREE TRANSLATION OF THE FOREGOING.

Once upon a time there reigned a king who had three sons. His subjects one day came to him and said, 'O Incarnation of Justice, the kingdom is infested with thieves and robbers. Our property is not safe. We pray Your Majesty to catch these thieves and punish them.' The king said to his sons, 'My sons, I am old, but you are all in the prime of manhood. How is it that my kingdom is full of thieves? I look to you to catch these thieves.' The three princes then made up their minds to patrol the city every night. With this view, they set up a fort in the outskirts of the city where they kept their horses. In the early part of the night the eldest prince mounted his horse and went through the whole city, but did not see a single thief. He came back to his station. About midnight, the second prince mounted his horse and rode through every part of the city, but he did not see a single thief, and so came back to the station. Some hours after midnight the youngest prince went the rounds, and when he came near the gate of his father's palace, he saw a beautiful woman coming out of it. The prince accosted her, and asked her who she was and where she was going at that time of night. She replied, 'I am the king's Good Luck, the guardian deity of the palace. This night the king will be killed, and hence I am no longer needed here, and am going away.' The prince did not know what reply to make to this message, but after a moment's reflection he said to the Goddess, 'suppose the king is not killed to-night, have you any objection to returning to the palace and staying there?' 'I have no objection,' replied the Goddess. The prince then begged the Goddess to go in again, and promised to do his best to prevent the king from being killed. She did so, and as she entered disappeared from his view.

The prince went straight into the bedroom of his royal father, and found him lying there, plunged in deep sleep. His second and youngest wife, the step-mother of our prince, was sleeping on another bed in the room, and a lamp was burning dimly. What was the prince's astonishment when he suddenly saw a huge cobra gliding round and round the royal bed of gold on which his father was sleeping. He drew his sword, and with one stroke cut the serpent in two. He thus saved his father from the threatened death.

FOLK TALE TAKEN FROM THE LIPS OF A NINGTHOWKHONG VILLAGER IN MANIPUR.

Formerly a certain man cut up earth with a spade close to a cluster of bamboos. One day it so happened that a piece of the dry bark of one of the bamboos fell on one of the clods. The piece of bark made friendship with the clod, and they made an agreement to help each other in time of danger. Accordingly when rain fell the piece of bark covered the clod and kept it from being wet and destroyed, and in case of storm the latter used to lie upon the former and keep it from being carried off by the wind. Thus they passed some days. But one day, both rain and wind came at the same time. The storm carried away the piece of bark, which could only shout, ‘My friend clod, what will become of you without me:’ and the clod, being unprotected, was also destroyed by the heavy fall of rain, while it called its friend, ‘My friend bamboo-bark, what will be your fate without me.’
